ton was invited to Windsor once, but it was only as a politician, when, after the overthrow of the Tories, the Queen could not brook that Mr. Gladstone should come back into power. Lord Hartingron never has been invited so-cally to the royal table. If any man of lower caste supplied the same reason for exclusion, the British press would doubtless have been ruthless in making known the reason.

Lord Hartington's political power is due to his rank. The convert is always made much of. By caste he should be a Tory. Because he will be a Duke and is a Liberal the Liberal party has made a pet of him. He has no transcendant abilities. He is Indolent, profligate, and tacturn. His attitude toward ireland was in the past identical with Mr. Gladstone's. Now, when he speaks, he quotes the utterances of Mr. Gladstone in their old association to vindicate himself. So he defends his support of cloture. So he sustains the arbitrary rulings of the Speaker. So he strengthens the Liberal Unionists in their hestility to home rule. He says with truth that it is Mr. Gladstone who has changed, not he. The Liberals who has changed, not he. The Liberals who are behind him are of two divisions, landlords like himself who will never consent to any measure dispossessing them, or readers like Mr. Chamberlain, who have nothdivisions, inadiords like himself who will never consent to any measure dispossessing them, or traders like Mr. Chamberlain, who have nothing to hope for under the resumption of government by Mr. Glaistone. The old Duke of Devonshire, past 80, has long poeu in his dotoge, and the young Liberals, the men of the Morley school, who are Liberals because of their ideas and not for office or ambition, sincerely wish the aged Cavendish would enter upon his reward, whatever may be in store for him. They think that when Lord Hartington passes into the upper House, the Liberal party will be largely the gainer in the lower.

Moanwhile the battle between ideal and practical polities goes on. It is the country against the caucus. It is the people against the clubs, the drawing rooms, and the press. Coercion will be carried, and by a tremendous majority. England is being educated against it as surely as Ireland and Sectiand have been. The flowing tide is with Gladstone; but the votes in the House are with Hartington and Chamberlain.

A WONDERFUL LIGHT COMPANY. Perhaps It Will Set the East River Afro as

Well as Illuminate the Town. The East River Electric Light Company is the mystery of the day. It has bloomed out suddenly-on paper-and asks the city author-ities to postpone for fifteen days the letting of contracts for lighting the city, in order that it may have an opportunity to prepare and submit a proposal to do the whole business.

On the 14th of February last the County Clerk received a valentine in the form of articles of incorporation of the company. The document was laid away in a pigeon bole to be unearthed by a reporter. It relates the important fact that John Carroll and Edward Duffy of New York and Seymour G. Smith of Plainfield have formed a body corporate; that the capital stock is to be $30,000, divided into 300 shares; that the three incorporators named constitute the Board of Directors, and that the officers are: Seymour G. Smith, President; John Car-roll, Secretary; and Edward Duffy, Treasurer. So far as is ascertained, it is Smith. Carroll, and Duffy who propose to take a contract to begin within two weeks the lighting of the streets, avenues, lanes, roads, parks, squares, places, and buildings of this town, to the exclusion of all the somewhat antiquated gas companies, and the more modern electric light companies.

Beymour G. Smith appears to be the senior member of the firm of S. G. Smith & Bro., tea packers at 129 Market street, The firm occupies a single room on the ground floor of the premises indicated, and appears to be a perfectly respectable business house. Mr. Seymour G. Smith is personally rated at the commercial agencies as worth from $10,000 to $15,000. Smith, Carroll, and Duffy who pro-rectly respectable business house, air, seymour G, Smith is personally rated at the commercial agencies as worth from $10,000 to $15,000.

The city directory furnishes a list of forty-one John Carrolls. After exhausting the barkespers, the bakers, and the butchers without atriking the incorporator, director, and accomplished secretary of the East River Electric Light Company, the reporter suspended the search. The coachmen, coal heavers, and carpenters will be canvassed another day.

