Postponing Open Trading in Bonds an Unfortunate Step Backward.

With news of the expected opening of the Stock Exchange for trading in bonds postponed, yesterday's market decision for delay was most unwise.

Security prices here were firm, with some advances in short term notes. Business in bonds was rather quiet.

TRADING IN THE CURB SECURITIES

Quiet Business, with Price Changes Generally Slight—Oil Shares Steady.

Yesterday's trading in the curb securities was dull, and price changes were irregular and for the most part unimportant.

Resumption of Restricted Bond Trading on the Board Deferred.

For reasons which were not explained to the entire satisfaction of the rank and file of the financial district, the special Stock Exchange committee of five which has been conferring with bankers on a plan to open the exchange for trading in bonds at fixed minimum prices announced yesterday that the resumption, which was thought on Wednesday night would be resumed on Monday, had met with difficulties which would postpone the hoped-for reopening.
