Mrs. Jacob Breasch and Her Missing Lord- Thou Art So Near and Yet So Far."

Tuesday afternoon, a passably good looking woman giving her name as Mrs. Jacob Breasch, called to see Mayor -Remember the Confederate picnic Loague at his office in the city hall, and interviewed him in the peculiar inquisitorial style of the female when in search of knowledge and information respecting her former liege and lord. Mrs. Breasch made substantially the following statement, which partakes somewhat of strange romance and eventful mystery. She is the chambermaid of the steamer Minneola, a familiar sternwheel craft which has for years back floated upon the bosom of the western waters, and is now running from Cincinnati to this -Mansford, at the corner of Monroe and Second streets, has just received two interesting novels entitled Allice and inexplicable motives, left her home, at Pittsburg, and for a long while she mourned him as dead. About three nonths ago she received a letter signed by a man named Holland, and mailed in Germany, stating that she could learn the whereabouts of her long missing husband by addressing him in the care of Mansfield & Higbee, Memphis, Tennessee. Acting upon this suggestion she wrote a letter to Jacob, and in due time she received an answer, the style of which (being in numerals and peculiar to his method of correspondence) she readily recognized as having been penned by that absent worser half. Then a regular and prompt correspondence ensued between her and Jacob. position, upon which she depends for a livelihood. About two weeks ago, when the Minneola arrived here, the inquisi-torial wife visited Mansfield's drug store for the purpose of learning the locality of him, and how he obtained the letters. It seems that a youth, who resides at Cottonwood Point and has dealings at Mansfield's, called for the letters, which were delivered to him, the gentle-man to whose address they had been mailed not knowing anything of the cirday a negro called for Jacob Breasch's letters, but they refused to let him have them, as he was not deemed authorized to receive them. The above is the statement of Mrs. Breasch made to Mayor Loague, who, wishing to find out what he could respecting the present condition and abode of her truant busband, deputized Captain Droescher the sergeant-at-arms, to attend to the matter. Thereupon the un-known negroes fled down Beale street, and finding that the officers were gaining rapidly upon them escaped by dodging around the Baptist church, coal-oil can which Goodman had was taken in possession by the police and left in a store at the corner of Main and

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

Stubborn Facts. EDITORS APPEAL-It has been stated in connection with the appointment of Mr. M'Mahon as captain of steamer No. 4, that Mr. Foley was ushered in at the death of Captain Stokes in consequence of his being a "pet" of the city after twelve o'clock. Street cars mayor. Now at the time Mr. Foley was elected it was as strongly asserted by the same paper that Mr. John Sullivan was the 'pet' of the mayor. The facts are that Mr.Foloy was elected by the general council almost unanimously. The ballot showing seventeen for Foley against three for M'Mahon. Mr. Foley has had as much experience as a fireman as Mr. M'Mahon, and has ever proved an effici-ent and able officer. When the yellowfever was raging in our city Mr. M'-Mahon was pipe director, but thinking more of M'Mahon than he did of the responsible trust reposed in him, he abandoned his post and went to the then healthy climes of Minnesota, leaving the pipes to take care of themselves, and the city, if needs be, to hunt some one else to extinguish the flames, which were at any moment subject to break LET EVERY ONE ATTEND. out. For this he was discharged by ex-Mayor Johnson, and mention made of his conduct to the general council. While Captain Foley feeling the necessity of the department, remained true to his calling, and suffered the loss of his own wife, leaving four helpless children. I only say this in justice to Mr. Foley, who has been a resident of Memphis for twenty-five years, and has always borne THE different railroads leading into the name of a good, honorable and the city will transport for half fare all honest citizen, and has always acted JUSTICE.

The Vote for the New County-The J. T. FARGASON Figures of 1871 for Surpassed A Decided Expression of Popular Opinion.

About half-past ten o'clock yesterday GRAND JUNCTION, TENN., May 10, morning two negro women, named Lou 875.—The board of commissioners of Beil county convened at this place, Christian and Lizzie Lyons, who resided to-day, to compare the returns of the original act of the legislature creating the vote polled was in favor of the new county, but upon injunction and appeal two-thirds of the voting population must indorse the new county, without reference to the vote actually cust' Upon this decision the legislature immediately passed an amendatory act granting power to the commissioners to take a census of the legal voters in the proposed new county, and to hold another election. This census was completed a short time since, and, upon due advertisement, the election was held, for the second time, on last Saturday, with the following official result: Qualified voters in Fayette fraction, as Constitutional majority of same Vote on Saturday last:

> Qualified voters in Hardeman fraction, Vote on Saturday last: Qualified voters in McNairy fraction, as nstitutional majority of same....

Vote on Saturday last: The required constitutional majority is largely exceeded in each fraction and when we consider this, in connection with the fact that every voter who was absent from the polls was counted as against the new county, we can con-gratulate the advocates of the movement upon the triumph achieved in the more decided than that of 1871. R. ALL the railroads leading into the city agree to transport for half fare all persons who visit the city to-morrow and attend the Confederate picnic.