The quest for the responsible treasurer of the new incorporation was measureably more successful, inasmuch as the Direccory mentions but eight Edward Duffy's in the city. Fortunately a clue was furnished to the right one in the address of the East River Electric Light Company, which, in its mysterious communication to the city authorities is given somewhat vaguely, as "loot of Twentieth street and East River." Though a search in that locality failed to disclose the office of the great light-giving company, it did reveal the office of Edward Carroll, contractor. The coincidence caused the reporter to jump to the conclusion that the contractor and the Treasurer are one and the same person. Unfortunately the contractor's office was closed and locked.

But there is discovered so far a genuine tea packer, reputed to be worth $15,000: a possible contractor who may be worth much or little, and one-forty-oneth part of all the Edward Carrolls of the city, as the visible financial backers of the new enterprise which desires to put up $30,000 capital and envelop the city in light and brightness on two weeks' notice.

"The proposition is absurd on its use." said a doubting Thomas, not wholly disconnected with existing light contractors. "All they can be seeking for now is public recognition. That secured, their stock will be found floating around as plentiful as snowflakes in a winter's storm. If that isn't it, it's a piece of boy's play, not worth a minute's consideration."

A story got affect well as this. Friends of Mr. Flynn deny it, too.

Flynn deny it, too.

One of the Subway Commissioners said to a BUN reporter that he knew nothing about the new company: but it would be time enough for it to talk of stretching its wires all through the city after it had ob ained the permission of the Subway Board to do so. No general permit, such as a company would require to undertake the lighting of the entire city by electricity, would be granted under any consideration.

KISSANE WAS ACQUITTED OF ARSON. A Statement that Burton, who Pursued Him, was Indicted for Perjury.

CHICAGO, Ill., April 8 .- The News this morning says the effort to identify W. K. Rogers, now a rich citizen of Sonoma, Cal., as William Kissane, who is charged with others with having burned the steamer Martha Washington in 1852 for the insurance, and with a series of other equally as monstrous crimes, opens up what proves to be a very old and painful sore. Amasa Chapin, for twenty-eight years a resident of Chicago, and for the last sixteen years connected with Selz, Schwab & Co., is a brother of the wife of Capt. Cummings, who cut a considerable figure in the life of Sidney C. Burton.

of the wife of Capt. Cummings, who cut a considerable figure in the life of Sidney C. Burton, according to Burton's account and that of his daughter, Mrs. Bowman, who is now striving to locate Kissane.

"The trial of the alleged conspirators was not at Heiena, Ark.," said Mr. Chapin to a reporter last evening, "as stated by the despatches in the papers to-day, I was one of the persons who was arrested for the burning of the Martha Washington, and the trial was at Columbus, O. Our lawyers at the time were so well satisfied that there was no conspiracy that they were disposed not to attempt to make a case. We were all tried and honorably acquitted. Burton did not produce a scintilla of evidence against us. He was working in the interest of the insurance companies, and after he had begun the prosecution he tried desperately hard to convict us.

"I simply regarded him as a monomaniae. After the trial, about a year I think it was, he was under the surveillance of the authorities. As to Capt. Cummings, I did not know him until 1850, and after he had been married to my sister some two years. That statement about her going down on the Rio Grande and putting a pistol to Cummings's head and compelling him to marry her is untrue. Cummings was a sutler in the Mexican war, and he and my sister were married at New Orleans, I think it was in 1848. Mrs. Cummings has been dead fourfeen or afteen years. She lived here in Chicago six or seven years, and had quite a circle of secualintance here, who know she was not a woman to walk the floor in a rage, as Burton has described, and intimidate a stranger with flashing eyes by saying she could hit a quarter across the room with a pistol.

"I regret the reopening of this old sore," continued Mr. Chapin. "We were all of us honorably acquitted of the crime charged thirty-four years ago. I lived in Cincinnati eight years after the side of the scripe dead of the propers when the room with a pistol.

