

Richmond Whig.

THURSDAY MORNING, OCT. 22, 1829.

THE CONVENTION.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 21.

After prayer by the Rev. Mr. Armstrong, the Convention was called to order at 2 o'clock.

Judge Marshall said it would not probably be the pleasure of the House to take up any of the Reports of Committees, until all the Committees should have reported. Be this as it may, it would be well to place the reports in a situation in which they could be acted on without delay.

Mr. Ussur suggested the propriety of waiting until the other reports should be presented. He was under the impression that it was the wish of some members to refer the reports to a Select Committee, before they were sent to a Committee of the whole House, in order that they might be examined and reported in a combined form.

Mr. Dobbins said that he was not in favor of the Executive Committee was not now in his place, and as he believed it was intended to give to the report from that Committee a different direction, he had made the suggestion he now threw out.

Judge Marshall said a few words in reply, in which he stated that the only object he had in view in making the motion, was to put the report in a train to be acted on with as little delay as possible.

When the business was before the Committee it could be postponed from day to day, until there was a disposition to act upon it. It might not be the pleasure of the House to refer the reports to a Select Committee, as the gentleman had indicated. He was not anxious to press the motion, if it was the wish of gentlemen that it should be withdrawn.

Mr. Dobbins said if the gentleman from Accomack, in what he had thrown out respecting the wish of members for a Select Committee, alluded to anything which had been said in the House, and particularly to any thing which had fallen from him (Mr. D.) he had misunderstood him. He recollected that he had said elsewhere, that it would be proper to refer the subjects to a Committee of the Whole, in order that the reports may be considered and amended, accepted, or rejected. They would then have to be reported to the House, and sent to a Copying Committee.

Mr. Ussur expressed his willingness to acquiesce in any course which might be acceptable to the convention.

The question was then put to refer the report to a committee of the whole House, and decided in the affirmative.

The question then being on making it the order for a specific day.

Mr. Leigh (of Chester) offered the following resolution: Resolved, That it be a standing order of the Convention, that the Convention shall every day resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole, to consider the existing Constitution of the Commonwealth, and such proposition for amendment or alteration thereof, as shall be referred to or made in the said Committee.

Mr. Dobbins moved to lay the resolution on the table, after expressing his conviction that there was no necessity for the Convention to go into committee of the whole on the judicial report at present. He reminded the House that their present hour of meeting was 2 o'clock, and that one of the committees was yet busily engaged in the consideration of the subjects referred to it.

He asked if there was any desire to act on the other reports before anything was received from that committee through whose labors he said he began to discover the dawn of light. He thought that no good could arise, but that some evil might result from the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Stanard said that the gentleman from Brooke would not get rid of the difficulty which he seemed to have discovered, by his present motion. It was necessary to give some direction to the subject. It did not follow that because the House might go into a committee of the whole on a specific proposition, it could not take up any other subject. It would be competent to the committee to lay aside the specific proposition on motion of any member and to take up any other of the reports which might have been referred to them. Such was the practice of the House of Delegates, to assimilate to which the practice of the Convention was the object of the gentleman from Chesterfield, in offering his resolution.

Mr. Dobbins expressed his acquiescence in the general view that propositions must properly be referred to a committee of the whole; but he asked what bound the convention to adopt that course now? In the present state of the business what good could result from this reference of a single report? When the other committees shall have reported, all the reports might be referred at the same time. Were the resolution to be adopted, he asked if the House would not be obliged every day, to postpone on motion, the order of the day, to another day?

Mr. Stanard briefly explained his views.

Mr. P. P. Barbour suggested that the difficulty which the gentleman had alluded to as to the daily postponement by motion would not occur. He had enquired of the Secretary if the same practice did not prevail in the House of Delegates, which prevails in the House of Representatives. There, it requires no motion to postpone the order for going into committee of the whole. When, by a standing rule it is made always in order for the House to resolve itself into a committee of the whole, there is no occasion for any motion of postponement. It is always ipso facto in order to go into committee on motion, but it requires no motion to postpone it.

