

The Conning Tower

Conceding the Dream-Wish to T. Buchanan Read

"My soul today
Is far away,
Sailing the Vesuvius Bay,"
But life is sweet
And so my feet
Elect to stay on Nassau Street.

The nations are a touchy lot. So envisage this possibility. The war, say, will end in July—or a year from July. When it ends, assuming that the Allies win, Italy may say to Russia, or France or Great Britain: "Well, you didn't do much until we helped you, did you?" "But" one of those nations may retort, "Where would you have been if we hadn't checked the enemy at Anydberg?" And then one tinted book will lead to another, and there'll be another war.

Perhaps the best nutshell of the situation is Eze Zee's, who believes that the world is waiting to know whether the Atlantic is for boatin' or verboten.

WHEREIN THE BARD BECOMES PRO-GERMAN.

Gifted, energetic Gretchen,
Working in the kitchenette,
Neutral I, yet I admit
That your shortcake is a hit.

To the unknowing it appears that Germany is taking a long time to answer the Note, but the explanation is absurdly simple. The Kaiser is attempting to justify irregularities of warfare; in his attempt he is using a lot of irregular verbs, and, unless things have altered radically since our student days, he is having for himself somewhat of a difficulty.

THANKS FOR THE AD, HENRIK.

(From "The Master Builder.")

HELPA—I'll go out and look at that tower the first thing tomorrow morning.

On April 8 Prex Elliott of the New Haven road made a distinctly highbrow address, a copy of which has just, etc., to the members of the Eastern Development Committee. On the first page he quotes from one of Stedman's poems, on the 10th he quotes Whittier and on the 18th:

Phoebus advised his son Phaeton, before he allowed him to drive the chariot of the Sun, as follows:

"Vigile ferat uentos et cœlum et terra calores;
Nec preme, nec summum molire per aethera curram.
Altius egredere, coelestia tecta cremonas;
Inferius, terras; Medio tutissimus ibis."

which freely translated, is:

"And that the heavens may bear their proper amount of heat,

Do not sink too low, nor drive the chariot too high through the heavens;

By going too high you will set the heavenly mansions on fire, by sinking too low, the earth;

The middle way is the safest and best."

The New Haven is traveled by the nation's cultured citizens. Why not adopt as its motto: "Primo Securitas?"

Or, better, why doesn't the Southern Pacific adopt this trademark?

MOVIE MOTIFS

Charlie Chaplin.

This Chaplin was wondrously comic, they told me. For weeks they continued to pester and scold me. For sneering; I said that his antics were cheap. That his slap-stick endeavors would put me to sleep. "But he is so genial," they said, "and so sunny. There never was any one equally funny. He walks in the quaintest, most curious fashion. So you'll smile with delight or grin with compassion. And surely there's nothing so fatal to gloom. As a reel in which Charlie is made to consume some peas with a knife; and his quizzical face. And the way that he stumbles all over the place is simply immense; you will joyously roar. Till the usher relentlessly points to the door. Why scorn Charlie Chaplin? because he displays A species of art which wins popular praise?"

So I went the next evening to see who was he. Who seemed to provide such Dickensian pica. Whose stupid expressions roused millions of smiles. And lured hard-earned quarters in fabulous piles; I sat and I waited with tremulous pulsing. Convinced that I soon would be wildly convulsing. With uncontrolled giggles; and then on the screen Appeared, stumpled, ambled—you know what I mean—Our friend Charlie Chaplin; alas and alack. With a woe-gone gaze and his hand on his back; He ran and he fell; and the maniac laughter Resounded and rose to the farthest rafters.

He banged all his colleagues, and kicked them around. And stepped on their throats as they lay on the ground; He ran with his hat on the side of his head; And the populace roared till their faces were red. Thus then, he continued; and when he had ended. The girl that was with me said, "Isn't he splendid?" "O yes," I replied, with a sorrowful sigh. "The masses adore him, and now I know why: With his silly confusion and countenance glum Their ideal American Hero has come!"