JUDGE KELLYS PART IN THE DRAL He Told Ecclesine that He Had a Power of

The lawyers who are fighting for and against the efforts of Mr. William McMahon to secure payment to the tune of $150,000 for his work in building up the Subway Company, of which Maurice B. Flynn is the master spirit, fought for two hours yesterday, and got well along in mixing things up. Associated with Flynn as defendants are Civil Justice William H. Kelly, the Consolidated Telegraph and Electrical Subway Company, and the American Insulated Conduit Company. Eleven lawyers represent the various interests, and in the stenographer's minutes are as many objections and exceptions as there are weeds in a Jersey garden. The hearing is supposed to go on before Commissioner Shields, but the Commissioner generally got out of range as soon as he had sworn a witness.

Ex-Senator Ecclesine, who is one of McMahon's many lawyers, and who has occupied the stand for several hearings, was the first ness. He said that in the latter part of last May or early in June he had a conversation with Judge Kelly, who said that he had an interest in the stock that McMahon was to get, and that one-sixth of it was to be turned over to him after the execution of the contract.

Q.—Did he say when he was called upon to enter into any contract? A.—Bespite a cloud of objections.—I think he stated that Mr. McMahon had declined to sign the contract with Flynn alone, or words to that effect.

Q.—Did he say he was requested to sign any contract?

A.—I can't give you any further—
Q.—What further did he say you about McMahon? A.—Oh, he asked me about his character and experience, and I gave him the highest possible character. At the time of the expiration of the contract nothing was said that the absence of any copies of the interest was handed to the sheenee of any copies of the interest was handed to bloMahoning only one paper, and Kelly said that was any enough to settle, and suggested that we place it in an envelope, seal it, and then each of us could sign our names across the two flaps.

In the third section the will states that all the presents which have been given her by her triends, and which include, it is said, many valuable articles, shall be disposed of in the same way to her executors, but it was her wish that they should be returned to the donors, and she would leave a memorandum to the executors to that effect.

Instead of making by her will several small bequests to faithful servants and others to whom she considered certain bequests should be made, she gave by the fourth section of her will to her executors $260,000, to be paid, conveyed, and delivered in accordance with her wishes as set forth in another private memorandum for her executors.

WAR AGAINST THE SALOONS. Liener Men Accused of Great France in th

Recent Michigan Election. MARQUETTE April 9 .- There is great excitement all over the northern Michigan peninsula over alleged frauds in the recent elec tion which places in doubt the fate of the prohibitory amendment. The Ironwood authorities are reported to have sought legal advice, it being charged that voters by the hundreds were imported from Wisconsin to vote against the amendment. The frauds are all alleged to have occurred in Gogebic county. That the most wholesale fraud was carried on there seems apparent. The revised returns cu down the vote against the amendment to 8.450, allowing Bessemer county nearly 1,900. If Bessemer county is thrown out, and there is no doubt of the contest, the State has certainly carried the amendment.

St. Joseph. Mo., April 9.—The new law passed by the late Kunsas Legislature, which is intended as a backbone to the present prohibitory law, is playing havoc with the liquor trade in Kansas. The St. Joseph wholesale dealers complain of a falling off in the trade, and a firm that is known to be one of the largest in the city has taken four of its Kansas men off the road. In Kansas City, it is understood, the result of the law is the same, the Kansas trade being virtually killed. The law makes it necessary for a man desiring to open a drug store to have twenty-five women signers to the petition, and any person who buys liquor must go before a notary public and make affidavit as to what use he will make of it, and that it is not intended to be drank as a beverage.

St. Joseph wholesale liquor dealers have in all taken about fifteen men off the road as a result of this amendment of the laws.

GALVESTON, April 9.—The prohibition question is rapidly taking a front rank among the political issues of Texas. The late Legislature passed an act submitting this question to a vote of the people in August. The anti-Prohibitionists are organized for the battle. They are inviting prominent Democrats to attend a meeting on the 30th, for the purpose of calling a Convention in May "to set forth clearly and universally the time-honored principles of Democracy in its opposition to all forms of sumpturay legislation.

The News prints to-day an open letter from Senator John H. Reagan replying to the invitation of the committee to attend the coming meeting. He comes out squarrely in favor of prohibition, and deals the opposition some hard blows. Two years ago Mr. Reagan stood beside Senator Coke, Gov. Ireland, Congressman Mills, and other prominent Democrats in strenuously opposing the growth of the prohibition idea, on the ground that it was a sacred principle of the Democracy to oppose sumptuary laws of whatever character. Mr. Reagan's complete change of views on this point surprises even his nearest friends.

