

RAT CATCHER AND THE MAYOR

MR. FREY AND MR. GAYNOR
HAVE A TALK ON THE CLASSICS.

Mayor Adolphus E. E. Frey, who has been in the city for some time, and Mr. J. J. Gaynor, who has been in the city for some time, had a talk on the classics. The Mayor said that he had been in the city for some time and that he had been in the city for some time. Mr. Gaynor said that he had been in the city for some time and that he had been in the city for some time.

The Mayor and the Minister talked for more than half an hour on the subjects of rats, Epictetus, waterways, roaches, exemption from jury duty, toothaches among our judges, Petrarch's written stuff, Plutarch and odds and ends, Epictetus, a political organization of the Twenty-fourth Assembly district which supported Mayor Gaynor in the last election.

Mr. Frey said he learned yesterday from the Mayor's own lips why Mr. Gaynor prefers Epictetus to most other writers. The friendship between the Mayor and Mr. Frey, it will be remembered, reached the point of the Minister's last visit to the Mayor last month to ask whether there wasn't some method whereby a professional rat catcher with a secret process and therefore without assistants could be exempted from jury duty. Mayor Gaynor not only answered the first letter but a few days after the incident he wrote the political club president to the general effect that upon reading THE SUN's remarks about the rat catcher the Mayor was fully convinced that the rat catcher also was a scholar and a gentleman.

Mr. Frey said Mr. Gaynor told him yesterday that Mr. Frey last evening after returning from the City Hall to his flat in Harlem, "why of all the philosophers Epictetus was his favorite."

Mayor Gaynor's answer, according to the Minister, was that the Mayor especially admired Epictetus because the ancient philosopher had left nothing in his own handwriting. The hour at which Mr. Frey told of this statement of the Mayor was so late that it was deemed inadvisable to return to the Mayor's office to ask Mr. Gaynor whether he had in mind the recent cases of some public men who suffered inconvenience and distress by leaving around thoughtlessly some of their inmost thoughts in their own handwriting.

"That very answer convinced me of what I have thought for a long time," the rat catcher went on. "One thing I should like to have told him, only I feared I would go too far, and that is that a vast quantity of the great work of this glorious country is still to be done personally by Mayor Gaynor."

"You mean that he is contented to be the rat catcher?" asked Mr. Frey. "During our talk last evening we did not discuss the support our independent Democratic club gave to the Mayor during his campaign. Nevertheless, I will speak of it in THE SUN because if I brought it up Mr. Gaynor would think I am a hypocrite."

"You are right," continued the rat catcher, who had kindly called up to say that he would be glad to give to a reporter his impressions of the Mayor. "I am not a hypocrite, but I am a very useful citizen. I have done more to show his best side than any of his recent cronies. Mr. Gaynor writes me that he reads of our correspondence only in THE SUN, but I assured him that the correspondence published in his own papers throughout the State and country."

"How excellent it would have been," some one said to me the other day, if you had but discussed the Mayor's correspondence with me in your profession." But even if the publicity has come when I am an established rat catcher I rejoice in the incident because of the good it has done Mayor Gaynor."

"Are you officially engaged to secure rats for the city?" the Minister asked. "The answer is, yes," replied the rat catcher. "I am a very useful citizen. I have done more to show his best side than any of his recent cronies. Mr. Gaynor writes me that he reads of our correspondence only in THE SUN, but I assured him that the correspondence published in his own papers throughout the State and country."

"How excellent it would have been," some one said to me the other day, if you had but discussed the Mayor's correspondence with me in your profession." But even if the publicity has come when I am an established rat catcher I rejoice in the incident because of the good it has done Mayor Gaynor."

"Are you officially engaged to secure rats for the city?" the Minister asked. "The answer is, yes," replied the rat catcher. "I am a very useful citizen. I have done more to show his best side than any of his recent cronies. Mr. Gaynor writes me that he reads of our correspondence only in THE SUN, but I assured him that the correspondence published in his own papers throughout the State and country."

"How excellent it would have been," some one said to me the other day, if you had but discussed the Mayor's correspondence with me in your profession." But even if the publicity has come when I am an established rat catcher I rejoice in the incident because of the good it has done Mayor Gaynor."

