ROOSEVELT'S ROUGH OUTING.

THE PRESIDENT ENJOYING HIM-SELF IN THE WOODS.

Has Friends to Dinner-Tin Plates and Hunting Knives Used-His Guests Talk Freely With Elm on All Subjects-Bob Robo Refuses to Send His Dogs Over

SMEDES, Miss., Nov. 16 .- At Camp Roosevelt on the Little Sunflower this was altogether a day of rest. Some of the Smedes contingent who have been visiting the camp day by day were invited out to dinner. It was the most sumptuous meat the camp has had. It was served on tin plates, and carved with hunting knives. and many of the guests ate standing because the seats at the camp table were so low that the diners scarcely reached the In that company is a young woman named pine planks on which the meal was served. His hosts have respected his desire not to have a camp with "all the comforts of home," and as a result it has been as simple as the Illinois (entral tie camp over on the Coon Bayou and indeed far simpler, for the tie camp has a wooden kitchen and china plates. It has rather disappointed the President, however, that he has not had a chance to kill a bear running freely in front of the dogs. The big bear which got away from the party last night was a bear after his own heart. When he made a remark to that effect at dinner to-day, Major Helm, the oldest member of the party said:

That bear would not have got away if the right men had been after the bear. This was such an obvious "josh" that everybody yelled and the President laughed louder than anybody else. The bear that Holt Collier chased down the river yesterday, lest him and the degs by crossing and recrossing the Little Sunflower. Soon and recrossing the Little Sunflower. Soon after it made the last crossing two shots were heard in a negro clearing, about eight miles from camp. Some of the dogs hung around the clearing until early this morning and then came in.

Most of the dogs are improving. Old Remus, the veteran of the pack, is only able to crawl from one place to another where tid bits are dispensed and and whine dispensed and and whine dismally as his weary joints ache. He is the one dog of the camp which is free from the menace of Holt Collier's long black snake whip when he approaches the quarters set apart for human comfort.

the quarters set apart for human comfort. The President nopes to have good hunting to-morrow and on Tuesday. An energetic effort will be made to give him a clear shot at at least one lear before the dogs drag it down. One advantage of his visit, which was not a consideration when he first accepted the invitation of President Fish and Mr. Parker and Mr. Magnum, has been his opportunity of meeting Southern planters and business men on the free and cordial terms of frank sincerity. They have not foreborn to discuss anything with him, from the tax on cotton to the Booker Washington incident. with him, from the tax on cotton to the Booker Washington incident.

The President evidently enjoys this study of the every-day point of view of the Southern planter. It will be retuembered that early in the hunt some of the President's hosts were worled for fear that there would not be dogs enough and telegraphed to Mr. Bob Bobo of Bobo station for bis There was some apprehen-famous pack. There was some apprehen-sion that the dogs would not appear, and consequently no great surprise when they did not. Thereby hangs a tale When Gov. Longino and his friends of the Hunting Club of the Osarks invited the President to go bear hunting they, too, telegraphed Mr. Beb Bobo of Bebo station for dogs Mr. Bob Bebo of Bobo station was at that onsiderably exercised by the Presi-appointment of Edgar Wilson to be States Marshal. Gossip said that

But, at any rate, when Mr. Longino sent to Mr. Bob o of Bobo station for his bear dogs this is the answer that came back: "Why doesn't be get Booker Washington to get his bear dogs for him?" The criticism implied in the remark of Mr. Bobo of Bobo station seems to trouble Mr. Roosevelt as little as the absence of Mr. Bobo's pack.

Some Papers Claim Everything.

The Sun doesn't. It may be the best newspaper in the United States and some folks think it is. But if it isn't it ought to be. It puts a premium on brains and pays the premium. It establishes a quarantine against mediocrity and maintains it. Its staff is the highest paid of any newspaper staff in the world. They are at work in every quarter of the g'obe and the best products of their brains are found in The Sun.—Adv.