Mr. Meeker said he understood the resolution was to constitute a committee of the whole. There is already such a committee in existence, and the Convention had referred the judicial report to that committee. It was always in order at 12 o'clock to move that the house resolve itself into a committee of the whole. In this respect the House of Delegates differs from the House of Representatives. We have but one committee of the whole, and all subjects referred are sent to that committee. He objected to the course now proposed, because he thought it was intended that the committee should act on this subject by itself. He thought too that by resolving itself into a committee of the whole on the state constitution the Convention would be adopting that very course which by a former decision it had refused to adopt.

Mr. Leigh (of Chesterfield) said he did not suppose that the House by its former decision meant to refuse to resolve itself at any time into a Committee of the whole on the Constitution. If it had so intended, the remarks of the gentleman were pertinent; but if the Convention meant to go into Committee of the whole in order to compare the present Constitution with the amended draft, to be submitted to it, to contrast the changes with the thing changed, then were the remarks irrelevant. It was not his intention to hurry the proceedings of the Convention against the inclination of gentlemen when they could shew good reason against haste. His whole purpose was when they proceeded to consider any amendment that the whole propositions being before the Committee every part might be considered with reference to its bearing upon the other parts. The Constitution is made of a variety of parts, and it is out of order to consider the whole subject in Committee of the whole, it must be equally out of order to consider the parts of which it was composed. The practice of the House of Delegates is well understood. The Convention had adopted that practice, and in reference to it he had offered this resolution. The House of Delegates resolve itself into Committee of the whole, and all propositions of a general character are sent to it. When the House is in Committee of the whole, a motion may be made to take up any particular subject. That is the mode which is contemplated now. A motion may be made in Committee to take up any particular subject.

Mr. Stanard said that he was convinced that the gentleman from Loudon (Mr. Meeker) would on reflection see that he had adopted an erroneous view, and that he was in fact acting in direct inconsistency with the course he pursued some days since. The House had in this (Mr. M.'s) motion referred the various parts of the Constitution to different Committees, and it must be obvious that out of these parts the whole was constructed. When all the Committees shall have made their reports, their reports will go in parts to the Committee of the whole, and thus the whole Constitution will be before that Committee. The reports of the Committee therefore will necessarily place the whole Constitution before the Committee of the whole. As to the time, when the Convention should go into Committee of the whole, the proper way was to keep in view the convenience of the Convention. It was not his desire improperly to hurry the business, but to carry all the subjects into a Committee of the whole. Here Mr. S. made some remarks in reference to the practice of the House of Delegates, and observed that by adhering to that practice inconvenience and delay would be avoided.

Mr. Meeker said his object in referring to the practice of Congress was to show, that it was different from that of the House of Delegates, and that the mode adopted by the House of Delegates, was the most convenient. Every proposition being before the Committee of the Whole, any one question could be taken up, at the pleasure of the Committee. If he was wrong in this, he requested the gentleman to put him right. There is already a Committee of the Whole, and this report has been referred to that Committee. He defended himself against the charge of inconsistency, and alleged that he saw no necessity for the present resolution. The subjects must be referred to a Committee of the Whole, and we have such a Committee already. If they are to be referred to a Committee of the Whole on the Constitution, any gentleman might rise, and make a motion to take up the Constitution itself. So much of the Constitution, as is necessary to be taken up, will be properly referred to the existing Committee. He said, that if it was not the desire of gentlemen, to take up the whole Constitution, he was satisfied. All the reports will go to a Committee of the Whole, and then, any gentleman can move to take up such parts, as he may think proper. The Resolution therefore, was useless.

Mr. Dobbins made a remark or two upon the practice of the House of Delegates, of which he professed to have some knowledge, although he was ignorant of the practice of Congress, and stated his opinion, that such practice, did not sustain some of the views which had been thrown out. He again deprecated any attempt to press the business in its present imperfect form; the only effect of which would be, to embarrass the proceedings of the Committee now sitting, without being productive of any benefit.