"Are you officially engaged to secure rats for the city?" the Minister asked. "The answer is, yes," replied the rat catcher. "I am a very useful citizen. I have done more to show his best side than any of his recent cronies. Mr. Gaynor writes me that he reads of our correspondence only in THE SUN, but I assured him that the correspondence published in his own papers throughout the State and country."

LIVE TOPICS ABOUT TOWN.

"Next to a load of dynamite the freight that is given the widest berth is an occupied bottle," said the driver. "No man should haul an unlabelled hove of bees through the city. I never haul a hove of bees without putting up the sign 'Beehives.' Sometimes when crossing the ferry I come pretty near having the boat all to myself. People would rather see the bees than the hives. There would be a lively circus on board. I have seen that happen, and both drivers and horses went around with closed eyes for a week. If a man who was not really hauling bees didn't want to be bothered and had no scruples against imposing on the public he could get plenty of room by putting up that sign 'Beehives.' Look out!"

There are daily aids to making the task of seeing New York easier than it used to be. The Fifth Avenue stages have not yet installed markers to point out the beauties along their route and the conductors do no more than call out the propinquity of the next stop. No attempt is made to increase the number of outside riders but the company to allow pedestrians to sell illustrated booklets that show the beauties of all the better known houses along Fifth Avenue with the names of the owners. This is undoubtedly an aid to the visitors from other towns, but it deprives New Yorkers of some of the harmoniousness of the city. The distribution of information that could always be found on top of the stages at this time of the year.

To get a profit out of a railroad the manager seeks loads both ways. If he has to haul cars one way empty it may mean a loss. It might seem that the same principle would apply in the running of the elevators in a business building, but in a least one establishment in this city a greater advantage is found in running the elevators one way empty.

Here there are six large elevators running in one direction and two groups of three each in the elevators of one group people are carried up only, while in the other they are brought down, all the passengers thus running one way empty.

This might seem like utilizing these elevators to only half their capacity, but in fact they are made to carry more people than they could if they were run both ways full.

There is no such inviting vision of the green vegetables of springtime as the market stalls of the Italian quarter offer at this season of the year. The casual visitor to this section would find kinds of edible greens that are quite unknown to the average American. In the center of the dandelion salad so much in demand now, Italians are especially fond of this dish, and those who are able to see what they are not able to eat. Workingmen coming back to their homes from various suburbs bring back the greens with them, and they are sold in the market stalls for a few cents a bunch. The greens are especially fond of this dish, and those who are able to see what they are not able to eat.

Workingmen coming back to their homes from various suburbs bring back the greens with them, and they are sold in the market stalls for a few cents a bunch. The greens are especially fond of this dish, and those who are able to see what they are not able to eat.

Workingmen coming back to their homes from various suburbs bring back the greens with them, and they are sold in the market stalls for a few cents a bunch. The greens are especially fond of this dish, and those who are able to see what they are not able to eat.

Workingmen coming back to their homes from various suburbs bring back the greens with them, and they are sold in the market stalls for a few cents a bunch. The greens are especially fond of this dish, and those who are able to see what they are not able to eat.

Workingmen coming back to their homes from various suburbs bring back the greens with them, and they are sold in the market stalls for a few cents a bunch. The greens are especially fond of this dish, and those who are able to see what they are not able to eat.

Workingmen coming back to their homes from various suburbs bring back the greens with them, and they are sold in the market stalls for a few cents a bunch. The greens are especially fond of this dish, and those who are able to see what they are not able to eat.

Workingmen coming back to their homes from various suburbs bring back the greens with them, and they are sold in the market stalls for a few cents a bunch. The greens are especially fond of this dish, and those who are able to see what they are not able to eat.

Workingmen coming back to their homes from various suburbs bring back the greens with them, and they are sold in the market stalls for a few cents a bunch. The greens are especially fond of this dish, and those who are able to see what they are not able to eat.

Workingmen coming back to their homes from various suburbs bring back the greens with them, and they are sold in the market stalls for a few cents a bunch. The greens are especially fond of this dish, and those who are able to see what they are not able to eat.

