Enrollment Larger by Hundreds Than Ever Before.

HIGH SCHOOLS BADLY CROWDED

No End of Applicants for "Transfers."

The Minneapolis public schools opened The Minneapolis public schools opened this morning with an attendance larger by hundreds than ever before in their history. No report of the enrollment will be made to the superintendent before the close of the week, but that it is larger than ever before there is no room to doubt. At Central High school the total number of pupils is between 1,250 and 1,300, and the other high schools are also crowded to their capacity.

I,300, and the other high schools are also crowded to their capacity.

The graded schools are in no better condition, and half-day sessions will have to be employed to care for primary students in many of the districts. The office of Superintendent Jordan, in the Central High building this morning was crowded with parents desirous of securing transfers for their children, to permit them to attend one school, although residing in the attend one school, although residing in the district of another. These requests were granted whenever it was possible to do so, but applicants are discouraged from at-tempting to secure transfers, as all the schools are badly crowded, and great confusion ensues when the practice is carried to an extreme. In certain instances the petition for transfers developed a somewhat peculiar state of affairs with reference to the districts, some of which have been laid out as though established by a gerrymandering legislature. One student, whose home is on Tenth street and Eighth avenue S, within six blocks of the Central High, but in the South High district, asked permission to go to the nearer school, and the application was granted. A boy whose home is near Lake Harriet petitioned to be allowed to attend the East Side High school, to which he is nearer, by rail, than to the Central, although living in the Central district.

The Central High school district is a shoe-string strip, running through the middle part of the city. It should be redistricted, and an attempt will be made in the board of education to accomplish something along that line before another year.

No work was done in the schools this morning, the children simply reporting to be assigned to classes. Active work will begin to-morrow.

Gardens and Pasteurs Show Considerable Improvement.

The wekely crop bulletin for Minnesota, issued by the weather bureau, is summarized as follows:
The temperatures were moderate, though on the 29th, 30th and 31st they were somewhat lower than on other days of the week. Mod erate to light rains were pretty well distrib-uted on the evening of the 28th, and there were very widely scattered showers on the 25th, 26th and 29th. On the 28th a heavy wind accompanied the rain in Kittson county, with damage to hay stacks and grain in shocks The rains revived pastures, gardens, late corn and late potatoes, according to the amount of rain which fell, and in a few places in the south the soil was nicely soft-Closing out odds and ends of stock of our fine clear Havana cigars. All the stores Hill ran short of sausage. All the stores being closed he was in a quandary as to how to meet the demands of patrons. He chanced upon Mr. Knowles, who volunteered to open his store and get the meat for the restaurant man. Together they went into the store and stepped into the ice box for the sausage. The heavy door slammed shut, the latch fell and they were securely imprisoned. Finally Mr. Knowles pried a large piece of iron from the door spring on the inside and began the slow work of breaking a hole through the thick loor. They "took turns" at the tedious work, but success, after an hour and a half crowned their efforts. Through and a half, crowned their efforts. Through the hole Mr. Knowles thrust his arm, lifted the latch on the outside of the door -and they were free. They also had the

These reports could as well be given out an hour earlier, but it has been considered to be best for all concerned to hold them, in order that the traders might have time to digest them over night, and the mar-ket be saved the sudden shock of a good or bad government report coming upon it during active trading. The New York Produce Exchange men claim it would be a help to them to have the reports earlier, as many who are in the grain export trade could get the gist of the reports by cable to Liverpool, perhaps at times to their advantage in competitive trades against other wheat exporting countries. Against this there would be an increased nervous tension through all the trade and the natural uncertainty of the wheat market would be intensified at the time of is suance of every report. It is therefore not improbable that the interior grain markets will oppose the change, if the matter reaches a stage where it is likely to be made. The next government report is due on Sept. 10.

Members of Rawlins' post G. A. It was peculiarly appropriate that the place of interment should have been in the shadow of a giant oak, overlooking Lake Calhoun As he was a friend of men, so was Captain Cross a friend of trees. As president o the state board of forestry and the au-thor of laws for the preservation of wood-lands, Captain Cross was the unfailing champion of the monarchs of the forest, and had his wishes been consulted he would doubtless have preferred a tower-

The prayer at the grave was asked by Rev. Roselle Cross, of Nebraska, a brother of Captain Cross.
