Dear B.: I hate to bother you again, but I owe two months' rent on my spartment. I told Frank you'd make me a loan to help me out, so he has been keeping his money for himself. For beme time, now, he has been drawing ahead on his salary and going about in rags to keep me from the street and a roof over my head. You ought to help me. A fine man stopping at the Ansonia took a great liking to me. I suppose you think it's funny any one should like me, but it's so. He was there with his wife, and he wanted me to go abroad with him-as his wife's companion, he called it.

I was ready to go, but your note came telling me you were all alone, so I called off those arrangements. He was to have given me ili a week over all my expenses. I haven't a dollar, and I'm ashamed to tell my friends I've been left at the church again.