Workingmen coming back to their homes from various suburbs bring back the greens with them, and they are sold in the market stalls for a few cents a bunch. The greens are especially fond of this dish, and those who are able to see what they are not able to eat.

Workingmen coming back to their homes from various suburbs bring back the greens with them, and they are sold in the market stalls for a few cents a bunch. The greens are especially fond of this dish, and those who are able to see what they are not able to eat.

EVER THE MARRIAGE PROBLEM

THE "DAUGHTERS OF MONSIEUR DUPONT" AT THE COMEDY THEATRE

Bureau's Play Showing Amusing Effort to Harry Old Girls and Get Money at the Same Time Presented Chiefly by Mr. Irving and Miss Mackay. Laurence Irving did a good thing for himself when he decided to put Eugene Brieux's play, Les Trois Filles de Monsieur Dupont into English and play it. True, he might have found that by translating French "argot" into American slang, instead of the lingo of the Mile End road, it would have come in a little more handily for the audience and for the atmosphere, but no great harm was done. Anyhow the audience which saw the presentation of the piece by Mr. Irving, Miss Mackay and a good company last night at the Comedy Theatre, seemed to enjoy itself heartily.

There are enough situations and hints of situations outside to furnish a good program. No attempt is made to do the program to characterize the play as a comedy, but it is one in spite of that, and not a bit farcical, according to a man who seemed to know the difference between the two.

The three daughters of Monsieur Dupont are a source of great vexation to their father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract. The eldest daughter, Angèle, having committed an indiscretion, has been driven from home, and has gone to Paris some seventeen years before the story opens. Caroline, the second daughter, is a young girl of twenty, who is getting along in the world, and is a business woman. She is a source of great vexation to her father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

MORE GOOD PRICES FOR BOOKS.

THE "DAUGHTERS OF MONSIEUR DUPONT" AT THE COMEDY THEATRE

Bureau's Play Showing Amusing Effort to Harry Old Girls and Get Money at the Same Time Presented Chiefly by Mr. Irving and Miss Mackay. Laurence Irving did a good thing for himself when he decided to put Eugene Brieux's play, Les Trois Filles de Monsieur Dupont into English and play it. True, he might have found that by translating French "argot" into American slang, instead of the lingo of the Mile End road, it would have come in a little more handily for the audience and for the atmosphere, but no great harm was done. Anyhow the audience which saw the presentation of the piece by Mr. Irving, Miss Mackay and a good company last night at the Comedy Theatre, seemed to enjoy itself heartily.

There are enough situations and hints of situations outside to furnish a good program. No attempt is made to do the program to characterize the play as a comedy, but it is one in spite of that, and not a bit farcical, according to a man who seemed to know the difference between the two.

The three daughters of Monsieur Dupont are a source of great vexation to their father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract. The eldest daughter, Angèle, having committed an indiscretion, has been driven from home, and has gone to Paris some seventeen years before the story opens. Caroline, the second daughter, is a young girl of twenty, who is getting along in the world, and is a business woman. She is a source of great vexation to her father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

The scene is a highly laughable one, depicting the method of arranging marriage settlements among the French bourgeoisie. The uncle has lost all his money, but Dupont does not know it, and believing he is making at least one great alliance for his family he throws it all the money he has into the hands of the printer. After the marriage of the printer, the father, who is a printer, and who has hopes of obtaining a Government contract.

AUSTRALIA'S AMERICAN GO

MR. HAYNES OF MELBOURNE ON THE SPIRIT DOWN THERE.

Australians More Like Us Than Englishmen. Only They Love Sunlight More Than We Do—Business Methods Like Ours—First Impressions of New York. T. W. Haynes, a merchant of Melbourne, is paying his first visit to the United States and has only got as far as New York, but he has already found some points of great similarity as well as dissimilarity between here and home. "Australians are more like New Yorkers than Englishmen," said Mr. Haynes yesterday at the Belmont. "I find I can get about much more quickly than I could in London. You are more ready to do business, and a man who wants to do business doesn't have to wait three or four days for the other man to think about it."