After pleturing the wretchedness and dishonor to be encountered in every community resulting from the use of liquor, he says: dealers complain of a falling off in the trade, and a firm that is known to be one of the largest I must express my regret that any effort has been made to make a party question of prohibition, and each peckally do I regret that besnoerate should seek to identify that great and grand historic party, ith the fortunes and fale of the whitekey shop drunkards and criminals.

BOTH PASTORS RESIGN. The Westminster Presbyterian Church of

Yonkers in a Quandary. YONKERS, April 9 .- The congregation of the fashionable Westminster Presbyterian Church in this city is in a quandary. The Rev. Charles P. Fagnaur accepted a call to the pastorate about two years ago, but soon after he arrived he was taken so seriously ill with a complication of diseases that the congregation sent him to Europe. The Rev. E. C. Moore of New York was called to succeed him temporarily. The church prospered greatly. It is said that some friends of Mr. Fagnaur became policies of Mr. Moore's success and wrote to Mr. Fagnani, who is now in Italy, that he ought to come home. As a result, it is said, Mr. Fagnani sent in his resignation. The Rev. Mr. Moore soon heard reports what was being said, and, being very much distressed, he immediately sent in his resignation, and announced that to-morrow would be the last day he would preach in Westminster Church. Report says that Mr. Fagnani resigned because he had heard of the prosperity of the church under Mr. Moore's management, and that he did not wish to stand in the way of its success. However this may be, it is certain that the resignations of both Mr. Fagnani and Mr. Moore are now before the elders of the church. tion of diseases that the congregation sent him

Her Jewelry, Diamonds, and $500,000 Given to Her Executors to be Disposed Of According to Private Memorandums

Those who had expected that Catharine Lorillard Wolfe would by her last will and tes-tament handsomely endow many charitable institutions, will be disappointed. She had given a generous share of her large possestime, and she considered that the chief beneficiaries under her will should be her relative of whom there are a great many. Her will was drawn by Lawyer Albon P. Man, and witness-ed by himself and Alrick H. Man and Edward Man, on Feb. 14, 1884. It is a long document, and contains but few special bequests, the bulk of the property being divided up with substantial equality among the relatives on both side of the house.

The will begins with a declaration colored by religious sentiment and vory characteristic: I. Caharine Lordlard Wolfe, of the city and county of New York, thankful to the God of my life for unnumbered mercies spiritual and temporal, which have been vguchaafed to me, deeply sensible also of the uncertain measure of my days, and in humble dependence on the redeeming love of a crucified and rises Lord, do commit myself to His holy keeping, in the hope of a gierious resurrection; and now, recognising it as a duty to make proper disposition of the worldly estate with which I have been blessed, I do make public my last will and teatament.

The Newport house and grounds, supposed to be worth about half a million, are bequeathed by the twelfth provision of the will to Louis L. The Victory Mainly Due to the Brillian Battery Work of Fouts and Bushong.

St. Louis, April 9.-The world's champions achieved another victory to-day, defeating the Chicagos after an exciting game by a score of 9 to 7. Both pitchers were hit freely, but Fourz particularly distinguished himself by cool-headed work at critical points of the game. He showed himself to be master of the situation, and to his pitching. with the back stop work of Bushong, the vic tory is largely due. Bushong caught beautifully, and threw to Burns with marvellous ac curacy. The game began with St. Louis at the bat. Anson for the third time won the toss, but chose McQuade, the association umpire, instead of Doescher, as he had done on both occasions previously.

