Wanamaker Encyclopedia Club

We have arranged with the Publishers of the New Standard American Encyclopedia to supply a large number of sets for those who join the Wanamaker Club at a little more than third the published price.

Join the Wanamaker Encyclopedia Club, paying $1, and the complete set of eight volumes is delivered at once—you to pay $1.50 monthly for the term of one year in full for the great work. The payments outlined above entitle you to the work in cloth binding—very substantial, too. But a more elegant half-morocco binding (which is especially recommended) may be had by making the monthly payments $2.

Descriptive pamphlet is yours for the asking—a postal card request will bring it.

And further, even though you join the club and take the Encyclopedia, it may be returned, with full refund of money paid, if within ten days you think it does not meet your needs. That shows our confidence in this new and great reference work.

Authentic Character of the Work

The promoters of the New Standard American Encyclopedia secured a corps of writers whose scholarship was beyond question, and whose reputation was and is acknowledged in the world of letters.

John Clark Ridpath, A. M., LL. D., was chosen editor-in-chief. His reputation as a historian, scholar and thinker is co-extensive with the United States, and his competency for the task imposed upon him cannot be questioned. He has been assisted throughout by a large number of distinguished writers and scholars and a group of specialists numbering over one hundred, and the efforts of all these have given an authenticity and a literary flavor to every department which make it invaluable as a reference work.

A Great Popular Reference Library

The New Standard American Encyclopedia is, as the name implies, an encyclopedia for Americans. More than any other work of its kind it popularizes knowledge and makes it accessible and interesting. This is done without the slightest sacrifice of scholarship. Even those topics which belong to the profounder sciences and to the higher branches of abstruse learning are so simplified as to make them the property of all.
