BY MRS. HEMANS.

BY MRS. HEMANS.

Thou see'st her pictured with her shining hair, (Fametl were its tresses in Provencial song.)

Haif braded, half o'er cheek and bosom fair

Let loose, and pouring sunny waves along

Her gargeous vest.—A child's light hand is roving

'Midst the rich curis, and oh! how meekly loving

Its garnest looks are lifted to the face,

Which bends to theet its lip in languing grace,

Yet that bright lady's eye methinks hath less

Of deep, and still, and beneave tenterress. Of deep, and still, and pensive tenderness.

Than might beseem a mother's—on her brow semething too much there sits of native score. And her smile kindles with a conscious glow.

And her smile kindles with a conscious glow.

As from the thought of sovereign beauty borns.

These may be dreams—but how shall woman tell.

Of woman's shame and not with tears?—she fell!

That mother her that child—went hurrying by and mother left that duld—went hurrying by itserradle—haply, not without a sigh—laply one moment o'er its rest screne sign hung—but no! it could not thus have been, For she went on! forsook her house, her hearth, All pure affection, all sweet household mirth, To live a gaudy and dishonared thing, Sharlag in guilt the sprender of a king. Her lord in very weariness of life. Girt on his sword for scenes of distant strife; He reaked no more of clory—grief and shame Crushed out his fiery nature, and his name Died instantly. A shadow o'er his halls Clept year by year, the minstrel passed their wells, The warder's horn hung mute, meaning the child the whose first flowering thoughts no parent smiled: A gentle gird, and yet deep-licarted, greav lates and youth; for well, too well she knew they nother's tide!—Its memory made the sky Sorm all too invents for her shighting. Sgam all too joyous for her shrinking eye; Check'd on her lip the flow of song which fain Would there have linger'd; flush'd her check to pain If met by sudden glance; and gave a tone Of sorrow, as for something lovely gone, Elen to the spring's glad voice. Her own was low And plantice—oh! there lie such depths of wo In a young blighted spirit.—Manhood rears

A hanghty brow, and ago has done with tears: But youth hows down to misery, in amaze At the dark cloud o'ennantling its fresh days:

At the dark cloud o'ermantling its fresh days. And thus it was with her. A mountful sight. In one so fair, for she indeed wat fair—Not with her mother's dazding eyes of light, Her were more shadowy, full of thought and prayer. And with long lashes o'er a witte-rose cheek. Denoing in gloom, yet tender still, and meek, Still that fond child—and old the brow above. So pale and purel so foun'd for holy love. To gaze upon in silennel but she feit. That love was not for her, though hearts would melt. Where'er she moved, and reverence mutely given. Went with her, and low prayers, that called on Heaven To bless the young Isaure. To bless the young Issure. One sume man With alms before her eastie-gate she stood, 'Midst peasan-groops, when breathless and o'crwore, And shruuded in long weeds of widowhood, A stranger through them broke—the orphan unlight. With her sweet voice, and proffer a hand of aid. With her sweet voice, and protter hand of aid.

Taru'd to give welcome but a wild sad look.

Mer hers a gaze that all her spirit shook.

And that pale woman, suddenly subdued.

By some strong passion in its gushing monit.

Kucit at her feet, and bath'd them with such tears.

As rain the heart's unastand with her white this press

They gound they trod—then burying in her yest.

Her book's deep flish, sobb'd out, soft undefiled!

Land the pattler suite man are my child?! I am the mether's spilen me act my child!"
I san the mether's spilen me act my child!"
I san the stamed memory, when the happy slept,
In the histel'd midnight, stood with moundful gaze
Before you picture's smile of other days;
But meer breath'd in human car the name
Which weighth her being to the carts with a stoo Which weigh'd her being to the earth with Statue Which weigh'd her being to the earth with Scame. What marvel if the anguish of surprise, The first remembrance, the alter'd guise, Archile o'erpuwer'd her' from the weeper's touch She shrank—twas but a moment—yet for moch For that all humbled one—its mortal stroke Carot dawn like lightning's, and her fill heart broke At once in silence. Heavily and prone supscribe, while, o'er her caste's threshold-stone; I have long for treshes—they still brightly wore. There early pride, though bound with peafs no mare, thursting their filler, in sad beauty robb'd. And scept the dust with coils of wavy gold. Use child be a given to mare. Hot child be it o'er her-call'd her-'iwas too hie Dearl lay the wanderer at her exen proud gate -The joy of courts, the star of knight and hard -How didst thou full, old bright brin'd Francingarde!

Eastern Boundary .- The following is extracted: from the Boston Palladium:

"Mr. Gallatin one of the Combussioners on the Eastern Boundary, is now in this city. Judge Preble, our other Commissioner, it is probable, will also visit Al Norfolkthe city; and it is possible, perhaps, that there may be to the country. But I act upon the consideration that I could accept it only to a view to emplument. If the nation is willing that an individual who has served them thus long, and in the offices I have held, should be reduced to want, and I cannot escape that fate by my own means, I am willing to meet it, rather than take any office to prevent it. I meet it, rather than take any office to prevent it. I fed much gratified however, at the feeling manifested towards me by my fellow citizens of New York."

We are informed, and take pleasure in mentioning the fact, says the N. Y.
