Professors at Bryn Mawr and Swarthmore Attribute Shocks to Unequal Pressures

BLAME MOUNTAIN STREAMS

Geologists at Swarthmore and Bryn Mawr Colleges believe the earth tremors tected all over the country yesterday seismograph were eqused by the "slipping" of great quantities of rock somewhere off the Pacific Coast.

They do not agree, however, with the theory that the disturbance was caused by a change in the earth's axis. The earthquake shocks, so severe that many elsmographs were thrown out of or-geismographs were thrown out of order, are being discussed widely in scientific circles.

"Only once have I seen more violent tremors recorded by our seismograph," said Dr. J. A. Milier, of Swarthmore College. This is the only seismograph near Philadelphia.

"The disturbance must have been of the coast of Ordon or Washington, at a profound depth, as there were no tidal waves. The original cause probably was the slippage of vast rock strata. I can see no basis for the theory that there was a readjustment of the earth's axis of rotation."

axis of rotation.

Dr. Florence Bascom, head of the geology department at Bryn Mawr College, said: It was an effort of the earth to

"It was an effort of the earth to maintain a condition of equal pressures. The earth is continually subjected to the strain of removal of earth from one place to another.

"For instance, on the California Coast, where the mountains face the sea, the weight of the land above and below the sea level must be equal. However, there is a considerable loss of equilibrium because mountain streams continually are carrying particles of equilibrium because mountain streams continually are carrying particles of earth into the rea, causing unequal pressure. Then there comes a read-dustment to restore the equilibrium, such as that which caused the tremors yesterday.

"The Eastern Coast more readily maintains its equilibrium because it is older and its mountains are farther from he sea. This readjustment of 100 feet is not of great importance. Subsidences of 1000 feet have been re-

Dr. Bascom said it was not extraordi-pary that ships had not felt the shock yesterday, because earthquake tremors are first felt deep in the earth and later carried out to the water. With the

SEEK ARMY CODE THIEF

Lieutenant Rawley Unable to Explain Mysterious Robbery

A widespread hunt is on for the man who stole from the apartment of Lieutenant Palmer Rawley, in Drexel Hill, the confidential army report in code, on a new airplane radio phone.

Former Emergency Fleet Corporation Head Regarded Favorably by Mayor

WOULD GIVE WHOLE TIME

Charles Piez, who was director general of the Emergency Fleet Corporation during the World War, has been added to the list of noted men who are under consideration for the post of director general of the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition. It was learned today that Mayor Moore, while in Washington, conferred with Mr. Piez.

While-Mayor Moore has made no statement concerning Mr. Piez, it is reported that he thinks that Piez is not only a big enough man for the job, but one who probably could give closer attention to the work of pushing forward exposition plans than such men as Herbert Hoover or Charles M. Schwab, who would have constant other demands upon their time because of other important undertakings.

Mr. Piez has been an associate of Mr. Schwab, and his work during the war in developing American shipping added much to his already established reputation as an organizer and leader of men. Mr. Piez was formerly presi-magistrate.

Douglas still insisted he would not pay the fine, so he was placed in a cell in the Manayunk police station. Former Philadelphian Disappears

SAILOR GIVES BLOOD

Think Captain Taylor Will Recover After Operation

Through a blood transfusion operation at the Jefferson Hospital, the life of Captain J. S. Taylor, medical officer at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, has, it is believed, been saved. The captain was taken to the hospital for an opera-tion, one of his kidneys being removed. He sank rapidly, and a number of sailors at the yard volunteered their blood. After a hasty examination one of them was selected, and gave nearly a quart of blood. The result was most satisfactory, it is announced, and unless an unexpected relapse sets in the captain will recover.