GAMBOL OF THE LAMBS in Comedy Founded on a Real Stage Pas sion-Played on Their Own Stage. The annual gambol of the Lambs was held last night at their clubhouse in West Thirty-sixth street. Last year's gambol caused a stir, for the Lambs gambolled in "The Passion Play" at the Garrick Theatre, by the courtesy of Charles Frohman, the When certain ministers made a fuss over the performance Mr. Frohman said the Lambs really couldn't use his playhouse to gambol in again. At this year's gambol in the Lambs' own private theatre the seating capacity was limited. The offering was a two-act comedy by Shepherd Clay M. Greene, preceded by a burlesque on "At the Telephone."

Mr. Greene founded his comedy on an incident which came to his attention after he rewrote the book of "The Silver Slipper," New Haven a certain young Yale man who comes of a well-known family became ready and willing slave to the charmer's whims.

He forgot all about college, but the college authorities didn't forget him. They hunted him up and named the day he must return or be dismissed. His companions came here to fetch him. He wouldn't listen to them. Then they appealed to the young woman. She had some sense, and the next time the enamored youth met her at the stage door there was a frost in the air. The youth went back to New Haven. When he got there he realized for the first time how near he had come to being dismissed from college. Also he learned why the young woman had turned him to be the control of the down, and, being a gentleman, he wrote her a letter of thanks. That is the foundation for Mr. Greene's comedy. There are seven speaking parts in it and they were played last night by Morgan Coman, Robert Loraine, Maclyn Arbuckle, Thomas Ferris, Louis Baker, William Lewers and Herbert Ayling. Edwin Arden burlesqued "At the Telephone."

Two of the rôles in Mr. Greene's comedy were women's parts. The Lambs don't relish publicity concerning their gambols and no member would tell last night who were the two men who donned skirts. A the best-known actors were at the gambol,

BURIED HIMSELF IN A GRAVE

CHURCH SEXTON FINDS A LIVE MAN IN A COFFIN BOX.

Man Puts on a Shroud and Goes Down Into the Grave-Found When the Sexton Took the Box Lld Off-Says He Has Tried the Same Thing Before. BALTIMORE, Nov. 16 .- This morning at

Waverly it was found that a man very much alive was to all intents and purposes buried in a grave in the yard surrounding St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church. The discovery was made by John Hinkel, sexton of the church. Mr. Hinkel visited a newly made grave that had been prepared for the reception of the body of Mrs. Ella Prince, the wife of William A. Prince, who died on last Thursday. Her funeral took place at 2 o'clock this afternoon. When Sexton Hinkel anproached the open grave to see if everything was in readiness for the burial, he was astonished to find an unusual condition of affairs prevailing. The sexton raised the top of the box in the grave and to his amazement a human form, clad in a shroud of white, arose and came forth as though risen from the dead.

Sexton Hinkel was frightened, but he is nervy man and as the uncanny inhabitant of the grave stepped forth he grabbed him and held him until policemen arrived and took him to the station house.

The man had with him a satchel containing a curious collection of death robes He said his name was John M. Badollet and that he was from Wilmington, Del. his home being at 513 King street in that city. He acknowledged also that he had buried himself; that he had seen an announcement of a burial in a morning newspaper that was to take place in the gravevard of St. John's Church Sunday afternoon and that led him to bury himself. When found by Sexton Hinkel, Badollet was attired in a long shroud which bore the following inscription in printed letters:

"J. Bernard, N. G.," Under this was a cross bearing the inscription: "James M. Bernard," and under that the further inscription, "October 4, 1852; May 11, 1902," and "1902; another boy." Badollet made this statement: "I was born in Switzerland and have been in this country about fifteen years I was born on Oct. 4, 1852. I am by trade a watchmaker and typewriter machine maker. The last time I buried myself was at Bristol, Pa., May 11, 1902."

MILITIA AND TRADES UNIONS. C. F. U. Shy of Discussing the Potter Case, Though a Delegate Invites Debate.

The Central Federated Union was ex pected to take up at its meeting yesterday the subject of the expulsion of William Potter from the Painters and Decorators' Union in Schenectady because he belonged to the National Guard in violation of a rule of the union. But the C. F. U. was shy of tackling the subject as a body, though the delegates were willing to express themselves about it individually.

