she ever heard from him I don't know it. She came back (being away five days, I think), and then we were in the Rouse House—no one but Harry Naylor. Lotta, and myself.

Pastor George then parades himself on his strength of will after that Sunday night in the parsonage. Here is a sample of his cant:

"She took Harry at the end of these few days and returned to New York to stay one month with Mrs. Naylor. The inst night before she went I said: 'Lotta, my conscionce troubles me.' She replied: 'So does mine, and I feel wicked.' We talked the matter over, got down on our knees, and asked died to for five us. She says: 'Will he forgive?' I said: 'Lotta, take this verse and lean hard upon it. This is the will of God, even your sanctification.' We promised God faithfully we would never be wicked again, and I said: 'Lotta, you can stay in my family till you marry if you will be true to your word.' I was never near her after that ir any way, shape, or manner, except what I did by way of waiting upon her when so sick inter. I believe she kept her word. I was at Mrs. Naylor's each week subsequently from Monday night till Thursday night. I never saw her alone in a room, and there was no more between us than though we had never met. At the end of the month of service she came to Leed's with me and I helped her purchase a sacque at wholesale."

Pastor George drops his cant and tells of Lotta's trouble and his efforts to aid her, and of an experience that Lotta had with Dr. Erway. The operations that followed are described in detail, and George admits being present, and on one occasion of helping Dr. Erway move the lounge and prepare for them.

"The Doctor and I then went on talking about a sanitarium" he says. "I have tried, since leaving Topeka, to get out of the ministry on account of kieptomania. Dr. Erway wanted me togo in with him to start a sanitarium saying we could make lots of money taking cases of abortion. He wrote to Peter Van Vechten in Milwaukee, trying to get his nice house in my name, and showed me the answer.

the Salisbury mansion. I think, for $8,000. I don't know where it is, and never saw it that I know of."

After a lot of unneccessary obscenity, Pastor George continues: "Jan. 12 I received an anonymous letter from Catakill, in substance this: For God's sake keep this matter quiet. There is pienty of money back of this. Take good care of the girl. If she tells on me I'll leave the country.' I took the letter, went to Mra. Charles White, handed it to her as she sat alone by the stove, and said: 'You can have one-half of all that I receive.' Mra. White said she would not tell her husband and would keep the matter quiet. I added; 'You can give Mrs. Hood something and I'll give the daughter something.' Mra. White said as they looked at the writing: 'That corresponds, I think, with an autograph in her album from Catakill signed with initials.' I then told Mrs. Hood and her daughter there is money back of this, and repeated what I told Mrs. White. That letter was put into my pocket and some one has removed it. I have only the letter envelope, But Mrs. White will remember the talk. Mrs. White took hold and worked faithfully, and so did others to the last, almost the last time."

Mr. George, after another wallow in the mire. gravely accused Deacon Charles White with making a "low joke" in reference to the trouble. The eyes of every man in the court were directed toward George while this was being read. The pastor shifted uneasily from one position to another, and his narrow black tie climbed up the back of his collar. Occasionally he attempted to assume a professional attitude, with the tips of his fingers placed togethers and his eyes and eyebrows uplifted in a sanctimonious manner. The man's assurance is only equalled by his cowardice, as he attempts to saddle his crime on the shoulders of Henry Kamm, the young blacksmith of Leeds. Mr. George drives at Deacon White's

After the noon recess Mr. Flero began his defence of George. He said that he would not have taken. the case had he known the work involved. "I pledge you my word, gentlemen." he said. "I would rather lose my right arm than defend a man whom I thought was guilty."

men. he said. I would rather lose my right arm than defend a man whom I thought was guilty.

Two women were in the court room when Mr. Fiero began his speech, but they left in haste when he said. "Let him that is without sin cast the first stone, and how many stones would be flying around this court room?"

"Clergymen have told me," he added, "that they never heard grander, more cloquent, more elegantly expressed, or more philosophical sermons than those preached by Mr. Georga. One clergyman told me that he had never heard Beecher preach a better sermon, We all know what manner of man he was. We all know that he had his passions as other men had, yet there stands to-day a statue of him in Brooklyn, facing the Court House in which he was tried."

Mr. Fiero referred to George as a "monstrosity of a minister." Mr. George, he argued, had been so weakened by his kleptomania that he was morally irresponsible. This was to be his line of defence.

was morally irresponsible. This was to be all line of defence.

The first witness for the defence was the Rev. M. W. Staples, an old Presbyterian clergyman, who couldn't vouch for George's character, but who thought him a very eccentric man. Mr. Staples had heard Mr. George say from the pulpit: "The Lord will be with you when you are washing dishes and scrubbing floors."

