The Czar's Second Consort. The Fair Princess Dolgoruki and Her Long Liaison With the Emperor of All the Russias

Paris Correspondence London Standard. Much as the marriage of the Czar has been talked of abroad, says a St. Peters-burg letter, not a word has appeared on the subject in the newspapers of that city. The regulations of the censorship of the press prohibit any reference in the public prints to the domestic affairs of the Czar. in other ways, too, the ceremony referred to has been, as far as possible, veiled in the thickest obscurity, and up to this mo-ment absolutely nothing is known officially of the event so far as Russia is concerned. In spite, however, of the secrecy observed in reference to the act, some particulars have transpired, though only quite re-cently, and the Russian public has, perhaps somewhat indistinctly, become acquainted with the general nature of the facts. In the first place there appears no longer any reason to doubt that the report of the marriage is correct. The ceremony, I am informed, took place on July 19 (Old Style), that is, on July 31 (New Style), of the present year, in the chapel of the palace. The various members of of the palace. The various members of the imperial family, although they had long been warned of the probability of the event, expressed by their conduct their strong disapproval and displeasure at the marriage. Hence it was that at the time of its performance the Czarewitch retired from the capital to Hapsal, on the Esthocoast, while the Grand Dukes Constantine and Vladimir fled abroad in order to avoid

At the present time the newly-married couple are in Livadia along with their family, which even at present is a numerous one, the eldest sons being already youths in their

All his strictly imperial privileges, how-ever, the Emperor Alexander purposes to

The Princess Dolgoruki, the present consort of the Czar, belongs to one of the oldest and most aristocratic families in Russia. She comes of a princely stock, which is counted among the RuriRovitchi. the descendants of Rurik, the Varagian or Norse, founder of Russia. In point of high birth, in fact the house to which the Princess Dolgoruki belongs surpasses even the race of the Romanoffs, who reigned down to Elizabeth and then, through Anna, transferred the crown to the Holstein Gottorp line. The princess, it is whispered, though the assertion is denied in many quarters, is not the first of the family who has stood on terms of special intimacy with the imperial house, and more particularly with the Czar Alexander. Her eldest sister, now the wife of General Albedinski, the governor-general of Warsaw, many years ago, it is said, stood in the same relation to the present Czar as she subsequently occupied herself. With the youngest sister it is probable that the imperial connection would have been as transient as the Czar's numerous earlier intimacies of a similar character, except for the fact that the acquaintance commenced at a period when the monarch had already passed the prime of life, while on the princess's side it was supported by rare mental gifts and graces of disposition and character which, not to speak of stature, figure and other attractive personal qualities, existed in a remarkable degree in the younger Princess Dolgoruki. Some fifteen years ago, when the intimacy began to grow closer and firmer, it provoked more and more the displeasure and hostility of the late empress the more the probability of its permanence increased. It was not till some years had clapsed that the empress relaxed her opposition to a continuance of the connection; the chief reason of the change being that the influence of the favorite was understood to be exercised in such a way that the monarch, who by no means lacked a fair share of the characteristic passionate qualities of his race, was probably preserved thereby from something worse. In this conviction the deceased Czarina, towards the last, not simply tolerated, but, if anything, rather encouraged and fos-Towers," and his devotion to the princess and family there are not unknown in Geimany. The longer the relation was maintained the more attached did the emperor become to the family, the happiness of whose heads would seem to have been perfect but for the missing sanction of law and morality. The Czarina devoted her-self more and more exclusively to the church and works of religion and piety, leaving the domestic hearth and family life more and more in the hands of the princess. At length the latter occupied a splendid suite of apartments in the Winter Palace at St. Petersburg, above the rooms occupied by the Czar himself. The new family relations into which the sovereign thus openly entered could hardly fail to exercise some influence on public life. Before long the princess was induced, by solicitations from dignitaries of the state and by petitions from less influential persons, to use her influence with the Czar in matters of public concern.

Thus it came to pass that in the upper tory of the Winter Palace a kind of regular but separate court gathered together. Here Russian statesmen were to be seen crowding almost as eagerly as to the real they speedly recovered. court, a story lower. Here, in fact, state quested of the courtiers that they should wait on the princess and show their respect and devotion to her, and such a wish was of course not neglected. Only the are now to be obtained from druggists. ing aspect, it was regarded as a certainty entire house. It deserves an extended that as soon as death had restored the trial.

Bzar his freedom of action it would not be long before he would marry the Princess Dolgoruki. Hardly had the empress's de cease taken place last spring when all eyes were directed to the upper story of the Winter Palace. It was, however, with in the barn, and two tramps down in the heard it whispered that the sovereign had ed his second consort to the altar. Why this haste, it was asked, since there had been no restrictions whatever put on the connection, and especially when such a violation of the prescriptions of the church and of the national traditions could not fail to offend the Russian people, who are brought up in such strict regard for both? The explanation is, perhaps, to be found in the health of the Czar. The sovereign is now ageing and a sudden termination of his life, which might occur at any moment, might have prevented him giving the sanction of marriage to a connection to which he was so completel devoted. For the asthma, by which the Czar has for some years been afflicted, is growing worse and his general condition of body is constantly becoming weaker. For his new consort the emperor has made provisions in various ways. Among other things, he has bought for her the palace of the Grand Duchess Catharine at a cost of 2,000,000 roubles, and it is said that he has already given it to his consort. It is, however, in Livadia that the Czar intends to fix his permanent residence after the promulgation of the marriage.

A Cure for Whooping Cough.