Mr. Meeker said he should vote to lay the resolution on the table, but not for any of the reasons which had been assigned by other gentlemen. It was his wish to wait until all the reports were before the Convention. They might then wish to appoint a committee to put them altogether in a tangible shape, for laying the resolution on the table, was no objection to its adoption. When the gentleman from Chesterfield first explained his object, the peculiarity of the phraseology which he used struck him, and suggested to him to coin it in different language, so as to assimilate it to the practice of the House of Delegates, by providing a standing order that the House should daily resolve itself into committee of the whole to take into consideration the state of the commonwealth. It was then that with the objection, that was merely deputed to take up the subject of the Constitution. And that being in truth the legitimate object of the Convention, he had no doubt that the course now pointed out, was the correct one. The only effect of this resolution would be to make a standing order that the House should daily go into committee of the whole to take into consideration the Constitution. The whole business would be before it, and it would be at the election of the committee what particular subject to take up. He considered that the present course was the most free from inconvenience. He should vote for the proposition because it would not put the Convention to the necessity of having daily motions made to postpone the order of the day, while the House might resolve itself into committee of the whole on the motion of any individual member.

The question was then put and the motion to lay the resolution on the table was carried in the affirmative—Ayes 40, Noes 37.

Mr. Nicholas referred to the course which had been taken by some members yesterday in submitting the various propositions made by them in the executive committee. One question embraced in the report of that committee was to abolish the State Council. Having been in the minority on that question, he was desirous that the views of the members composing that authority should be also before the Convention. He would therefore avail himself of this course taken by other gentlemen, and ask the indulgence of the house to permit him to lay the following resolutions on the table.

Leave being given, Mr. Nicholas offered the following resolutions, which were ordered to be laid on the table and printed:

Resolved, That the 9th and 10th sections of the present Constitution be retained, and that the 11th be substituted by the following resolution:

A Free Council or Council of State, consisting of four members, shall be chosen by joint ballot of both Houses of Assembly, either from their own members or the people at large, to assist in the administration of Government. They shall annually choose out of their own members, a Lieutenant Governor, who, in case of his death, inability, or necessary absence of the Governor from the Government, shall act as Governor until the Governor shall be the President of the Council, and shall in all cases of division have the casting vote. Two members with the Governor or Lieutenant Governor, as the case may be, shall be chosen by the people, and their names shall be entered of record, and signed by the members present, (to any part whereof any member may enter his dissent,) to be laid before the General Assembly when called for by them. The members of the Council shall be elected by joint ballot of both Houses of the General Assembly for four years. At the first election the two Houses shall by joint resolution divide the persons elected into two classes. The seats of the Councilors of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year; of the second class, at the expiration of the fourth year; so that one half may be chosen every second year; and if vacancies happen by resignation or otherwise, they shall be filled by joint ballot of the two Houses of the General Assembly. An adequate but moderate salary shall be settled on them during their continuance in office, and they shall be incapable during that time of sitting in either House of Assembly.

Mr. P. P. Barbour then rose to remind the house of the nature in which the report of the Judicial Committee was left by the recent decision of the House, laying the resolution of the gentleman from Chesterfield on the table. That report required to be acted on. It had been assigned to the committee on the whole, but had been made the order for no individual day. He would move therefore to make it the order of the day for to-morrow.

After a little conversation, the motion was changed so as to make it the order of the day for Monday next.

The Convention then adjourned till 2 o'clock to-morrow.

The proceedings of the Legislative Committee were not received in time for insertion to-day.

The error occurred in our report of Wednesday's Proceedings of the Convention, which is corrected by the following:

Mr. Morgan said he was a Member of the Committee which had been so unfortunate as not to agree upon all the propositions properly referred to them under the Executive Department of the Government; and like the gentleman from Frederick, he would ask leave to submit for the consideration of the Convention, several resolutions on the subject of that department, which he wished read and laid on the table.