The only objection to New York that I have found is that it is so difficult to get information. For instance, I wanted to find out when the next mail went to Australia, and nobody being able to inform me I called up the post office. I was told, to my amazement, that information of that character could not be given over the telephone. Then the other day I wished to get to Perth Amboy, and nobody seemed to know where it was or how to get there. When I was directed finally I found that I had been directed wrong."

If you ask an American a question in the street he looks along for a few feet before answering, then he looks suspiciously over his shoulder, says 'there!' and then hurries along. In London an Englishman will take you by the arm and direct you, and if you got lost in Melbourne an Australian would take you to your train or car and put you on it. "I am the Australian partner in a firm that has been operating in New Zealand for many years, but which is now opening a house in Melbourne, and I am over here looking principally for labor saving machinery. For the last five years I have been the manager of the biggest fertilizer business in Australia. I am also inquiring here into the question of fertilizer for export. Labor in Australia has grown very expensive, ordinary labor getting seven shillings a day ($1.75). Americans have charge of most of the big mines and smelting plants out there, and we use a great deal of American machinery."

"One particular cause of the high price of labor in Australia is the strength of the labor unions. Living is not expensive, being, I should say, not more than one-third of the cost here. I find New York very expensive. Certainly the food is no better than at home. I guess it is the electric clocks and the rugs in the rooms. Not by any means so many goods of American manufacture are handled in Australia as in England make. We want to introduce more American goods. "In regard to this climate, I find that I can get through with a drink of water here as I could in London, but the climate in Australia is even better. You can play golf there every day in the year, even when the temperature gets to 107 degrees. Life for the average man is unquestionably holds more there than here or in England. Then on Sundays you do not have to buy a horridly tough sandwich just as quickly as a drink of water. I miss here are little places into which one may drop and get a good, quiet cup of tea."

There is no question that the Australian and the American are very much alike, except that the Australian has more time to spare and is not so abrupt. When it comes to doing anything the Australian does it just as quickly as many goods of American manufacture are handled in Australia as in England make. We want to introduce more American goods. "In regard to this climate, I find that I can get through with a drink of water here as I could in London, but the climate in Australia is even better. You can play golf there every day in the year, even when the temperature gets to 107 degrees. Life for the average man is unquestionably holds more there than here or in England. Then on Sundays you do not have to buy a horridly tough sandwich just as quickly as a drink of water. I miss here are little places into which one may drop and get a good, quiet cup of tea."

There is no question that the Australian and the American are very much alike, except that the Australian has more time to spare and is not so abrupt. When it comes to doing anything the Australian does it just as quickly as many goods of American manufacture are handled in Australia as in England make. We want to introduce more American goods. "In regard to this climate, I find that I can get through with a drink of water here as I could in London, but the climate in Australia is even better. You can play golf there every day in the year, even when the temperature gets to 107 degrees. Life for the average man is unquestionably holds more there than here or in England. Then on Sundays you do not have to buy a horridly tough sandwich just as quickly as a drink of water. I miss here are little places into which one may drop and get a good, quiet cup of tea."

There is no question that the Australian and the American are very much alike, except that the Australian has more time to spare and is not so abrupt. When it comes to doing anything the Australian does it just as quickly as many goods of American manufacture are handled in Australia as in England make. We want to introduce more American goods. "In regard to this climate, I find that I can get through with a drink of water here as I could in London, but the climate in Australia is even better. You can play golf there every day in the year, even when the temperature gets to 107 degrees. Life for the average man is unquestionably holds more there than here or in England. Then on Sundays you do not have to buy a horridly tough sandwich just as quickly as a drink of water. I miss here are little places into which one may drop and get a good, quiet cup of tea."

There is no question that the Australian and the American are very much alike, except that the Australian has more time to spare and is not so abrupt. When it comes to doing anything the Australian does it just as quickly as many goods of American manufacture are handled in Australia as in England make. We want to introduce more American goods. "In regard to this climate, I find that I can get through with a drink of water here as I could in London, but the climate in Australia is even better. You can play golf there every day in the year, even when the temperature gets to 107 degrees. Life for the average man is unquestionably holds more there than here or in England. Then on Sundays you do not have to buy a horridly tough sandwich just as quickly as a drink of water. I miss here are little places into which one may drop and get a good, quiet cup of tea."