Mr. Staples also accused George of directing the Lord's attention in his prayers to the book, chapter, and verse in the Bible. This seemed to Mr. Staples a ruther uscless proceeding.

seemed to Mr. Staples a rather ceeding.

avenue, New York, said that Mr. George was "a perfect gentleman" as long as he had known him.

It was a surprise when Mr. Fiero called upon Mr. George to take the stand in his own defence. George had been so badly rattled by Mr. Osborn's cross-examination on Saturday that no one expected to see him on the witness stand again. Mr. George took the oath, and as he sat down in the witness chair he removed his spectacles and gave the jury an opportunity to see more plainly his little beady eyes. He is not a prepossessing looking man now. Mr. George has an exceptionally good voice, that is sympathetic and well modulated. He speaks slowly when not excited, and is a bit overnice in his effort to sound the final lettors in his words distinctly. Mr. Fiero handled him skilfully on the direct examination, and George told a connected story of his life very much as it has been printed.

He said that he was born forty years ago in East Orrington. Me., and his parents are living. He had never been arrested until last January. From Orono Agricultural College, where he went when he was 17 years old, he went to Colby University, and attorward to Oberlin, where he graduated in the class of 1878. Kleptomania got him into trouble wherever he went. Huntley, Ill., was his first charge, and here he stole, and, although it was not made public, he had to leave town. Then he went to Creston, where he took trivial things under an uncontrollable impulse.

"What did you do at Geneva, Ill.?" asked Mr. Fiero.

"I took things from Mr. Boyes's store. One

Mr. George's connection with the Berachah mission in New York and the story of his life in Brooklyn have already been told in Trux Sux. Mr. Flero questioned him carefully about every detail of it, and particularly about his kleptomania. George said that he never took articles of any value; he always concealed them under his left arm when their size would permit. He rubbed his hands and his eyeglasses as he told of this series of small thefts.

When Mr. Fiero reached his career in Leeds he was not so anxious to tell about his kleptomania. He said that he went there because of his affliction, and that for two months after he reached Leeds he didn't dare to go into a store for fear he would steal something. He started his thefts in Leeds by stealing a pair of mittens at Mr. Teich's store. These mittens Mr. Teigh afterward recovered and put on exhibition if his store windows with an announcement that George had stolen them. Two laprobes from Charles Vedder and some outs from Sandford Plank were among his thefts.

oats from Sandford Plank were among his thefts.

After two hours of this sort of testimony Mr. George broke down. He covered his face with his hands and sobbed.

It was evident that he would not be able to continue, and, as it was 5:30 o'clock, court was adjourned until to-morrow, when George's examination will be continued.

THEY WANT A NEW CREED. The Indianapolis Presbytery Believes in Discarding the Old One.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 9 .- The Indianapolis Presbytery to-day voted in favor of such revision of the Confession of Faith as shall "tend to free the confession from misunderstanding and to broaden and enrich, in a fuller state ment of the great central varieties of the ment of the great central varieties of the gospel of Jesus Christ."

The resolutions continue: "We are free to say, however, that in our judgment the committee, under the instructions received from the Assembly and of the Church as a whole, could with wisdom have gone farther, have modified still more, or eliminated entirely paragraphs so worded as to be questionable scriptural authority and evidently objectionable to the majority of the church.

Whereas, The Presbytery is convinced that no revision of the old faith will meet that growing desire and need of the church for a more brief and simple expression of the system of doctrine contained in the word of God, and "Whereas, It is probable that a confession of faith, as revised, will be fully as long and almost impracticable as before; therefore "The Presbytery respectfully makes overtures to the General Assembly to take measures to formulate a new creed, much more prief, less speculative, and more nearly in the exact words of Scripture, the foundations of our revered faith and of the word of God."

sketch of the association, introduced Bishop Potter, who made the principal address. Letters of regret were received from Vice-President Morton, Governor-elect Flower, John Jay, and others.

On Nov. 3, 1820, William Wood posted on the bulletin board of the Commercial Advertiser a "Notice to Merchants' Clerks and Apprentices" requesting those who desired to form a library to meet at the Tontine Coffee House. As a result of this meeting the Mercantile Library was opened in 1812 at 49 Fulton street with about 700 books. The association prospered, and in 1823; the owned 4,000 volume and moved into the building of Harper Bros.

In 1828 the association had established itself in popular favor and solicited subscriptions for a building. The Clinton Hall Association, which was formed to raise money, collected $335,000 within a year. A new building was erected at Nassau and Beckman streets. The land and building cost $55,000.

