Mr. Waddeil (interrupting) said that was not a parliamentary request.

The Speaker said he had not heard the gentleman sufficiently to know whether it was a question of order or not.

Mr. Waddell (sarcastically): I was not aware before that the Speaker was deaf.

Mr. Cannon, of Illinois, rose to what he said was a question of privilege and proceeded to argue against the authority of the Senate to put amendments on the post route bill.

Senate to put amendments on the post route bill.

Mr. Waddell, Mr. Mills and others objected that it was not in order for Mr. Cannon to discuss this question under a motion to suspend the rules.

The Speaker said Mr. Cannon had risen to a question of privilege and he would hear him.

After some discussion Mr. Cannon offered a resolution that the bill be returned to the Senate with the announcement that the House only had the right to originate revenue bills, and that the Senate had no constitutional right to put on these amendments.

Mr. Banks thought it would be improper to

THE CANAL BANK SETTLEMENT.

Editor Democrat—I omitted to state one of the strongest points against the Canal Bank tax settlement, and it is too important to omit.

In levying the sum total of taxes on the people, the law divides the same into certain proportions and appropriates these proportions to specific purposes, and one proportion cannot be used for any other than its legiti-cannot be used for any other than its legitimate purpose.

In thus dividing the sum total a certain portion is set apart to pay the interest on the funded debt, and, as I understand, it is made a felony to divert any part of this fund for the payment of interest.

If the whole Canal Bank tax of $20,300 is paid in warrants, then is every specific propose for which the tax is levied deprived of its proportion; among others, that of the interest on the public debt.

With matters in this condition, it is hard to see how the Auditor and Treasurer are going to balance the books of their respective offices. A most experienced and expert bookkeeper tells me the strain will be too great, and that something is bound to break when the tension is applied.

New Obleans, June 14, 1878.

New Ohleans, June 14, 1878.

Editor Democrat—In yesterday morning's issue of your journal is published an extract from a St. Landry paper, crit cising the constitutional amendments which are to be voted on at the next general election, on the ground that one of the amendments abolishes the Supreme Court of the State, substituting nothing in its stead, thus practically leaving the State without a Supreme Court. This criticism—which was originally, it is believed, advanced by the Ouachita Telegram—is based upon a grave error as to what the amendments propose, the error being the impression that one of the amendments propose, the error being the impression that one of the amendments abrogates article 75 of the present constitution, which is not the case. The bare reading of the proposed amendments, as found in the acts of 1878, page 120, will make it obvious that the writers of the criticisms referred to were laboring under a mistake of fact in taking it for granted that the amendments proposed to strike out article 75, when such is not the case. Of course the criticism thus founded on an error of fact is entirely illusory. By giving this note a place in your valuable paper you will correct any opinion which may have been unadvisedly created by the mentioned criticisms. NEW ORLEANS, June 14, 1878.

plaintiff, and J. Ad. Rozier and Valle J. Rozier. E. 9. Benton, president of the Loan and Pledge Association, filed before Judge Rogers a petition asking for a writ of mandamus against auditor Jumel to compel him to issue four warrants of $1000.

The petition sets forth that Benton was the owner of four warrants as transferse of F.C. Mahan, to whom they were issued in 1811. They were placed in the safe of the Loan and Pledge Association, and there remained until the circlets of that corporation was satized by the civil sheriff under a writ of florify factors insued by Judge Hawkins, of the late Superior District Court, in 1874. By some means they were destroyed, and Benton now asks that duplicate warrants be issued to him. Judge Rogers granted a writ and fixed the rule nist for the twenty-fourth Instant.

The rinderpest is rapidly carrying off the comparatively few head of cattle in Turkey which have escaped the ravages of war. A few weeks ago the disease was confined to the European provinces of the empire; but lately the characteristics of the comparative of European provinces of the empire, but save, it has shown itself and is rapidly spreading through Asiatic Turkey. Thousands of attie are dying every week in the vilayets of Smyrna and Hudavendighiar, and unless the government promptly adopt and put in force ernment promptly adopt and put in fore measures to prevent the further spread of the contagion, one of the richest sources of the wealth of Turkey will be destroyed. Already meat is becoming scarce in the capital.

New Britain township, Bucks county, Pa, contains an eccentric old farmer by the name of Elias Black, who believes in keeping every thing on his place. He has not sold any hay for years. He never thrashes more grain than he can use, and the rest is allowed to stand in the stacks for mice and vermin to feed on. One field of about four acres is literally covered with stacks, some of them fully fifteen years old. Over 200 stacks may be counted on the place. It is the most novel sight ever witnessed on a farm to see hundreds of stacks all closely huddled together, reminding one of the pictures of an Indian lodge or an African Kraal.
