NEW ORLEANS, AUGUST 19, 1878.
FOR STATE TREASURER,
E. A. BURKE,
OF ORLEANS.

Of R. K. Scott, the carpet-bag Governor of South Carolina, for whom Gov. Hampton has just issued a requisition on a charge of robbing the State of about $100,000, the Chicago Times naively says:
He is a modest man, and will not relish the efforts of the South Carolina authorities to bring him again prominently before the people.

Cincinnati enjoyed its seventh or eighth election the other day on the proposition to give $5,000,000 to finish the Cincinnati Southern Railroad. Just May this question was voted on, and to the surprise of many the railroad was beaten and the money refused. The mayor, however, managed to get around this defeat in some manner, and last Wednesday, in accordance with his proclamation, another election was held whereat the railroad was successful by a large majority. The Southern Railroad manages to furnish Cincinnati with a large supply of politics and enables that city to have at least three or four elections yearly.

The Republicans are crowing a little too early over the North Carolina Senatorship. Merrimon, the present Senator, and Vance, the present Governor, had a very earnest fight in the various Democratic primaries and conventions that nominated candidates for the Legislature. The result of the election is, that Vance will have seventy-three Democratic votes for the Senatorship and Merrimon thirty-nine, while the Republicans have fifty-eight votes. The Republicans are very jubilant over this showing, and boast loudly that they hold the balance of power in their hands and can send any man they wish to the Senate. The absurdity of this boast is evident. The Democrats will go into caucus on the nomination for Senator, nominate their man and elect him.

Lieut. Maxwell has come to grief. He began his career as a detective and striker for the Republican party. He is the man who conceived the idea of a plot to assassinate Hayes, and succeeded in arousing the apprehensions of his fraudulency to such a pitch that he hired Maxwell as a body guard. Maxwell accompanied him to Washington, marched by the side of his carriage on inauguration day, and knocked down a paralytic beggar that couldn't get out of the way, and whom he persuaded Hayes was the chief conspirator. In consideration of these services, Hayes appointed Maxwell a second lieutenant in the regular army. His appointment was once rejected by the Senate, sent in a second time, over McQuary's protest, and confirmed, and Maxwell was presented with his epaulettes. He immediately proceeded to sell duplicate vouchers of his pay several months in advance, so that he realized about $2000. Charges were preferred, he was court-martialed and sentenced to two years' imprisonment; and, strange as it may appear, Hayes has confirmed the sentence—doubtless on the ground that civil service methods do not apply to the military service.

The Chinese embassy is causing some political trouble in New York. The predicament is this: The merchants of New York have no sympathy with the California anti-Chinese movement; they are very anxious to cultivate friendly relations with China, so as to secure the trade of that country, which is very important and very lucrative; they are anxious, therefore, to demonstrate their friendly feeling for the Celestial empire by a grand reception, such as was accorded to the Japanese embassy some years since. On the other hand, the workmen, who have taken sides with Kearney, and who fear that Chinese cheap labor may interfere some day with white labor in New York, are bitterly opposed to any public reception or testimonial to the "heathen," and threaten everybody who shows any courtesies to the embassy with political death.

Mayor Ely, of New York, being a timid man, is unable to decide whether he should follow the wishes of the merchants or the mob, and still hesitates. In the meanwhile the embassy is moving rapidly toward New York.

There was an immense crowd of people at the lake yesterday evening, a much larger crowd than for many Sundays past. The beer and soda water booths there seemed to be doing a fine business, and everybody was apparently heartily enjoying themselves. Picnics also were numerous at various suburban retreats, all well attended, gay and pleasant. Indeed, last night, the temperature being quite warm indoors, and cool outside, persuaded most of our people to take a "trip" somewhere in town and to enjoy themselves at some intermarial watering place. The result was crowds everywhere at the lake and on the streets to a very late hour.

It is true that the fever was pretty generally disowned, but beyond this there was nothing to show that it was prevailing here. Indeed, had a visitor just alighted in our streets, he would have pronounced our city unusually gay and pleasant, and refused emphatically to believe any story told him of the yellow fever being here.