A wild throw of Williamson, a balk by Clarkson, and Daly's very wild throw over Anson's head gave St. Louis a run, Latham scoring it." Chicago started out boldly, and scored three runs on Ryan's two-bagger to left, Sullivan's sacrifice. Gleason's muff of Anson's fly, Pfefruns on Ryan's two-bagger to left, Sullivan's sacrifice, Gleason's muff of Anson's fir, Pfefer's drive for a single to left, and O'Neill's failure to stop the hit. It looked blue for the Browns, but they changed the aspect of affairs by piling up four runs in the second innings. Welsh went to first on balls, was advanced to second on Four's single liner to left, after Caruthers went out on a foul tip, Robinson hit to Clarkson, who threw to Burns to force Welch at third. Burns dropped the ball, and Welch secred on Bushong's sacrifice. Latham came to the rescue with a beauty to left which Sullivan allowed to get by him, Latham going to third and Foutz and Robinson secring. Gleason sent a single to left and Latham scored.

Two more were added in third on Comiskey's hit to left. Burns's bad error in failing to hold Welch's hit, a single by Caruthers, and a two-bagger by Robinson. Chicago added one in the second made by Williamson, a base on balls. Clarkson's hit to centre, and Burns's drive to left. In the third the bases were filled twice, but Fout's effective pitching prevented more than one run, which was made on Pfefer's single, his steal of second, and O'Neill's muff of Daly's fly. Pfoffer drove out a three-bagger to right centre in the fifth, and scored on Daly's fly to Welch. Their final run was made in the ninth on Anson's single, his steal of second, and Welch's muff of Pfeffer's fly. The Browns were Chicagoed till the eighth inning, when they increased their score to nine runs on Latham's beautiful three-bagger to centre, Ryan's muff of Bushong's fly, and Gleason's fly to Ryan. Latham's third-base work and his great batting contributed materially to the Browns' success. For the Chicagos, the battery work of Clarkson and Daly, and Pfeffer's flelding and batting were the best features. The score:

The intercollegiate tug-of-war, trial heats, between teams from Princeton, Columbia, and College of the City of New York, was the first event to send salvos of applause through the vast structure. The Columbias and Princetons grasped the rope in the first trial. Columbia's men dropped to their task in quick order, and in two minutes had 6% inches the best of the tug. The Princetons recovered an inch and a half in the next minute, but that was all they could do, Columbia winning the five minutes' trial by five inches.

The Princetons gave the New Yorks a walk-over for the second trial heat. It was reported that one of the Princeton men was sick.

The men forming Columbia's team were H. P. Bellinger, E. Harris, R. M. Haymond, and G. Elliott, anchor. In the final heat with the New Yorks the Columbias pulled the life out of their opponents on the drop. In two minutes they had four feet the best of the rope, winning by 4 feet 6 inches.

They found him confing out of a boarding house at the corner of Muberry and Boudinot streets with a satchel in his hand, and took him to the Newark Police Headquarters, where he is now locked up. The satchel contained $1,425. Martin is 45 years old and has a wife and well-grown family at 125th street and Fourth avenue. He was janitor at the bank, and was sent to the Columbia Bank to get currency for $2,000 worth of nickels. He got the money and decamped with a woman, through whom he was traced. He sent a trunk and some bundles to her mother's house in Greenpoint, and from there they were reshipped to several places and finally reached Newark. ST, LOUIS GETS THE THIRD GAME THE RAHWAY MYSTERY. WINE GROWER GORRISSE CONTRA-DICTS JOSEPH RIEFLE.

> Did Riefe's Dog Bark when the Murder was Committed I—The Body to be Exposed to View To-day and to be Buried on Monday Joseph Riefle, also called Salvation Joe, again becomes a figure in the Rahway murder nystery, through a statement made by a French wine grower named Gorrisse, whose house and vineyard are on the Westfield road, about two blocks from DraMeeker's, where Riefle is a hired man and has charge of the premises in Dr. Meeker's absence in Florida. Meeker's is between the spot on Central avenue, her throat cut, and Gorrisse's house. Riefle told the reporters, who were the first to question him about his presence on the night the crime was committed, that he had said his prayers and was in bed at 9% o'clock, which is the supposed time of the murder. Charley Hendershot, who works in Bloodgood's Mills, slopt with him that night. Riefle said he heard no cries, and that his Gordon setter dog did not bark on that night. Mr. Gorrisse says that his wife heard cries coming from the direction of Central avenue on the night the girl was killed, and that at the time Riefle's dog barked loud and long on Dr. Meeker's farm. Mr. Gorrisse used to sleep at night in his vineyard, which has since been destroyed by an incendiary fire. This vineyard was between Dr. Meeker's and Central avenue. Gorrisse says that while watching his fruit he has seen Riefle go to Milton carrying eggs in such a basket as the one that contained the nine broken eggs, and which lay beside the corpse when the murder was discovered. A larger but similar basket was found in Dr. Meeker's woodshed. Gorrisse says that he frequently saw from his old vineyard Riefle returning to Dr. Meeker's late at night. Late hours, however, were only kept by Riefle when Dr. Meeker and his family were away.