The Discovery of a Chemist-Breathing Va-pors from Purifying Boxes in Gas Works. TO THE EDITOR OF THE SUN-Sir: A friend sends a slip cut from a recent edition of your journal, inquiring for a reliable remedy for whooping cough. I am en-abled to give the desired information after and seclusion, the witnesses present including only the Grand Duke Nicholas, through the equally favorable experience the War Minister Milutin, and one or two bers who have tried it.

It is well-known to most intelligent people that exposure of patients to the vapors arising from the purifying boxes in the gas works almost invariably relieves the ter-rible paroxysms, and, after repeated visits cures have been frequently effected. This discovery was made by a physician in Paris about fitteen years ago.

The fact was published, and soon after visits began to be made to the Manhattan. New York, Brooklyn, and other gas works, on the recommendation of our med-ical men. An epidemic of whooping cough raged in Newport in the winter of 1878.

About that time the child of a distinguished chemist in Providence, R. I., was seriously ill with this terrible disease and too weak to be taken to the gas works. The father procured a quantity of the liquid hydro-carbon deposited by condensation in the bottom of the purifying box, and vaporized it in a metal dish in the closed room of the little sufferer. Almost immediately it revived, the spasms were checked, and after the a few days the child recovered and was as well as ever. Microscopists have recently discovered that the cause of whooping cough (pertusis) is the rapid aggregation of bacteria under the root of the tongue. These must be destroyed before relief can be ob-tained. To this end such powerful medicine as quinine bromide is given; but even that fails to reach the seat of the disease. Of course the ordinary expectorants are absolutely useless; change of air is rarely curative; hence the rapidly-increasing percentage of deaths from this disease.

The New York board of health report for 1875 has a list of 489 deaths from whooping cough in that city. The deaths weekly in London, England, are from a minimum of 60 to a maximum of 220 over 6,000 annually.

Physicians generally inform the anxious parents that whooping cough must take its course, as a remedy is unknown, and they can only slightly relieve it; that the ncubation and increase in virulence will occupy six weeks, and from six weeks to six months will be required before it is entirely removed. The whooping usually increases regularly in number from day to day to the fifth week, often equalling forty times in twenty-four hours. Very rarely is this disease preceded by any other. but so great is the strain upon the system that frequently it is followed by pneumonia, in which event death often ensues. A fatal termination is more generally the result of absolute physical exhaustion due to the terrible strain consequent upon the oft-occurring paroxysms. A few years since my youngest child, never before ill, was stricken by this dread disease. The best medical talent was obtained, every known remedy tried, most watchful care constantly exercised, but without the slightest avail. The child actually coughed itself to death. With all the grief of this sad experience still fresh, in April, 1879, we were alarmed by a new incursion of the destroyer. Our children, 5 and 7 years, were attacked, seemingly with the severity of the preceding case. It was then I learned of this Providence chemist's discovery, and that simple but ingenious apparatus had been invented by tered the liaison. The Czar himself be-came so devoted to the princess that at to be cresolene could be evaporated length he could not endure her absence from his company. The visits to Ems, the social life of the Czar at the "Four stand six inches high, supplanting a cup, cured both. The apparatus is a metal stand six inches high, supplanting a cup, holding half an ounce of cresolene. The heat is applied either by a petroleum night lamp or gas; vaporizers being made to at-tach to an ordinary gas burner. Cresolene is a rosepink liquid with a boiling point of 397 degrees. It is not un-pleasant in odor, but, on the other hand, is extremely grateful to any and with the east bronchial or catarrhal affection. In three minutes after the lamp was lighted the vapor of the cresolene was diffused in every part of a room 15 by 20 feet. In ten minutes the children manifested evident relief, recovered from their dull exhaustion and were playing on the bed, even laughing aloud in their evident freedom from the paroxysm.

OAK HALL, PHILADELPHIA.

Worth Knowing.

There is a place in Philadelphia where a stranger may buy his clothes, and fare as well as if he knew the whole city by heart; and if knows nothing about the value of cloths, or of clothes, he is as well off as if he were a good judge of both.

The reason is that everything to be found there is made theremade and sold under a system which rarely allows mistakss to occur, and which corrects them if they do occur.

OAK HALL is the place; and its practice may be summed up in a few words. If you get there what you don't want to keep at the price, you return it, and get your money back.

This means a great deal more than appears on the surface. It means that you are not going to get what you will not want to keep at the price, if the merchant help it. It means that the clothes you get there will be of honest cloths, honestly made; and that they will cost you less than as good clothes can be got for elsewhere. It means that they will be every way better worth your money than you can get elsewhere for the same money.

If it means anything less than these things-if it means poor cloths, trimmings, cutting, sewing, or in any way dishonest or illiberal dealing; the return of his goods will plague the merchant, injure his credit and dissipate his trade.

If it means these things-if it means liberal and honorable dealing, valuable and trusty clothing, case and safety in getting it, OAK HALL is the place for you to go to, or to send to; and it is worth your while to know how you can send, if it is inconvenient to go.

Write; say what your occupation is; say what sort of use you intend to make of the clothes you want; whether for everyday wear or otherwise; what color you prefer, or what color to avoid; say about what you want to pay; say everything that you think may aid a stranger in choosing for you. You will get in reply samples of cloths and prices of whatever you want made from these cloths. You will get also the means of having your measure taken by an unskilled person.

There is only one difficulty left. Somebody has got to take the risks of the dealing; for there are risks. Send your money along with your order. That covers the risk as to your good faith. We risk everything else; the fit and your satisfaction every way.

Our trade by mail amounts to half a million dollars a year; there's no reason why it shouldn't amount to five millions.