Twenty years later, in 1849, the library had outgrown its home and purchased the Astor Place Opera House for $140,000, and spent $115,000 more in adapting it for the use of the library. At that time the library owned 43,000 books.

In 1880 the Opera House could not accommodate the collection, and it was torn down to make way for the building now occupied.

The sixth and seventh floors of the new building are devoted to the library and reading room. The book stacks will hold 475,000 volumes, and there are a present about 236,000 books in the possession of the associathe library room receives light from a large akylight and from the sides.

JERSEY CITY'S PALACE.

It is Intended to Bent the Saloon at its Own Game.

The People's Palace work, a movement started by the Rev. Dr. John L. Scudder of the Jersey City Tabernacie, was begun last even-ing by public exercises in the church. Dr. Scudder said it was intended to have the Palace beat the saloon.

It would have drinks for sale, but they would be temperance drinks. Saloons charged five cents for soda water and sarsaparilla, and the Palace proposed to sell such drinks for three cents. During the past seventeen month there had been raised between $15,000 and $16,000 for the Palace work. It had now fine buildings, a free library and reading rooms, buildings, a free library and reading rooms, an employment bureau, a gymnasium, and an amusement hall where tenpins and other games were provided. There were also connected with the Palace two grounds for tennis and baseball.

It was proposed to add baths and swimming tanks, a dispensary for the needy sick, a day nursery for working mothers, a clothing department where old clothing would be kept on hand for the needy, a newsboys' lodging home, and a penny bank. Property valued at $150,000 had been purchased, upon which it was proposed to erect a handsome building.

Other addresses were made by Z. R. Pangborn, the Rev. Dr. Cornelius Breth of the Bergen Reformed Church, the Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott of Brooklyn, who said that Dr. Scudder should have the degree of D. H. (Doctor of Humanity) conferred upon him, and the Rev. Dr. A. H. Bradford of Montelair.

William E. Dodge, who was announced to speak, was unable to be present, but sent a check for $500 toward the building fund. At the close of the exercises the vast audience repaired to the present temporary buildings of the Palace and inspected them.

PLUNDERING THE MAILS.

An Appeal for Bellef to Mr. Wonamake from New Orleans Bankers, New Orleans, Nov. 8.—For some time depretions have been of constant occurrence. While business houses have suffered to some extent, the larger share of annoyance and loss has fallen upon the banks, which seem to be the special objects of attack on the part of the

The New Orleans National, the largest bank in the city, having sixteen per cent. of the aggregate deposits of all banks in New Orleans has suffered so severely that a few days ago the directors appealed for relief to Postmaster-General Wanamaker.

A letter was addressed to Postmaster Eaton of this city giving full details of the long continued and constantly increasing series of robberies, and asking for relief at the hands of the department at Wasnington.

the department at Wasnington.

The case of the Union Bank of Key Vest is peculiar. The Key West bank first remitted a check to the New Orleans National Bank, which was never received; it then sent a duplicate which shared the same fate, and finally lorwarded a triplicate through another bank, which is under the ban of the postal authorities. This last remittance came to hand promptly. Another case mentioned in the correspondence was that of same F. Carter of Robelline, La. whose notes in the New Orleans National went to protest because the remittance had been captured and destroyed. Appeals to the local Post Office have been fruitiess. Not a single case has been traced to the perpetrators nor an arrest made. Meanwhile the number of letters rifled has been constantly on the increase.

Both bodies were recovered thirty minutes later, but life was extinct.

Chicago Wants the Convention. CHICAGO, Nov. O.—Chicago is going after the next National Republican Convention. At a meeting held this afternoon at the Grand Pa cific Hotel, the matter was fully discussed by prominent politicians, and it was the opinion that, while no open fight should be made for the honor, a dignified effort should be put forth for it. Other meetings will be held to take such stops as are deemed necessary to secure the plum again for Chicago.

NOT A SPECK ON THE HORIZON FORE-BODING DANGER TO PEACE.

Blackthorns in Irish Politics have Not Tended to Alter the Government's Polley -England's Isolated Position on the Tariff Question-She Will Stay in Egypt as Long as Egypt Needs Her. LONDON, Nov. R.-At the Lord Mayor's ban-in the course of his address, commented upon the legislation of the past ression of P rila-ment, which, he said, was satisfactory to the Government and acceptable to the people. Regarding affairs in Ireland, Lord Salisbury said that the work which Mr. Balfour, the Chief Secretary, had done in that country in the last four years was the best ever done by a statesman. This statement was greeted with cheers. Continuing, his Lordship said: "What we have recently seen in Ireland has not altered our policy, nor has it made us think that a domestic Legislature in Ireland

"What we have recently seen in Ireland has not altered our policy, nor has it made us think that a domestic Legislature in Ireland would be distinguished by peace or abstinence from the use of blackthorns or by freedom from the curse of ecclesiastical domination." [Cries of "Hear! Hear!"]