> Riefle's story that he was alone in the house with Hendershot on the night of the crime and that he was asleep at 9% o'clock, is contradicted fully by two persons, and parily by a third. First Charley Hendershot says that he (Hendershot) went to bed early on the night of Friday, March 25, as he had been up nearly all of the night before at the Froats' party. About a quarter to 9 o'clock. Hendershot says, he got out of bed and let in Riefle and James Smith, a young man under age. Hendershot went back to bed, and Riefle told him afterward that he and Smith had played cards togother for about an hour, after which sinith started for home. Riefle going with him as far as Jefferson ayenue. Smith's way home would be along Westfield avenue, which a little way from Jefferson avenue becomes Grand street. This, Smith says, is the route he took home after leaving Riefle at about 5:45 P. M. He heard no ories while at Dr. Mecker's or after he had left the house. Riefle, Smith says, met him at a cigar store in Grand street, at about 7:45 o'clock, and invited him to Dr. Mecker's. They reached Dr. Mecker's at about 8 o'clock, and played cards for three-quarters of an hour, when Smith loft.
> Smith works in a carriage factory in Harrison street. The cigar store keeper said yesterday that Riefle came to the store early in the evening and said that he had an engagement to meet Tam Hankins there. At 85, o'clock Haukins appeared, and after Riefle had talked about ton minutes with Hankins on the side walk in front of the store, Riefle started down Grand street in the direction of Dr. Mecker's. Unless. Riefle ran ho couldn't have reached home much before 9 o'clock. Then, if he played cards with Jimmy Smith for three-quarters, or even half an hour, he must have been dressed and awake at the time the deed was done, and he could hardly have failed to have heard the barking of his dog. Riefle is about 30 years old. He is a member of the Rahway Salvation Army. Ex-

Capt. Jack Hussey has made up his mind that he will not in future save any Englishmen from drowning. He has rescued about a dozen of them from watery graves, but he will not do so any more. The reason that induced him to come to such a determination is the treatment he has just received from the Royal Humane Society of England.

A big envelope half covered with red and

A big envelope half covered with red and yeliow stamps and postmarks reached Superintendent Jackson of Castic Garden yesterday. It came from England, and was as important looking as if it contained the last will and testament of Queen Victoria. But it did not. All that it contained the last will and testament of Queen Victoria. But it did not. All that it contained was the information that the Royal Humane Society could not grant Capt. Jack Hussey a medal for all the lives he saved. The reason that they could not present him with it is because Capt. Jack had been born in county Cork. Ireland, and that instead of joining the English army he had the bad taste to come here and light for the Union. But Capt. Jack Hussey never asked the Britishers to give him a medal, and he is naturally full of indignation because of the way they tell him he cannot have one from them.

About eight or nine months ago there was an Englishman in this country named Sir Alfred Goolils. He had heard so much of the brave deeds done by the Castle Garden life saver that he resolved to use his influence with the Humano Society to have it present him with a medal. So certain was he of their compliance that he told Capt. Jack how he was to take care of it, and marked out the spot on Jack's big chest where the decoration was to be worn. Sir Alfred invastigated Capt. Hussey's history, and was well satisfied that he was eligible for the distinction. The Commissioners of Emigration gave him a certificate of Jack's good character, and which enumerated his faithful and efficient services. To this was affixed the big red seal of the Emigration Board. Sir Alfred also took with him to England a copy of The Sux of March 13, 1885, which gave a full history of the hero and the names of the fortycane persons he had saved, as well as the circumstances attending the rescues. All these he presented to the society as substantial roasons why Jack should be rewarded.

