The Polish newspapers and the Polish Nationalist leaders attempted to organize a general boycott of the festivities in connection with the imperial visit as a mark of displeasure at the Prussian government's Germanization policy in the Polish provinces.

Appeals were made to the Poles not to attend the celebrations, not to decorate their houses and not to cheer their majesties. These, however, were only partly successful. The Polish aldermen of the city declined the invitations sent to them, but many of the Polish nobility have de cided to attend the banquets, while some of the Polish buildings were decorated with bunting and flags. Large crowds also turned out to witness the imperial

MOVING PICTURES HIS PLAN TO GET SOLDIERS

Major Croxton Urges Use of Films to Stop Decrease in Number of Recruits.

DROP DUE TO PROSPERITY

Mexican War Scare and Seven-Year Service Law, Officer Says, Have Had No Effect on Enlistment.

The serious decrease during the last few months in the number of recruits for the army, as reported yesterday in a Washington dispatch to The Tribune, was confirmed yesterday in an interview with Major Croxton, the officer in charge of the United States Army recruiting office in New York City. Major Croxton said the year showed a narked falling off in the average number of recruits for the same months during the last five years, though he added that the number for July and August would be probably as great as that of a year ago. This decrease he thought due to the prosperous condition of the country and not to the seven-year enlistment rule. Major Croxton declared he did not believe the Mexican war scare had affected enlistments, the slight increase during July and August being due, in his opinion to the use of moving pictures in the vari-ous New York recruiting offices. This use of moving pictures, he said, he hoped would be soon generally adopted by the War Department. "The whole trouble with our enlistments," said Major Croxton, "is the prosperity of the country. We are now much fore prosperous than we were a year ago and far more so than four years ago. During July my office recruited 259 men out of 1,350 applicants, while in 1909 we averaged 400 out of 3,000 applicants. Naturally the type of applicant is not so high as it was then, though we have retused to lower the bars in admitting teruits. The Mexican war scare has not pparently affected enlistments.

It is, however, I believe, an error to say that the army is greatly below the legal strength. If it is, it is only by a few thousand, and if it was not for prosperous times it would soon be at the limit. hold that even to-day if we had a regular system of showing moving pictures of army life to the public recruiting would take a jump. It has already proved most effective in New York, where I have recently introduced it on a limited scale, with the result that July and August have shown a marked increase in applications. I have urged the use of noving pictures upon the War Department, and I feel sure that once adopted they will cause a great increase in re ruiting. The seven years' service law has not, as far as I can see, affected enlistments, except in the case of parents refusing tire into the reserve after three years service, and this is readily explained to applicants, but parents often become frightened by the seven-year clause, and their permission as compared to 40 per cent in former years. The great difficulty with recruiting has lways been the ignorance of the public the moving pictures will enlighten.
