

LABOR UPHOLDS THE BRIDGE

The gigantic power of American labor is making it possible for our armies to get to the battlefront and to stay there.

The personal responsibility of every producer is tremendous. Your country rightly expects that every bit of energy you possess should be exerted to accomplish the final overthrow of our common enemy.

The workman who changes his position or occupation today, provided his working conditions are congenial, endangers the great bridge that is supported in part by his unswerving loyalty.

You are a part of this giant structure, a necessary span which, if removed, will weaken the whole structure.

What most Americans do not realize is that they are fighting two distinct German enemies; one is in the open on the field of battle; the other works in secret in our midst, often at our threshold, sometimes in our very homes.

Stick to your tools as loyally as the boys in khaki stick to their guns. Every full day's work you put in brings your brothers in arms that much nearer to Berlin.

The man who works faithfully is hitting the enemy every minute.