As to foreign affairs, the Premier said there was not a single speck of cloud upon the horizon foreboding danger to the peace which prevails. It seemed that the spirit of nations was changing toward industrial competition. The great present question for consideration was the treaties of commerce which expire in 1892. The question of tatiffs was engaging the attention of various nations. Though with respect to material warfare, Lord Salisbury said he could hold out the most promising anticipations, so far as industrial warfare was concerned, having as a weapon protective legislation, he feared that Great Britain would occupy for a time a peculiar, isolated position. The recent elections in America had shown that the slight reaction against protection had lost its force. [Cries of Hear!" "Hear!"]

Continuing, he-said:

The one colony we are able to cite as a free trader, New South Wales, no longer wears an unspotted robe. We shall have the advantage, therefore, before long of being the Athanasius contra munchum of free trade."

Referring to Egypt, he said that the Government was not responsible for the condition in which it felt itself to be in that country. England had made a great sacrifice in order to rescue Egypt from the evils which threatened to destroy the country, and it was here duty to remain there until the Egyptian Government was strong enough to repei external invasions and quell internal disorder. Until that end was attained the Premier declared the Government could not consider England's duty achieved. [Cheers.]

Great preparations had been made for the usual parade to-day and other ceremonies attendant upon the inauguration of the Lord Mayor elect, David Evans, Eso. Though the parade was carried out as arranged,

A POLICY OF RECUPERATION.

Italy's Premier Says His Country Will Do Her Best to Strengthen Peace.

BOME, Nov. O.-The Marquis di Rudini, the Italian Premier, to-day delivered a long speech at Milan. He said not only were the estimated receipts fully equal to the expenditures, but even a small surplus in receipts might be ex-pected. The Government, he said, would inur no new debts. Referring to the recent pilgrim incidents in Rome, the Marquis di Rudini declared that he was firmly opposed to the abolition or modifi-cation of the Papai Guarantees law. Pilgrims, he said, might come to Italy with no fear of

he said, might come to Italy with no fear of molestation.

Continuing, the Marquis said that Italy's relations with foreign powers were friendly and that she would do her best to strengthen peace. The various governments of Europe were inspired with great prudence and moderation. Italy should have no fear of the grouping of friendly allied powers. Italy had renewed her adhesion to the Tripic Alliance in order to guarantee a state of affairs fitted to romote a policy of recuperation.

In conclusion the Marquis di Rudini said: "We have constantly striven to dispel the distrust that France feels toward Italy. The recent participation of the French in the fêtes at Nice, upon the occasion of the unveiling in that city of the statue of the Italian patrict. Garibaidi, was an assurance of the renewal of the cordiality which has always been dear to Italians."

Alluding to the Vatican he said: "We have in our midst the Papacy, which sometimes assumes a threatening attitude, but its sphere of action is limited to the exercise of spiritual powers not only by a law which cannot be lightly contravened, but also by the almost sumes a threatening attitude, but its sphere of action is limited to the exercise of spiritual powers not only by a law which cannot be lightly contravened, but also by the almost unanthnous consent of those who thought themselves most religious. The country's ecclesiastical policy has now become traditional. The honor and strongth of the kingdom of Italy must be scrupulously maintained. The depiorable incidents produced by a few short-sighted persons will not make us deviate from that policy. Not for so slight a matter will we raise questions affecting the Constitution of the kingdom, nor will we tamper with the impovable statutory law of guarantees, the wisdom and expediency of which have been proved by long experience. Italy will not fall in this respect owing to liberty of conscience and religious toleration.

"It is our boast and profession that pilgrims from the whole world may be confident that the laws will protect them on coming to Rome to pay devout homage to the Pope. Strong in the present and confident in the future, we fearlessly guarantee the fullest liberty in Rome."

Premier Rudini's remarks concerning the Papacy have produced a had impression at the Vatican, the programme tending to make the Pope only the first subject of the King. The Pope will prepare a sharp note in reply.

LEPERS IN BOKHARA.

Unfortunate Men Torn from Their Famille

by Order of the Government. Sr. PETERSBURG, Nov. O .- A letter from Samarcand says that the Emir of Bokhara has issued a decree prohibiting the marriage of lepers. It appears that in a portion of the town of Bokhara lepers have been for genera-tions past in the habit of intermarrying with one another, and no supervision is exercised over them. Consequently the place has become known as the plague spot of Asia. The Emir some time ago called in the advice of Itussian medical men as to what means should be taken to get rid of the evil.