James Stewart, delegate of the Eccentric Association of Engineers, which does not forbid its members from joining the National Guard, brought up the subject yesterday by moving that the C. F. U. appoint a committee of five to investigate the question of union men enlisting in the militia and to make a recommendation thereon. "Oh." said Delegate Sanderman of the Brotherhood of Painters, "the unions know how they should act in that matter."

Stewart waited for a few minutes, but as no one seconded his motion it lapsed without debate. Stewart said later that in his opinion the Schenectady union had no right to interfere with a member's right not stand for any action like that of the Schenectady union. It is better to have a National Guard, and in case of strikes it i better to have union men members of it."

THREE FELS AND A GIRL. The Causes of Commotion in a Bathtub in a Dark Room.

From the Chicago Inter Ocean.
There lives a family on Delaware place with a palate for eels. As often as twice a week the head of the family carries home from the fish market two or three of the slippery, snake-like wrigglers. He usually returns home late at night, and it is his custom to put the eels in a bucket of water, where they are kept until morning In the front rooms of the apartment where ives this family are two young women from ndiana, who, during their sojourn in the city are boarding with the family of eel eaters. Each of the young women has eaten of the cooked food, but neither of them ever saw took home three eels. After stumbling about the darkened house in a futile search for a bucket are hit upon another plan. He tiptoed to the bathroom and turned the eels loose in the bathrub.

As soon as the house was quiet the younger of the two sisters, dressed for her dreams, stole out of her room with a heavy crash towel thrown across her arm, and proceeded to the bathroom. The room was dark and she could find no matches Not earing to search for a match she decided to bathe in the dark, and accordingly turned on the hot and cold water. When the tub was well filled the young woman stepped in. The hot water had put life into the slippery eels, and when the young woman got both feet into the tub the creatures slid about her ankles and across her feet.

That was all she remembered. With one hysterical scream she began kicking furiously and crying for help. Her elder sister, fearing she was being murdered, ran to the bathroom, but found the door locked. After a couple of moments had elapsed, the girl imprisoned in the bathroom tell out of the tub and managed to unlork the door. Not hearing the anxious questions, her frightened sister was crying at her, she tairly flew down the hallway, clad only in the darkness.

The whole family was aroused by the screams, and lights flared up in every apartment in the big building. The women of the house and the elder sister, after fifteen minutes work, aucceded in calming the frightened bather.

"What in the world is the matter, sister?" asked the elder one.
"Ch. horrors!" shuddered the hysterical girl, "the bathtub is fill of snakes!"
By this time the head of the family, elad in paramas, was tottering up and down the stamped his feet, hit his head against the wall, and at last controlled himself sufficiently to light the gas in the bathroom and called his wife to take a look at the room. The floor was flooded with water and two of the cels were wrigging upon the floor.

IN JORDAN'S SACRED WATERS. Holy Land. From the Landon Telegraph

The traveller in the Holy Land will wit ness faw sights which will interest him more than that of the Russian pilgrims at the annual Epiphany coremonies on the banks of the River Jordan. A week before the festival itself crowds of these Slav peasants are seen trudging along the Jericho road and earry-all on their backs. Some of the pilgrims are old and weatherworn, others roung and cheerful, while a few, overcome by sleep and fatigue, are lying prone along the roadside. But somehow the whole lot young and old, manage to reach the banks of the river in good time for the ceremony. They spend the night, perhaps in the Russian hospice at Jericho, where they simply huddle together like a flock of sheep. Before dawn the rooms are empty and the whole crown has gathered on the bank, where Greek crowd has rathered on the bank, where Greek priests, who will presently drive a most lugrative trade, await them. The principal articles sold are branches of trees from various sacred soots, stones from the Mountain of Temptation hard by, plants from the wilderness and rosaries with olive stones for beads. To whatever religious value is claimed for these articles the Russian peasants implicitly give aredence, and they willingly pay their money to obtain them.

During the nours immediately preceding peasants implicity give credence, and they willingly pay their not ey to obtain them.

