The New-York Circus is becoming all the rage, and frequented by the fashionables of the city, as we should judge from last evening, for the house was literally througed with beauteous faces and bewitching eyes. A powerful Equestrian Company appear to-night, our braced in which are several New-York favorities, and Glenroy, in particular generally secures a portion of the audience of his age, to witters his astonishing horsemanship. The capabilities of the Manager, Mr. Welch, are, we are glad to see, fully appreciated.