These have made their recommendations to the effect that the lepers should be entirely isolated, and that none so afflicted should be permitted to live in the marital relation. The enforcement of these decrees is being carried out with Asiatic severity, and the scenes of misery between the separated families are described as most pitiable. In several instances lepers have slain themselves rather than be parted from their wives and children. Even with all this harsbness it will take some time to stamp out the plague spot of Asia.

EXCITEMENT IN BERLIN.

Many Bank Depositors Withdrawing Their Money-Both the Sommerfelds Bend.

BEBLIN, Nov. 9 .- A large number of the customers of the great banking firms on Leipzigerstrasse, alarmed by the recent failures of Hirschfeld & Wolf and Friedlander & Sommerfeld, to-day visited the bankers and withdrew their deposits. There was great excitement among the depositors. was great excitement among the depositors, and it was found necessary to detail a number of policemen for the special purpose of keeping the crowd in order. There was a run upon the banks generally. All demands were met, however, and this fact tended in a great measure to allay the excitement. The feeling is now becoming quieter.

The Sommerfelds, members of the firm of Friedlander & Sommerfeld, bankers, who failed on Saturday last, and who opened veins in their arms and then shot themselves in the head with revolvers, are now both dead. The father died in the hospital to-day; the son died yesterday.

RAIDED A THIEVES DEN.

The London Police Make a Haul of Ten Burgiare and a Lot of Plunder. LONDON, Nov. 9 .- An exciting incident in the life of the police of this city occurred to-day. City Road was a rendezvous for thieves. Plans were laid to make a descent upon the place, and it was decided that a favorable opportunity presented itself to-day, when an unusually large number of persons well known to the police had gathered in the saloon. A number of policemen were detailed for this service. They proceeded by twos and threes in the direction of the saloon, and tried in every way to hide their destination from the knowledge of any one who might convey intelligence to the inmates.

Their movements attracted no attention, and they reached and surrounded the saloon without its occupants being aware of their presence. Then the officer in charge of the police, accompanied by a number of his subordinates, made a rush for the doors and entered the place. The occupants of the saloon, though taken by surprise, retained their presence of mind and made a desperate resistance. Revolvers were drawn, but before they could be used the whole gang was overnowered. Among those captured by the police were ten burglars, who were fairly loaded down with spolis.

The police made a search of the saloon and found secreted in various places an immense quantity of plunder, including laces, sliks, jewelry, and watches, all of which had been stolen at various times.

The police are congratulating themselves upon the fact that among their prisoners is the chief of the gang, a man who has hitherto borne a high local reputation.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S BIRTHDAY. A Gold Cigar Box Presented to Ilim by the LONDON, Nov. O.—To-day is the fiftieth anniversary of the birth of his Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, he having been born at Buck-ingham Palace on Nov. 0, 1841. The occasion is being colebrated in a quiet manner at Sandringham. A large number of congratulatory letters and telegrams have been received by his Highness, and many presents have been forwarded to him from various parts of Great Britain and the Continent.

The Prince of Wales, through his patronage of various London theatres, has done much to make the success of numerous plays produced at those establishments, and the managers and actors were desirous of showing in some way their appreciation. Some time ago a movement was started among the dramatic profession looking to the formation of a lund to purchase a present to be given to the fund poured in rapidly, and those having the affair in hand decided upon a gold cigar box as a suitable token of their regards. To-day Sir Augustus Harris, Mr. John Hare, Mr. Baneroft, Mr. Beerbohm Tree, and Mr. D'Oyly Carte, representing the theatrical profession, went from London to Sandringham, where they presented their gift to the Prince.

The present is a superb specimen of the goldsmith's art. It weighs 100 ounces. The top of the box is surmounted by the three ostrich feathers forming the coat of arms of the Prince of Wales, set with diamonds. his Highness, and many presents have been

THE CRISIS IN BRAZIL

Much Discontent Over Da Fonseca's Revolutionary Action.

LONDON, Nov. 9.-Despatches from Pernambuco show that the troubles in Brazil are approaching a crisis, and much anxiety is expressed in financial and commercial circles regarding the outcome of President da Fon-seca's action in dissolving Congress and assuming the rôle of dictator, which he laid down after his election to the Presidency. Many grave doubts are expressed as to the success of this political move.

The despatches say that in Pernambuco there is general discontent at President da Fonseca's action, but there is nothing in them to show that the people have done anything further than to express their disapprobation of his course.

From the province of Rio Grande do Sul, however, comes intelligence of an alarming nature. The local Government is said to have refused to acquiesce in the assumption by Da Fonseca of the powers of a dictator, and has declared the independence of the province.