It is gratifying to see that our people are not to be panic stricken by this visitation. There are but very few persons in the city alarmed or terrified, scarcely any in danger of getting the fever from fright, one of the most frequent causes of this disease. We may have the fever; we will certainly have no panic. It is scarcely to be doubted, also, that this firmness, fortitude and preparation of our people will do much to mitigate the disease and finally crush it out altogether.

The relatives and friends of Mr. Augustus G. Bartlett, all people of "enough" at Boston, are very much shocked at the appearance among them of Mrs. Mattie Bartlett, who is described as having a complexion as "black as the ace of spades." She produces a marriage license and certificate in due form in proof of the fact that the aristocratic name of Bartlett was duly and formally conferred upon her by the aforesaid Augustus. We should not think Boston "enough" would object to this, as it is putting into practical use the one of the pet theories, long ago advanced by one of those extraordinary females peculiar to that region, was that the importation of negroes was a divine dispensation whereby the richer strain of the negro blood was to be infused into the thin, blue blood of New England, to the great improvement of the latter. According to this female the New Englander had degenerated. He had none but venous blood in his anatomy. The African was to supply the arterial circulation to fill out the thin, blue lips and round the angular, emaciated limbs, and restore a decayed race whose physique had succumbed to extraordinary, nervous, cerebral and psychical development.

The result was to be a marvelous race, in which the Puritan was to supply the same meat that was to abide in the sans corpore furnished by the African. Why should not the experiment be made by Mr. Augustus Bartlett, or why should Boston be shocked thereat?

When the plague was raging in London, in the seventeenth century, a trunk full of infected clothing, reached the village of Eym, many miles distant from the metropolis, and a dozen cases of plague manifested themselves there at once. Instead of fleeing in panic from the place, the people of Eym resolved to remain in their village; fearing, however, that they would communicate the disease to their neighbors, they resolved to isolate and quarantine the village from all communication with the outside world. A message was accordingly sent to the neighboring villages, warning their inhabitants not to come to Eym, and requesting them to deposit each day at a neighboring spring enough food for the people of Eym. For months the infected village was cut off from the rest of the world; the plague raged within its limits, but, thanks to the heroism of the people of Eym, the neighboring towns escaped altogether this terrible visitation.

Port Gibson has resorted to measures somewhat similar to those tried at Eym. Yellow fever being reported in that town, it has at once taken steps to prevent its spread, not only in the town but into the neighboring country. The board of health not only prohibits all persons from going from Port Gibson to the surrounding country, save physicians and clergymen in attendance on the sick, but forbids all persons in the country from coming nearer town than the quarantine stations. Thus the country people are kept out of town and the town people out of the country, and the spread of the fever to a great extent prevented.

TO THE PUBLIC.
DEPARTMENT OF IMPROVEMENTS.
Room No. 15, City Hall,
New Orleans, July 27, 1878.
As it becomes necessary for the preservation of the health of the city at this season of the year, that every possible effort should be made towards keeping the public avenues, gutters and alleys clean and free from all offensive matter, I hereby respectfully call upon the public to assist the authorities by complying with the following requests, to wit:
1. Such residents as have yard hydrants are requested to permit some to run a sufficient time to wash away rubbish, filth, etc., and to render the street gutters fresh and clean. This step becomes necessary as many of the cross streets, or streets parallel with the river, are without water plugs, and the difficulty heretofore experienced in flushing these gutters has mainly been due to defective drainage and the want of water.
2. Residents will please place, or instruct their servants to place, the garbage in boxes in front of their dwellings before 8 o'clock a. m., prior to the city carts making their rounds. A strict adherence to this plan will remove, in a great measure, the cause of the great number of complaints concerning the non-removal of garbage.
I therefore earnestly request all good citizens to aid the authorities in keeping the streets and gutters clean and healthy, and in assisting to remove any waste or offensive scattering promptly.
If a proper spirit is manifested by the public in this respect the workings of this department will be greatly facilitated, and much of the cause for complaint heretofore existing materially obviated.
JOHN McCAFFREY, Administrator.
