SMALL EXPECTATIONS.

It is generally supposed by our family and those who know us well, that my Uncle Buncle would "leave me something" at his demise. In fact, I thought so myself. Our reasons for this belief

First, When I was a little girl, though ne took no notice whatever of other ittle girls, he always patted me on the head when we met, and said : "Ha, ha! here you are, Hetty."
Secondly. When I was a big girl, and went to school, he always chucked me under the chin on holiday occasions, and inquired: "Well, what are they teaching you, Hetty?"

Thirdly. When I had grown to be a woman, he established the following form of greeting as a permanent thing :

"H'm! how do you do?" Fourthly. He never took notice of any one else in so many words, but merely the window sill, with his big great over-When I was married, he presented me with an antediluvian tortoise shell comb, once the property of the late Mrs. Buncle, and of a preposterous fashion, said to have been in vogue at a remote date, the back half a foot high, and elaborately carved. As he disapproved of weddings generally, and neve before had been known to give the bride anything but a scolding, this was really something to build upon—though, by the way, I offended him sorely by re-

We apolonamma for putting them all three together into the spare room. We resigned ours without a murmur to the signed ours without a murmur to the Misses Jones. We begged Consin Clarisas to excuse us for giving her the sofa bedstead in the parlor, and made a conch with three chairs and a bolster for Miranda Jane in a cornor cupboard. Then Charlie improvised a bed over the bath; a had the addressing gown, scowling, tamping, howling, half mad with rage, that curtains, and making up a valance for the side of the bath, I really felt quite proud of our handiwork. It was Uncle Bunele, and he had come to stay.

"Charmed to see you, sir," said Charlie.

Then we exchanged glances, and each muley asked the other, "Where shall we put him?"

Some Old Proverbs.

An exchange says: A correspondent asks for the authorship of the old prov-An exchange says: A correspondent asks for the authorship of the old proverb, "He smiles like a basket of chips."

It is traceable to a very old date in Shropshire, England, where it was used to describe an unaffected good temper. A quaint old writer quotes it with the added words that explain it: "He smiles like a basket of chips—i.e., of habit and unconaciously."

A lady wishes us to give the origin of the phrase, "He cannot say 'bo (or boo) to a goose." There have been many attempts to trace this eld proverb. One self-satisfied writer accounts for it by a verse from Burns; but the proverb is more than a century older than the poet. Another traces it to an incident related of Lord Kilmarnock and his son Lord Boyd, who were riding together when they met a poor simpleton, who it was believed had no common sense, but a great knack at rhymes.
