

"BADGER" GIRL'S FORMER HUSBAND IS MARRIED AGAIN

C.W. Wildrick Divorced Florence Burns, Who Was Accused of Brooks Murder.

Charles White Wildrick, former husband of Florence Burns, who is divorced last July, has married Miss Caryl Bessel, daughter of Mrs. Mary L. C. Bessel. The wedding took place at Green Acres, Hartstade, N. Y., last Tuesday evening.

The bride, who is a musician, is descended from Peter Cornelius, composer, and her great-grandfather, Capt. Thomas Campbell, was of the same family as the Duke of Argyll and fought at Waterloo under Wellington. Wildrick's father was Lieut.-Col. Abram C. Wildrick.

The army officer's son married Florence Burns in 1907, after he had squandered a fortune, figured more or less in the newspapers and served a six months' term in a penitentiary for passing a worthless check.

Florence Burns is serving a term of seven years in Auburn Prison for having worked the badger game with a man named Brooks on a lawyer named Hurbut. She came into notoriety first when charged with the murder of Walter Brooks (no relation to the other Brooks) in the Glen Island Hotel on West street. She was freed for lack of evidence.

The testimony on which Wildrick obtained his divorce was supplied by Mrs. Celestine Gray, who ran the boarding house where Florence Burns Wildrick lived when she and Brooks were arrested for extorting money from and assaulting Hurbut.

In the winter of 1901 Wildrick brought to this city Miss Mabel Strong, daughter of a wealthy Cleveland merchant, and they lived at the Hotel Gerard. While there he passed a worthless check and was under arrest when Miss Strong died in St. Luke's Hospital of consumption.

The present Mrs. Wildrick has given several musicals in this city. She was ambitious to become a great singer. She conducts the Green Acres Tea Room at Hartstade, where she was married.
