STATEN ISLAND STREETS.

Plan for Changes in Names Explained by Richmond Engineer.

To the Editor of The Tribune. Sir: In your issue of April 26, 1909, appears an item, headed "Oppose Change in Street Names," which states that there is much indignation among xpayers and residents of Staten Island over sed plan to abolish many of the present begin with, so far as the writer is aware, there is no indignation in the case; secondly, the writer has made no proposition to make any and, thirdly, the President of the Borough, and not the writer, has issued the suggestive map, list of proposed changes of names and a courteous note, all addressed to the public, asking for sliggestions.

In a community settled for as many years as the Borengh of Richmond, having had some forty or so detarfied hamlets or villages, a considerable du-plication of names was inevitable, even successive ortions of main thoroughfares having differen names as they pass through various portions of the island

A universal house numbering system has been adopted and put into effect throughout the borough, so that as the different separate communities grow together there will be no confusion in the number ing. It is very desirable, also, that the duplication of street names should cease, and the writer is very thoroughly and completely in harmony with the views of the President, that historical, old names and locality names should be retained, as far as possible, in the changes in street names, that will have to come within a few years.

Unquestionably there will be many differences of ns as to what names should be adopted. The present movement is simply to make suggestion and secure suggestions. LOUIS L. TRIBUS, Consulting Engineer of the Borough of Richm New Brighton, Staten Island, April 28, 1909.

The map and list of proposed changes accompanying the letter give the following: Columbia street. Brooks avenue, Clove Road, Clove avenue to be changed to Clove Road for the reason that "it is the only opening through the hills and the name seems appropriate."

Riker street, Centre street, Tompkins avenue, Rosebank avenue to Centre street, because it does not conflict with any other name.

Vanderbilt avenue Richmond Road from Vande bilt avenue to New Dorp, Amboy Road, Amboy Avenue to Vanderbilt avenue and Amboy Road, as Amboy Road is the present name for the greater part of this thoroughfare. It might be well to re-tain the name Vanderbilt avenue from Bay street to New Dorp, keeping the house numbers con

OBJECTS TO BLASTING OF STORM KING. To the Editor of The Tribune

No such vandalism should be tolerated or permitted. Come out, Mr. Tribune, with a good, strong call, and let us see what can be done to maintain New York, April 25, 1909. JULIUS F. GEROW.

"MERE WOMAN" AND THE CARS.

Spring-on-the-Hudson.

To the Editor of The Tribunc. Sir: The wisdom of "Mere Man" in discovering that the inability of women to get on and off the tramears properly is due to "corsets and tight " as described in your issue of April 11, rewho began searching in his great mind for al kinds of recordite reasons why his horse declined to move, after the reins were drawn and the whip lightly used with professorial judgment. A plain fellow passing suggested that if he really wished a drive the professor should unhitch the horse! Ever so, reasons are often so near the surface that the delving intellect of man burrows below them. The real reason of the phenomenon which seems to ex-cite the masculine mind so much is that most women are right handed that they prefer to put Remarkable Experience of Mr. Michael Corcoran.

Sir: There is no evil Republican party or ganization which demands reform by legislation. out the direct primaries bill implies the need There is no need. Some seem disposed to crawl and fawn upon temporary success. I will not go before the people with the snivel of Uriah Heep that we Republicans have "got religion" and at to no one. I told it to the stars, and they winked and blinked and twinthe stars, and they winded and bright moon at midnight, and it leared. I told it to the moon at midnight, and it leared. I told it to the sun at me, and it glared at me with eyeballs of fire I told it to the trees, and they nodded, nodded, nodded everlasting, exasperating assent to every word. I told it to the birds, and they twittered ed in all the dialects of birdland. I told it he waves, and they roared. I told it to the bricks and stones in the buildings of a great city, and they flung me back my words in hollow mockery.

"DOGGY," NOT "CATTY."

Some of the English papers think that the Bishop of London's remarks about the "catty" woman were somewhat behind the times. The grace and repose of the feline creature do not suggest the modern woman, and, as for claws, which the "catty" woman is supposed to unsheath to the accompani-ment of her gentlest purr, that kind of warfare is out of date. The suffragette does not purr while she digs her claws into a Cabinet Minister. She barks and bites without cover and without apology and might more suitably be called "doggy" than Ambassador von Bernstorff Describes Empire's Paternal System.

Columbus, Ohio, April 28.—Count Johann Heinrich von Bernstorff, German Ambassador to the United States, was the speaker to-night at the annual dinner of the Cincinnati Board of Trade, attended by Governor Harmon, J. H. Lettenbauer, German Consul at Cincinnati; Mayor Bond and eleven hundred business men of Columbus.

Count von Bernstorff spoke on social legislation in Germany, which, he said, was initiated by a message of Emperor William I in 1881, impressing upon the Reichstag the necessity of furthering the welfare of the working people. dustrial insurance feature of the German laws, he

The wages of the German workmen have of late been much spoken of in this country, but the fact has mostly escaped notice that the industrial insurance laws must be taken into account if we wish to pass a fair judgment upon the wages and standard of life of the German workman.

On the one hand, the employer is heavily taxed by these laws, a tax which must be added to the cost of production, and, on the other hand, thanks to the insurance laws, the employed enjoy benefits such as the workmen of other countries cannot count on.

The first of the three laws I intend speaking of requires insurance against sickness in the case of all persons who are regularly employed for wages and do not earn more than 2,000 marks yearly. There are six groups of insurance agencies—the local sick funds established by parishes for branches of trade within their limits: the industrial or factory sick funds, conducted in connection with the large undertakings; the building trades sick funds, which contractors of buildings are bound to establish; the guild sick funds, and the miners' sick funds. The regulations of these funds differ in many details from one another, but the general basis of insurance is the same.

The law provides for a minimum benefit, which consists of, free medical attendance and medicine from the beginning of the sickness, and in the event of incapacity for work, sick pay from the third day of the illness amounting to half the daily wages, on which the contributions have been based. The longest period for which sick pay is granted is twenty-six weeks, after which, should incapacity continue, the liability is transferred to the invalidity insurance fund, though medical assistance may continue for a year.

Where a person upon whom others depend for is attended in a hospital, half the sick pay he would otherwise have had a claim is

Ability to earn a livelihood or the prescribed age of qualification, namely, the completed seventieth year. There are inree contributions, equal payments by the employers and their insured work people and a subsidy by the empire of 50 marks toward every pension granted. The amount paid as pension differs according to the wage class and the duration of the contribution.

In 1906 the number of persons insured against sickness was 12,468,706, the number of persons insured against ocident 19,227,213, and the number insured against old age and invalidity, 14,142,700. FACTIONS IN BONWIT BROS. WARNED.

Justice Dayton, of the Supreme Court, in a decision yesterday said that if the warring factions in the corporation of Bonwit Brothers, manufacturers of women's skirts, do not get together before May 3 he will appoint a receiver to take care of the property and continue the business.

Bonwit Brothers are well known in the trade, and in the fall of 1997 got into financial difficulties. William H. Davidow said that if they would make a stock company of the business he would advance them enough money to carry them over their difficulties. This was done and Davidow advanced $5,000, and stock was issued. Lately there has been misunderstanding between Davidow and the Bonwits and they applied for the receiver.