IRWIN.

If anybody presses us for an inclusive entitlement for the Allicomers' War, we should offer "The World Series."

Rumania, having made a record in the bushes, is awaiting the call to the big league.

There is talk, we hear, of abolishing the 21-country limit.

EPISCOPALIANS OPEN LONG REVIVAL HERE

Services to Continue Until March Will Be Held at St. John the Divine.

New York City is to have a religious revival. According to plans recently completed by the Churchmen's Association, composed entirely of Episcopal clergymen, it will start at once and continue until next March.

The first step in the campaign was a prayer meeting and conference last Friday at the home of Bishop Greer on the grounds of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. Prayer meetings and conferences in preparation for the more active work of the revival during the summer will be held every Friday from now on.

The Rev. Melville K. Bailey, of the Holy Spirit Parish, in The Bronx, is president of the Churchmen's Association. Bishop Greer is honorary chairman of the directing committee. Others are Dean Grosvenor, of the Cathedral; the Rev. Dr. Stiles, of St. Thomas's Church; the Rev. Dr. G. A. Carstensen, of Riverside; the Rev. Charles P. Tinker, of the City Mission Society; the Rev. John A. Wade, of the Church of St. John the Evangelist; and the Rev. William T. Walsh, of St. Mary's, The Bronx.

During July and August a tent will be pitched on the Cathedral grounds, opposite St. Luke's Hospital, where evangelistic meetings will be held every afternoon and evening. Leading mission workers of the country will speak and a special choir is already in training. Organizations of laymen have also been called on to help in the summer campaign and have promised cooperation.

NEWS OF PLAYS AND PLAYERS

'Passing Show' Postponed Until Saturday—Castles Give Polish Benefit.

"The Passing Show of 1915," which was to have opened at the Winter Garden to-morrow night, will not make its debut until Saturday evening. The elaborate nature of the production made necessary two additional full dress rehearsals. There was last night the first full performance of the revue, and these performances will be repeated until Saturday. Irene West's Royal Hawaiian Sextet has been added to the bill.

Gravelle Barker's production of "Iphigenia in Tauris," the presentation of which Jupiter Pluvius had twice caused to be postponed, was finally given yesterday afternoon in the open amphitheatre in the woods near the Piping Rock Club. The audience was a beautiful one and an audience of nearly 1,000 persons attended, most of them coming from New York and the various summer colonies on Long Island. The cast was the same as that of the performance at Yale, with Miss Lillah McCarthy in the title role and Ian MacLaren as Orestes. The receipts from the performance went to the Country Home for Convalescent Babies.

Under ordinary circumstances there would seem to be but slight connection between Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle and the fair land of Poland. In fact, when Poland was fair there probably was not, but now that war has furrowed and blackened it, with the heartiest of the guests during the evening of Joseph Brooks and the Messrs. Schubert at "Triby," at the Schubert Theatre.

On account of the death of Charles Frohman there was no performance yesterday at the Empire Theatre of "The Celebrated Case." The members of the cast were Joseph Brooks and the Messrs. Schubert at "Triby," at the Schubert Theatre.

Miss Ruth St. Denis, whose art opened new fields in the art of the dance, has closed her New York studio and has opened a school for dancing in Los Angeles.

The Forty-eighth Street Theatre is to be made into a permanent home for musical productions, and in August Dr. Wolf Hopper and a specially organized company will open in "Wang." This will be followed by a number of Gilbert and Sullivan works and also probably by "El Capitán."

As is usual at the Lambs' All-Star Gamble, the coming one at the Century

Except for the executioners and herdsman, who were obtained from the Neighborhood Association of Glen Cove, the entire cast that gave the piece recently in the Yale Bowl, in New Haven, appeared. Lillah McCarthy (Mrs. Gravelle Barker) played Iphigenia. She was supported by Ian MacLaren as Orestes. Lady Mary Willes as Pythias, Lionel Braham as Thoas, Claude Rains as the herdsman, Philip Merivale as the messenger and Mary Forbes as Pallas Athena.