There is no question that the Australian and the American are very much alike, except that the Australian has more time to spare and is not so abrupt. When it comes to doing anything the Australian does it just as quickly as many goods of American manufacture are handled in Australia as in England make. We want to introduce more American goods. "In regard to this climate, I find that I can get through with a drink of water here as I could in London, but the climate in Australia is even better. You can play golf there every day in the year, even when the temperature gets to 107 degrees. Life for the average man is unquestionably holds more there than here or in England. Then on Sundays you do not have to buy a horridly tough sandwich just as quickly as a drink of water. I miss here are little places into which one may drop and get a good, quiet cup of tea."

There is no question that the Australian and the American are very much alike, except that the Australian has more time to spare and is not so abrupt. When it comes to doing anything the Australian does it just as quickly as many goods of American manufacture are handled in Australia as in England make. We want to introduce more American goods. "In regard to this climate, I find that I can get through with a drink of water here as I could in London, but the climate in Australia is even better. You can play golf there every day in the year, even when the temperature gets to 107 degrees. Life for the average man is unquestionably holds more there than here or in England. Then on Sundays you do not have to buy a horridly tough sandwich just as quickly as a drink of water. I miss here are little places into which one may drop and get a good, quiet cup of tea."

There is no question that the Australian and the American are very much alike, except that the Australian has more time to spare and is not so abrupt. When it comes to doing anything the Australian does it just as quickly as many goods of American manufacture are handled in Australia as in England make. We want to introduce more American goods. "In regard to this climate, I find that I can get through with a drink of water here as I could in London, but the climate in Australia is even better. You can play golf there every day in the year, even when the temperature gets to 107 degrees. Life for the average man is unquestionably holds more there than here or in England. Then on Sundays you do not have to buy a horridly tough sandwich just as quickly as a drink of water. I miss here are little places into which one may drop and get a good, quiet cup of tea."

There is no question that the Australian and the American are very much alike, except that the Australian has more time to spare and is not so abrupt. When it comes to doing anything the Australian does it just as quickly as many goods of American manufacture are handled in Australia as in England make. We want to introduce more American goods. "In regard to this climate, I find that I can get through with a drink of water here as I could in London, but the climate in Australia is even better. You can play golf there every day in the year, even when the temperature gets to 107 degrees. Life for the average man is unquestionably holds more there than here or in England. Then on Sundays you do not have to buy a horridly tough sandwich just as quickly as a drink of water. I miss here are little places into which one may drop and get a good, quiet cup of tea."

There is no question that the Australian and the American are very much alike, except that the Australian has more time to spare and is not so abrupt. When it comes to doing anything the Australian does it just as quickly as many goods of American manufacture are handled in Australia as in England make. We want to introduce more American goods. "In regard to this climate, I find that I can get through with a drink of water here as I could in London, but the climate in Australia is even better. You can play golf there every day in the year, even when the temperature gets to 107 degrees. Life for the average man is unquestionably holds more there than here or in England. Then on Sundays you do not have to buy a horridly tough sandwich just as quickly as a drink of water. I miss here are little places into which one may drop and get a good, quiet cup of tea."

There is no question that the Australian and the American are very much alike, except that the Australian has more time to spare and is not so abrupt. When it comes to doing anything the Australian does it just as quickly as many goods of American manufacture are handled in Australia as in England make. We want to introduce more American goods. "In regard to this climate, I find that I can get through with a drink of water here as I could in London, but the climate in Australia is even better. You can play golf there every day in the year, even when the temperature gets to 107 degrees. Life for the average man is unquestionably holds more there than here or in England. Then on Sundays you do not have to buy a horridly tough sandwich just as quickly as a drink of water. I miss here are little places into which one may drop and get a good, quiet cup of tea."

There is no question that the Australian and the American are very much alike, except that the Australian has more time to spare and is not so abrupt. When it comes to doing anything the Australian does it just as quickly as many goods of American manufacture are handled in Australia as in England make. We want to introduce more American goods. "In regard to this climate, I find that I can get through with a drink of water here as I could in London, but the climate in Australia is even better. You can play golf there every day in