A HOUSE HISTORICAL.

BUILT BY A SLAVE TRADER, IT WAS ASSURED BEFORE HISTORIC SMOKE CIGARS.

The house was built for the slave trader, Robert C. Henry, who was a prominent figure in the community. The building was constructed in the late 18th century and is one of the few remaining structures from that period. The house is located in the heart of the city, and is a testament to the rich history of the area.

The house is a two-story structure, with a steeply pitched roof and a large, central chimney. The exterior is made of brick, and the windows are large and arched. The interior is decorated with fine woodworking, including a large, ornate fireplace.

The house was originally used as a residence, but has been converted into a museum in recent years. The museum is open to the public, and is a popular destination for tourists and historians alike.

The house is located at 125th Street and West, and is easily accessible by public transportation. The museum is open daily from 10am to 5pm, and admission is free to the public.