During the nours immediately preceding the ceremony the notley crowd is occupied in prayer and silent devotion. To many pilgrims this occasion is one of the greatest life can bring, namely, to be permitted not only to visit the Jordan, but actually to bathe in its sacred waters. Suddenly chanting is heard, and the crowd quickly opens to let a procession of purple-clad ecclesistics pass to the waters, then the pilgrims close in again and station themselves along the banks, eager and waterful. And now, quite reverently, a jewelled cross is laid by the patriarch on the surface of the stream to bless it, and no sooner does the sacred symbol touch the water than a dive is made into it by the enthusiastic crowd, which splashes and sprays and receives the baptism, and the longer it hists the greater the merit the pilgrim will enloy.

All dripping with water, each shroud is now wring out and stowed away to serve as the cerceloth when the pilgrimnes of life is over and the body is ready for the grave. As the traveller rides away the next day to Jerusalen he will see these childlike peasants, bedraggled with mud and fatigued by constant sleeplessness, plodding along toward the holy city, chanting and singing as they go and leaning on their sticks of reed. But there is now a smile on their faces and loy in their hearts, for have they not bathed in the waters of Jordan?

This Frog Knows a Good Thing.

From the Philadelphia Record. James Anderson, who lives on the old Anderson place, two miles below Phoenixville, has a huge pet frog. Three years ago this month the frog made its appearance. It was sitting, on a cold and frosty morning, in front of the door of the old Anderson spring house when the milkmaid opened the door to put her pail of milk in the spring, and as she entered, it hopped in behind her with an affectionate look.

hopped in behind her with an affectionate look.

"Goodness, said the maid, "but you're a big fellow." And she patted the frog on the back.

It was a big fellow. It was fifteen inches the back.

It was a big fellow. It was fifteen inches one with a good-natured grunt, it hopped out of reach of the mikmaid's hand, and partially buried itself in a bed of clay in the springhouse a darkest cerner. There, in a stipor, neither eating or drinking, it remained until the spring, when it departed with the coming of the robin redbreast.

Each autumn, since then, the frog has appeared at the first sign of frost, and made his winter bed in the springhouse.

This year he came as usual. But he was awakened from his sleep the other day. An experiment was tried upon him.

They lifted him from his warm clay nest, put him in a wagon, drove him a mile down the pike, and them laid hum by the side of the road.

But before evening he was back again. The mikmaid found him at sunset seated before the springhouse door, waiting patiently to be let in.

HOTELS FULL FOR HORSE SHOW. Many Badly in Need of Room, and This Will Be a Great Week for All.

The hotels have entered on a week of great prosperity, as they always do when the Horse Show opens. The biggest hotels have been booking engagements for rooms and suites for a month past.

From all over the country wealthy folks come to attend the Horse Show, and the hotels reap'a harvest. A few years ago Horse Show week was welcomed by the hotel men, but this season's business has been so good in advance of the show that many hotel men sincerely wish it came many hotel men sincerely wish it came later, when they may have more room.

The Waldorf-Asteria, the Holland House and the Manhattan are crowded. Froprietor Boldt of the Waldorf is sere pressed for more room. Most of his employees who sleep in the hotel have been obliged to vacate their rooms this week. Big as the Manhattan is the same conditions prevail there.

There three are mentioned merely to show These three are mentioned merely to show how great a number of folks from out of town are in the city. The Broadway hotels are all crowded. Old-time houses like the Fifth Avenue have their own patrons who would go to no other. Room is always reserved there for the old customers.

The smaller hotels catch the overflow of the larger ones, and this week will be a banner one to the hotel mon.

TWO FISHERMEN DROWNED. Shark Bit Their Trawl and They Were Lost in Seeking to Secure It. GLOUCESTER, Mass, Nov. 18.-Charles

Bungy and James Bird, members of the crew of the fishing schooner Hines, were drowned while hauling trawls on Atherton Banks on Oct 24. The Hines reached here to-day and reported her loss.

