HEART TO HEART TRINITY

A week ago I let go the helm of Trinity, went down into the country, cut off the telephone, played with the dogs, chummed with the horses, and, as the children's every romp asked in nature's language, "is the flicker worth the candle?" I tried to answer the question.

I thought that Trinity was able to look out for itself, and you have seen that it was. Yesterday I got back, and, in one of those mean Saturday half-holiday markets, with everything weak and dull, Trinity kicked her heels like a paddock-bar-down colt with tremendous activity-shout 20,000 shares in two hours, more than all other stocks combined-Trinity rose $2 a share and closed at the top, while all the others were dropping $2 to $3.

Why are the public so good to Trinity? Why were they so good to Butte, to Trimountain, to Copper Range? In the Butte campaign, after I had lifted the stock from 2 to 28. State and Wall streets will recall the day the bounds caught me sick abed and how, like jackals at the neck of a wounded buck, they closed in on Butte. That night Butte closed at the bottom, 14, and the press prophesied that it might open up next morning at 4. It did look a bit chilly, for I was borrowing sacks of money on Butte, and the banks and trust companies did not consider themselves my legal guardians. That night I sat up in bed and determined to make a hurry-up call to my following.

When a man has been years building up a followinga financial following-a following of over 400,000, with their names and addresses, the largest in all the world, barring the insurance companies, and that following at call and with-you-for-keeps, a hurry-up summons means something. It means so much that no man would sound it unless he was sure he heard the breakers dead ahead. All will recall how the public-my public-answered next morning. Butte did not need another hurry-up call and went to 130. It was the same in Trimountain on its way from 10 to 125, and in Copper Range while it travelled from 10 to 105. In each of my campaigns I had to issue but one hurry call, and then-

In Trinity I have yet to make my first call, to say nothing of my last, or hurry-up call, and yet some of my enemies. while I was down country, printed the story that I had given up my Trinity campaign for the time being, because the general market was so bad.

It is fair to ask the public, who have watched me struggle with many and many a campaign that often looked as if it might slip its harness and go back down the trail: "When did you ever know me to abandon a campaign until I got the army all into camp?" You have seen me get some bad lickings, and you have seen me make some raw mistakes, but you never saw me abandon a campaign until I had got the army into camp. Under any circumstances I could not quit until I had made at least one hurry-up call, and I will say here that any time I make my first hurry-up call in this Trinity campaign my following will respond with such rapidity that Trinity will shoot over the highest point I have named and stay there.

And why, I ask again, has the public been so good to Trinity and my other coppers? The Trinity, Butte and the Trimountain and Copper Range campaigns each answer: Because each campaign has been fair, square and profitable to the people; because each campaign has walked out into the open and shown itself for what it is, and that is all the public ever ask in any dollars and cents deal. What the public ask is: Give us the facts fairly and squarely, and, no matter what Wall and State street may think, we will take care of ourselves.

All history shows that the public never deserted a man who gave them a fair deal. It was because I banked on this that I brought Butte from 2 to 130, Trimountain from 10 to 125, and Copper Range from 10 to 105. It was because I banked on this that I brought Trinity from 11 to 40 and will carry it to 75 and then to 100 and over. Butte sells to-day at 113, Trimountain and Copper Range at 95, and all three are 8 per cent dividend payers; and moreover, out of my campaigns the public have taken over $50,000,000 in profits.

I can say to the holders of Trinity that I would not hesitate to go into the wilds of Africa and remain a twelvemonth without fear that the horse-sense of my following would not see to it that Trinity was selling at its worth upon my return, and that is all they want to sell at, and it is all I would have it sell at under any conditions; and, with copper, the metal, to-day at 25 cents Trinity is easily worth 75, and will be 100 and over.

In unqualifiedly advising, as an individual, and as President of the Trinity Company, to buy Trinity now, I say:

When any man buys another stockholder secures the profit. I do not secure any, because I have none for sale. All my selling was under 11, that those who bought would make the profit when they sold at 20, 30, 40, as some of them have, and at 50, 60, 70, 80 and 90, as some of them

I know this is an odd and never-before done way of doing the stock business, and in my advertisements this week I will show how it is possible for me to do it profitably, and why I do it.

Don't lose sight of my advice to buy only through a Stock Exchange house. Don't buy upon margin. Don't put a "STOP" order behind your stock, and when you feel like taking your profit do so, remembering one of the oldest adages of finance: "No man ever went to the poorhouse from taking profits." He who bought at 11 and got uneasy at 20 or 21 did not go wrong when he sold and took his 100 per cent. When he finds his uneasiness gone, and it is 33, he should not moan over the other 100 per cent. he lost, but should go in and make it up from 33 to 44. Of course, I believe, as in the case of Butte, Trimountain and Copper Range, the most sensible man is the one who, after he has bought, stays with it to a finish and takes all the

I desire to impress upon my following that I have waited long and patiently for perfect copper market conditions, so that when they arrived I could safely say that Trinity was worth 75, and would be worth 100 and over, that my following might safely buy and make enormous profits-and that I might come back to them later and ask them to follow me into another something, the success of which will be many, many times of greater import to the American people than all the "Coppers" born and to be born,

ON LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY

You cannot do better than read a copy of a little book recently published csiled. "Lincoln at Gettysburg," by Col. Clark E. Carr—the only surviving member of the original Commission in charge of the National Cemeral and the conty man now living who can write so instructively and entertainingly of Lincoln's great. Gettysburg speech, why it was great, and how it was greater than the wonderful cration delivered by Edward Everett the same day. A truly patriotic book for every lover of the martyred President, young or old.