But the idea of honoring an Irishman, and a Corkonian at that, was not to be thought of by the ellow stamps and postmarks reached Super-

The Thistle's Challenge Formally Accepted Secretary William Krebs of the American

Cup Committee has sent to Secretary William York of the Royal Clyde Yacht Club, in answer to the challenge of the Thistle for the America's cup, a letter saying:

The committee find the papers in proper order, and note that Mr. Bell is prepared to accept, with slight mod-ifications, the arrangements of the Genests and Galatea matches sailed in 1885, and 1890. Considering therefore as settied all regulations for those races concerning which you suggest no change, and referring in detail to the alterations which you suggest, the committee in-

Date of Races.—In the opinion of the committee, it will be unwise to make these fixtures before the arrival in

Number of Races - In view of the possibility of post-ponement of races and other delays, and of the fact that he committee consider three sufficient to set its speed of the vessels, they are not willing to make any change in this respect.

Umpire.—The committee think the terms of the races should be mutually agreed upon by the representatives of the Thisties and themselves, and that to referee should should, however, differences arise as to construction of terms to decide which it would be desirable to appoint an umpire, the committee will gaily accept Mr. George L. Schuyler.

Patrol Steamers.—The committee can promise that the officers of the clob will do everything in their power to secure fair races, and to that end will join Mr. Beiling by the found possible to make, including those which he suggests under this head.

Accidents.—The committee is willing to agree that in case of accidents happening at any time either yach shall have the time necessary for repairs. Provided that no races shall be sailed after the close of the racing seasons prescribed by the clib rules.

Mr. Caldwell H. Colt, the owner of the yach Danntless, has written a letter to a New York yachtsman denying that the owner and the skipper, of the historically unlucky craft had an unpileasant voyage together. A Sun reporter learned yesterday that the Dauntless, seams above the water line began to open after she had been out only two days. Whenever she was pushed in running before the howling gales through boiling seas the water fairly poured through her distended seams, and men were kept at the eight-inch pumps working five minutes out of every fifteen to keep the hold clear. It is related that while the yacht was sendding before a flerce northwester, Mr. Colt came on dex to look around. Capt, Samuels requested him to go below, but he refused to stir until its wite his pleasure. He finally went partiy down the companion way just as Mr. Colt concluded the deck was not the place for him just then. Capt, Samuels any business entering an ocean race.

The concert was on the whole one of the most charming ones of all the year. Its color and temperament was throughout joyous and cheerful, as becomes the Eastertide. The A major symphony is bright and hopeful, and Mr. Thomas's rendering of it last night was such as to bring all its gentle, placid, we had almost said feminine characteristics into full prominence, while its romance and sudden, swift, and unexpected changes and contrasts were followed with a subtly pliant power that gave ample play to each succeeding mood.

We do not know to whom we are paying compliments when we praise the manuscript symphony of Alberto Franchetti. He may be some ambitious young New Yorker, who has chosen to remain incognito until the success of his work is assured, or his may be, as the name upon the programme would lead the ingenuous reader to suppose, an Italian art student living a charmed life of case and repose among the suggestive and enlightening influences of Rome, Allian, or Florence. However this may be, one thing is certain, that Mr. Franchetti's life must have been, up to the time of the writing of this pretty symphony of his, a very happy one, for there is in the whole thing no trace of sadness, of morbid thought, or of longing or disappointment. A healthy, sunny spirit pervades it, from which the hearer gains at its close a sense of enlivement and refreshing exhilaration. There is no lack of solid counterpoint, either, in Franchetti's composition. He has evidently studied carefully and reverently the old masters respecting their extablished forms. Clever workmanship shows itself throughout every movement the amusician's skill as well as the islent of a gifted man. The audience applanded the new symphony with enthusiasan. Fraulein Aus der Ohe is one of the very few planoforte players who are big and broad enough in style to be heard to advantage in so large an auditorium as that of the Motropolitan. Her pharases are as grand and large as the outlines of a Doré or a Makart. She played Weber's Concert-Stuck in a truly

THE MURDER OF MR. WEEKS.