Complimentary tickets were given to school children and about a hundred attended. Boxes used for the horse show were well filled, the stage being erected immediately in front of them.

Among those who occupied these were Mrs. E. Henry Harriman, Mrs. Charles Steele, Mrs. Payne Whitney, Mrs. Henry Rogers Winthrop, Mrs. Paul D. Cravath, Mrs. Charles Cary Rumsey, Mrs. Stanley Mortimer, Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, Mrs. Herbert M. Harriman, Mrs. Edwin P. Morgan, Mrs. Julia

Theatre on June 4 and 5 will have the services of a large number of prominent actresses who will sell the souvenir programmes.

At the opening performance of the Twelfth Night Club will be represented by Louise Drew, Marjorie Wood, Ruth Shewley, Margaret McKinney, Mildred Arden, Leila McBirney, Louise Schomberg, Lucille Erwin, Josephine Drake, Mabel Norton, Dorothy Bernard, Eva Condon, Jessie Glendinning, Agnes Miller and Letitia Linticum. JACOB RUPPERT DIES; BREWERY FOUNDER Began as Boy to Learn Trade in Which He Won Fame—Family with Him at End.

Jacob Ruppert, founder of the Jacob Ruppert Brewing Company, died at his home, 1115 Fifth Avenue last night. He was seventy-four years old.

When ten years old Mr. Ruppert entered the trade in which he was destined to become one of the nation's leaders. His father conducted the old Turtle Bay Brewery, on Forty-fifth Street, between Second and Third Avenues. There the boy served for years, working up from the bottom and learning every feature of the trade. His present establishment at Ninety-first Street and Third Avenue has an annual capacity of 2,000,000 barrels.

Although ailing for several years, Mr. Ruppert's death was unexpected. It was only recently that he suffered a serious relapse, and early yesterday evening it was found that he could not live through the night.

He died at 11 o'clock. At his bedside were his wife, his sons, Colonel Jacob Ruppert, Jr., present head of the brewery and owner of the New York American Ball Club, and George Ruppert, and his daughters, Mrs. H. C. Sillick, Jr., and Mrs. H. H. Schalk.

LAWYERS PLEDGED TO SPLIT JURY VOTE

County Association Will Recommend It in Civil Cases.

The New York County Lawyers' Association decided last night that it would recommend a five-sixths jury vote in civil cases to the Constitutional Convention at Albany. The meeting at the Hotel Astor discussed the report of the board of directors regarding the amendments to the state constitution to be recommended.

The association went on record as favoring the payment of referees' costs by the state or county rather than by litigants.

Another amendment to the original report was passed making it mandatory that referees should not receive any compensation from litigants. The substitution of the Supreme Court judge appointments for those of the Appellate Division was passed by a vote of 68 to 54.

Judge Joseph E. Daly opposed the change in jury votes, enlarging upon the satisfaction which the winner of a recent trial must feel because his verdict was finally unanimous. Further reference to the subject was held up by the verdict for Mr. Roosevelt also caused much commotion. "This proposition," continued Judge Daly, "is the most radical ever made. It is unjust to the litigant, and it changes the established method of unanimous verdicts."

Judge Daly was answered by Julius Hilbert Lohm, who asserted that the present method is an invitation to corruption. He referred to the practice—which he said had been proved to be a practice of some street railway companies of corrupting and more jurors for the sake of getting a disagreement. Trial by jury was shown last night to be less than unanimous in ten states, some having as low as eight for a verdict.

For the first time in its history, the association put itself on record in favor of certain candidates for the Supreme Court before the parties have made their choice. It is believed that practice has been to endorse certain men after they had been nominated. Five men recommended for the Supreme Court are: Samuel Greenbaum, John Proctor Clark, Francis B. DeLoach and Clarence J. Shearn. Municipal Court Judge Edward J. Lauer was also recommended. It was also decided to refer to the committee the name of Judge Zeller for possible endorsement.
