LET US BE FRIENDS. In an issue a week or two since, we published an article on the celebrated words of Gen. Grant, words which struck deeply into the heart of the American people, "Let us have peace." Since then the Seymour club, of New Haven, have given to the country another formula of words, which we would be glad to see reaching as wide a popularity as the ones we quoted above. At a Republican demonstration of rejoicing in that city, in which the benzine remaining on hand was to play its last part in the campaign, in the way of torchlights, the defeated Seymourites turned out their club also with the motto, "Let us be friends." It struck us as deeply significant when we read of the occurence, and we could not repress the hope that a sentiment like this, coming at a time when the party proposing it would be likely to feel sorely, was worthy of the appreciation of their victorious opponents. has attended so many of the American politcal contests, for the questions are not personal: the sword, and, indeed, except for the efforts political subject, yet the processes of prosper- the oystermen, and we sincerely hope the lost probably millions by their netarious at- Two hundred and ninety-eight conversions ity will go on in the land with a rapidity be theiring rascals may receive their just deserts, fore unequalled. The Fort Pillow butcher, slave broker, Forrest, sends a challenge to Gen. Kilpatrick for deadly combat, and is contemptuously refused, on the ground that the negro butcher is not a fit associate for gentlemen. We wish Gen. Kilpatrick had put his refusal on nobler grounds, but nevertheless it is a lowering fact that a former General in the Confederate army is not a fit associate for gentlemen. The worst of it all for Forrest, is that it is imposis not worth while to post him for a coward for everybody knows he is not a coward, and the refusal stands simply on the ground that the challenger is not a gentlemen. Gen. Magruder held McClellan in check for two weeks before Yorktown, and his name was heralded eral, and only a few weeks ago he was locked up in a police station house, in New York, for indecently insulting ladies in a store. York-American history, and Magruder's name was associated with the past of Washington and Cornwallis, and yet it sinks below contempt in a common resort of thieves, and prostituted in a New York station house. Belle Boyd, whose name shone like romance in all the dark passages of the war, turns out to be a woman of the most equivocal personal character. Pauline Cushman, or more properly, Harriet L. n are requested to try it. Take a small piece ize of the head of a pin, and put it in a glass of the size of the head of a pin, and put it in a glass of water. It is so soluble as to dissolve at once on being stirred, and its great strength will immediately at tract your attention. If it appears to you, as it really is, superior to the ordinary indigo or its substitutes in powder or liquid, which in many instances, from the presence of xahe and other poisonous and destructive acids, are hurtful to fine and other fatorics, the manufacturers request that you will set your An Iron-Jaw Man, for so he is called, arrived in this city during the past weekfrom Europe. The most economical box for the housekeeper is that which retails at 20 cents. Besides containing a convenient Pocket Pincushion or Emery Bag, it has Five Times more Blueing than the 5 Cent Box. The following claims are made for AZURENE: following claims are made for AZURENE .

following claims are made for AZURENE:

It is free from oxalic acid. It will not streak or in any manner injure the finest fabric. It is so highly concentrated that four ounces of it should, with economical use, do as much blueing as a pound of indigo_Jand do it better and more satisfactorily in every way than that article or the soluble blues in siquid or powder sold as its substitutes. Besides its possessing greater blueing properties, there is actually in the boxes in some instances over twice as much weight of blue as is furnished at the same price in the powdered articles.

At the late State Fair, held at Harrisburg, Penn'a, at which it took the First Premium, it was demonstrated that one Five Cent Box of Azurene made as much bleaching water as nine Six Cent Bottles of Liquid Blueing. The best of its competitors made but five bottles for the same weight.

Therefore buy Azurene, and see that each Box has on it the Trade Mark as above. Buy none without that protection.

He heard the good Pastor
Say "all flesh is grass!"

That was it! when the animal bit his respectable master, the eloquent pastor—the pastor observed that he never deserved treatment like that, from a horse so well conditioned and fat. But the horse tried the plan of catching the man without his leave, by the upper edge of the left-hand sleeve; and he tried to bite, but missed it quite, and had to say "neigh! this isn't grass; it is tougher than hay!" And he tugged so long at the cloth so strong, and it seemed so tough, that it took so long to bite it through; and the hungry beast didn't know what to do.
