Graft Vanishing Since Municipal Dealings Were Put on Business Basis.

The Mitchel administration has been in office six months. Following its custom, The Tribune asked Mayor Mitchel for a review of the work of his administration from January first to date.

By JOHN PURROY MITCHEL.

You ask me for a review of the administration for these first six months now drawing to a close. What has been undertaken and what has been accomplished, I assume, is already well known to the readers of The Tribune and to the public generally.

Acknowledges Co-operation of Fellow Officials.

In the first place, I wish to express my very deep appreciation of the fine co-operation which has been given the Mayor since he took office by all the elective officials of the city.

Appreciates Attitude of Press.

FIND SCHANCK GIRL DEAD IN CREEK

Trenton's Six-Month Mystery Partly Solved When Body Identified by Bar Pin. (By Telegraph to The Tribune.) Trenton, N. J., June 28.—A six-months' mystery was partly cleared today when the body of Miss Grace Schanck was washed up on the rocks of the raceway running from Sanhikan Creek into the Delaware River.

(By Telegraph to The Tribune.) Trenton, N. J., June 28.—A six-months' mystery was partly cleared today when the body of Miss Grace Schanck was washed up on the rocks of the raceway running from Sanhikan Creek into the Delaware River.

From the few scraps of clothing and a gold bar pin, still fastened about the neck of the girl, it was recognized by Ralph Schanck as the body of his daughter. The clothing and the pin were worn by the girl when she disappeared in October last.

The disappearance of the Schanck girl was one of the most mysterious happenings that Trenton has ever had. October 23 last the girl started down town with her mother. They parted, the mother to do some shopping and the daughter to visit the home of an aunt. She never reached her aunt's house, and, as though the earth had opened up, the girl was gone, and there was no reason or clue as to her disappearance.

Some days later a silver mesh bag and a hat belonging to Miss Schanck were found in a field about a mile above Trenton, and along Sanhikan Creek. The finding of these things gave rise to all sorts of rumors. The river and the creek were dragged, and rumors were run down in many of the large cities of the country. Only a few days ago it was said that a mysterious girl in Newark was Grace Schanck.

The only reason that can be assigned for the disappearance of the girl is fog prevailing to-day. Wireless messages calling urgently for assistance were picked up by the wireless stations along the coast.

For years this has been a regular habit with them, and each has caused the arrest of the other many times.

Y., June 28.—For the third time within a week, the staunchness of the Wanamaker flying boat, America, has been sorely tried by the elements. At noon to-day a cloudburst, accompanied by a sixty-mile gale, broke over Lake Keuka and threatened to destroy the machine. So suddenly did the storm break that the America was lifted from her cradle and blown four feet into the air before willing hands dragged her back to earth. Glenn H. Curtiss, assisted by Ellwood Doherty, one of the most expert of the Curtiss flyers, directed the rescue brigade.

MET HIS END LATER BY BULLET WOUND

Crowd in Both Cases Tried to Make Assassins Pay Summarily for Crime. (By Cable to The Tribune.) Vienna, June 28.—The following details of the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife are now available. At 10 a. m. the archduke, with the duchess, left the military camp in an automobile for the Town Hall. The car halted for some minutes while a number of young girls in festive attire greeted the heir apparent and the duchess, who accepted some flowers from them and spoke a few kindly words.

ARCHDUKE WAS INDIGNANT.

After the bomb exploded the Archduke and the Duchess proceeded to the City Hall. The automobiles were fleet and the news had not yet filtered through the crowd in waiting. Indeed, there had hardly been time to telephone. So the burgomaster was astonished when he met his royal guests at the door to have his customary address of greeting interrupted by the snapping words of Francis Ferdinand:

MAGAZINE REVOLVER USED.

Just as the automobile slowed up on the turn into the Franz Josefstrasse the boy raised his arm from his side. The sunlight struck on the dull steel of the magazine revolver and soldiers leaped to grasp the youth, but before they reached him he had accomplished his deed. It was with extreme difficulty that he was rescued from the infuriated crowd.

HEIR APPARENT UNGUARDED.

There was no especial military preparation, however, as the heir to the throne had always been regarded as so popular that no particular precautions were necessary. In fact, the general feeling that he would without doubt in the near future succeed to the throne through the death of his uncle had clothed him with a sort of affection that seemed to protect him.

Wolley from Revolver Hits Archduke and Duchess of Hohenburg as They Are Driving Together in Automobile in Town of Sarajevo—New Heir, Charles Joseph, 27 Years Old. (By Cable to The Tribune.) Sarajevo, Bosnia, June 28.—The Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the dual monarchy of Austria-Hungary, and his morganatic wife, the Duchess of Hohenberg, were shot to death to-day in the main street of this, the Bosnian capital. Bullets from a magazine revolver in the hands of an eighteen-year-old youth killed the heir apparent and his wife, and thus completed the grim task a madman had unsuccessfully attempted only a few hours before by hurling a bomb at the royal automobile.

ASSASSINATION CAREFULLY PLANNED.

The assassination had been carefully planned. It was while the heir to the Austrian throne and the woman he had loved so well were on their way to the town hall that Nedeljko Gabrinovics, a journeyman printer, slung a smoking bomb at the royal automobile. It was while they were returning from the hall, perhaps an hour later, that Gavrio Prinzip, a high school student, stood at the corner of the Rudolfstrasse and poured his fusillade into the helpless couple. Again, an unexploded bomb was found a few yards away from the scene of death. It had been flung in a corner by another madman after he had learned of the success of Prinzip's attack.

The flying bullets struck Francis Ferdinand full in the face. One tore its way into the Duchess's body. Another pierced the great artery in her throat. As the blood gushed from her neck she fell senseless across her husband's knees. An instant later he, too, sank to the floor of the car in a heap. Both were rushed with all speed to the palace. But no help was of avail. They died a few moments after they arrived. ASSASSINATION CAREFULLY PLANNED. The assassination had been carefully planned. Another terrible chapter has thus been written into the tragic and romantic history of the House of Hapsburg, and to-night the aged Emperor lies prostrated by the news in his summer place at Ischl.