A DRAMATIC SKETCH BY MR. SMITH

The Sketch and a Copy of Several Letters from his Sweetheart Torn to Pieces-The Story as Told by the Pinywright. Two young men were seen early yesterday morning breaking Mr. Peto's show window at 291 Broadway, Brooklyn, and one of them was caught. At the police station he said he was Charles Smith, 19 years old, of 164 Park row, this city. Among the articles found in his possession were a silver watch, stolen from Mr. Peto's store, and a letter. It is said the letter refers to the Lyman S. Weeks murder, and at first it was thought it might prove valuable. The address on the envelope is "George E. Francis, Esq., 53 Bushwick avenue, Williamsburgh, Brooklyn, E. D."

There is no stamp or postmark on it, Besides the above name there are a number of mysterious characters, with the word "miscelrious characters, with the word "miscellanious" written above them. On the back of the lotter is written in a bold, school-boy hand, "This letter is for me and nobody else, and don't you forgit it." The French words "Bon jour aux "are also marked in lead pencil on the envelope back, with the number "683.1 A." Smith, who was recognized by the police as "George the Dude," said the name on the envelope was his stage name, and that his right name was Charles Smith. From information furnished by him Detectives Short and Corcoran arrested his companion, Matthaw Valentine, in the lodging house, 53 Bowery, this city, Valentine is 19 years old. Justice Nacher remanded them to Raymond street jail for examination.

city. Valentine is it years out. State and commended them to Raymond street jail for examination.

The letter is now in the hands of Superintendent Campbell. The police authorities attached no importance to it last night. Inspector kellly said to a reporter of The Sun:

"The letter is a nonsensical production, and I do not believe it is of the slightest importance as affording a clue to the Weeks murder or any other murder. Smith and Valentine are a couple of petty thieves, and do not, I am confident, know any more about the man who killed Mr. Weeks than I do."

Smith was seen late last night in his cell at Raymond street jail, He said:

"This is a put-up job on me. A fellow, Flemming, got me drunk and induced me to go to Williamsburgh this morning and break that window. The detectives and reporters were under a stoop watching the whole business. I had no intention of committing any robbery, it was simply dared to break the window, and I did it."

"How did it come that the detectives thought you might have some knowledge of the Weeks murder?"

"When they searched me and found a long."

"When they searched me and found a long letter and a little dramatic sketch which I wrote out a few nights ago, they thought they had made a big discovery. The letter was simply a transcript of several letters I had received from an old sweetheart of mine. They were of a very tender character, and as the letters were falling to pieces from being carried so long in my pockets. I tore them up after copying them. I also fore up with the letters the dramatic sketch, which I also had copied. In the sketch there is a reference to the Weeks murder.

"It seems that some reporters who were in the secret with Flemming picked up the pieces of paper I had torn up and patched them together, and I supposes some of them inagined I was the murderer of Mr. Weeks. Superintendent Campbell and District Attorney Ridgway had a long talk with me to-day, and I told them the whole story, and satisfied them that I had nothing whatever to do with the murder, and that the Williamsburgh affair this morning was only a drunken foolic.

"The sketch was in dialogue and something

The sketch was in dialogue and something like this: One of the characters in the piece asks Mr. Russell, supposed to be a rich banker and a friend of the murdered man:

milderer!
Mr. Russell—No. not the alightest clue.
The murderer, then, left no trace by which he could be brought to justice?
Mr. Russell—Not the slightest.
What was the murderer's object?
Mr. Russell—It must have been robbery. He discovered his victim overhauling his secretary in the library and killed him.

"There were." continued Smith, "a few other lines to the same effect. It was a fancy which came into my mind one evening, and as I had been reading about the recent Brooklyn murder I inserted the name of Mr. Weeks. I have never been arrested befora. I am no thief, and will never hang for this or any other murder."