In the account given of the proceedings of the Legislative Committee on the 20th, Mr. Cooke was inaccurately said to have moved to amend Mr. Dobbins's resolution respecting the right of suffrage, by striking out all after the words "Resolved, that," and inserting the following: "That the right of suffrage be extended to all such as enjoy it, and to all such as are entitled to it." Mr. Cooke's real motion was to strike out the whole of Mr. Dobbins's resolution after the word "Resolved," and insert in lieu thereof the following words, to-wit: "That the right of suffrage be extended to all such persons as exercise the said right under the existing Constitution, and to all such as are entitled to be filled up with a description of other classes of society."

THEATRE.—MADAME FERON'S Benefit and last appearance will take place this Evening—on which occasion the beautiful Opera of the Maria de Figaro, and a new melo drama will be produced. Of this lady's merits as a vocalist, we cannot speak too highly—she possesses infinite science, a delightful voice, and the most brilliant execution. Surely our citizens will appreciate such eminent talents, and give Madame Feron what she deserves, an overflowing house. The musical selections are excellent, and well chosen—and all admirers of good singing ought to visit the Theatre this evening.

From a New Orleans paper, of the 7th inst. Another Spanish Expedition against Mexico, by the South Sea.

"PELELIA, August 6.—By the Mexico mail, arrived this afternoon, His Excellency, the Governor, has received official news that on the 22d of July, nine vessels were seen off Nuzgo, and on the 23th they were directing their route for America. The Mexicans of the south whose valor and patriotism are well known, held themselves in readiness to chastise these new Spanish invaders."

A recent writer in the Charleston Mercury suggests to the cotton planters the propriety of having their own refuse cotton manufactured into bagging. He says—The cotton crop of the United States has been estimated at about 900,000 bales. Supposing each bag would require four pounds for bagging, the aggregate would be 3,600,000 lbs. or 12,000 bales annually.

THE TEXAS.—Our readers will recollect that we mentioned some weeks since the establishment of a paper at Peichina, La. entitled "The Political Gridiron." We suspected, at the time, that it was intended for a brother, but the following specimen of its cooking is rather more highly seasoned than we were prepared to expect. Even the Georgians would not wish any thing hotter than this—

"In case of the continuance of the war [between Spain and Mexico] the United States should without delay, take possession of Texas, for there is no doubt that that colony rightfully belongs to the U. States. Don Onis completely cheated Mr. Adams out of it. If Gen. Houston has gone to that country, as is asserted, with the view of revolutionizing it, we may expect to hear shortly of the hoisting of his flag. He will only wait until the Spaniards and Mexicans become engaged in earnest."

This is as short an argument as is used to demonstrate the propriety of taking possession of the Cherokee lands.—Jour. Com.

The Galatea, of this port, has arrived at Lisbon, and is reported by a vessel from St. Ubes to have been condemned. The Am. Consul informs the owners, that he has demanded the restitution of the vessel, with damages for detention and insults offered to citizens of the U. States.—N. York Courier.

NAPOLEON BUONAPARTE, OR THE EMPEROR AND THE SOLDIER. This Piece was performed upwards of 100 nights in London, to crowded houses.

The interest arises in Napoleon being attacked in a wood by an apparent robber. The Emperor having no money, gives his watch, which is left in the possession of a watchmaker in exchange for bread by a starving citizen, who to support his wife and child, committed in a moment of despair, a desperate act. The watchmaker is about being condemned for the theft, when the real circumstances are disclosed, and Buonaparte pardons the poor citizen.

The room will be open for visitors from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. every fair day.

This surprising instrument discovers to view the most minute bodies in the animal, vegetable and mineral parts of creation, magnifying them more than 3,000,000 times! The apparent dust on figs or cheese, which living animalcula is scarcely perceptible to the naked eye, is magnified to the enormous size of from 2 to 4 feet, and in actual motion, fighting and contending in the most spirited manner. Many other objects are prepared and will be exhibited. The interesting process of crystallization is shown in most resplendent and magnificent colours—it needs but to be seen to be most admired, it being impossible to give an adequate description of its brilliancy.
