

The shooting of the German, John Miller, in the riot in

SCENE ON EMPANELLING THE JURY.

About four o'clock Coroner Perry and officer Shangie returned from their journey in search of a jury. The Coroner acted in concert with Councilman Schnapport (a German) of the rebellious district, and desired to obtain a jury that would prove satisfactory to the Germans. I was proposed that three Americans and three Germans, in proportion of responsibility and position, should be secured.

About half past 8 o'clock Deputy Superintendent Carpenter, in company with several gentlemen, went through the infected district and found all quiet. After being absent some twenty minutes he returned and reported the result of his visit to Mr. Draper, who still remained in the station.

At half-past ten Captain Hart took his place behind the ark, and called the first platoon of men, most of whom answered to their names and were sent upon their boats. He said to Mr. Drance: "Mr. President, do you think it ne-

by sag
de
com
man
to Harit is a hard-headed sort of man, who had a great Puritan and religionist repute in the old force. His end are mostly Know Nothings, and to this the Ger-

Witz, German prisoner, slightly wounded.

injured so severely that any immediate danger