

RUSHING BUSINESS MEN SHORTEN THEIR LIVES

Chicago.—The high speed of business is killing men in the prime of their lives, Dr. Morris Fishbein, of the American Medical Journal, told a business club here. He said the "dangerous age" for men is middle age. "Insurance experts tell us the death rates from the degenerative diseases of middle life, like heart disease, Bright's disease and brain hemorrhage, are taking a constant and serious toll," he said.

"Indeed, if only these three diseases can be sufficiently overcome to give their victims an added 15 or 20 years of life, the expectancy for all of us at birth will be increased by four additional years."