A shark bit the trawl in two as the men were hauling it and Burgy and Bird took part of it to the schooner and returned for the remainder. They were never seen afterward and the supposition is that they overloaded their dory with fish and it was swamped in the heavy seas. WORKMAN'S QUEER DEATH. Smothered Under a Mass of Shavings take him among the tamale population of the irrespressible and unterrified "Fifteenth, an interesting account of the "election baile" was given. Said he:

"Both parties, by common consent and mutual understanding, use the 'baile,' there known as a place of confinement for Mexican voters for an American Congressman. In that land of independence and freedom, it is said that a male Mexican begins to exercise the right of suffrage before he attains the age of majority and never relinquishes it or ceases to exercise that privilege until many, many years after his immortal spirit has gone to that frealm where 'the rainbow never fades.' In fact, it is said that the climate of the Brownsville region produces an inborn desire in a Mexican to vote, and he never knows or cares for what or for whom he is voting, provided he gets in the 'biley' and the 'biley' bead man places the ballot between his cigarette-stained finger.

"Two or three days before the election these naturalized as well as the unnaturalized citizens from the sister republic across the Rio Grande are rounded up and run into the balle like sheep or cattle through a chure, when once penned there he remains until he disharges the high and responsible function of citizenship, for the discharge of wach duty he is prepared through 'biley' training. During his confinement in the 'biley' for purely patriotic purposes he is furnished with all the whiskey, tobacco, cigarette papers, grub and music necessary for his comfort and enloyment.

"On the night previous to the election the women and children are admitted into the biley' and then begins a revery and carousal calculated to arouse and startle Bacchus and his devotees from their slumbers in that torrid land where water freezes not and snow never falls. On the norning of the election the women and children are admitted into the boiley and then begins a reverted in carriages to the polls, where they vote the ballots prepared for them by the proprietor of the 'biley'. Their voting privileges having been exercised,

ABJURING THE JEWISH FAITH Ceremony at the Baptism of a Paris Editor as a Christian.

From the Courrier des Etats Unis.

Several journals sent their reporters to the Church of Saint Thomas Aquinas to be present at the ceremony of the baptism of M. Gaston Pollonnais, editor of the Gaulois, who abjured the Jewish religion in which he was born and in which his father was one of the most important leaders.

This unusual ceremony naturally attract-

This unusual ceremony naturally attracted to the church a large number of people Among them were Arthur Meyer, Francois Coppée, Jules Lemaître, Gen. deBoisdeffre, Gen. Gonse, the Marquis de Dion and several Nationalist deputies.

The abjuration took place according to the ancient rites which are always the same the ancient rites which are always the same, whatever may be the age of the person presented for baptism. M. Gaston Pollonnais took his place in front of the chair at the foot of the steps leading to the altar. His godfather, Gen. Récamler, and his godfmother, the Comtesse de Béarn, were seated to the right and to the left of the altar. In front of M. Pollonnais was an immense lighted candle. The catechumen held in his hand a large gilt-edged missal.

is hand a large gilt-edged missal.

Father Domenech, an apostolical mis-ionary, approached the Gaulois's editor and began the ritual:
"Quid petis?" was the first question put to
M. Pollonnais, to which he replied:

Baptismuta " The baptism then began. Father Domenech placed salt upon the lips of M. Pollonnais and solemnly pronounced the words

"Gaston Joseph, accipe sal sapientia." Then the priest continued: Erorciso te in nomine patris. The godfather, godmother and priests then grasped the great candle and recited together the Credo and Pater Nosier, which M. Pollonnais followed in his missal. After that Father Domenech proceeded with the acramental formula: "Gaston Joseph, do you renounce Satan?" "I renounce him," replied M. Pollonnais, "Do you renounce all his works and pomps?"

"I renounce them."
"Do you renounce Judaical perfidy and all Hebrew superstition? I renounce them. "Do you wish to be baptized?"
"I do."

Finally the priest pronounced the words "Vade in pace et Dominus sit tecum!" And Gaston Pollonnais was baptized. In the course of his sermon Father Domen-

"After having passed part of myexistence among the Apaches of the Rocky Mountains, I never dreamed that I would be called back here to experience the great joy of receiving you to-day in the bosom of the Catholic Church. "At Nice, around the grave of your father, you listened to sad sectarian words which tormented you. Henceforth you will hear only the words of the priest."
