VIEW BELOVED DEAD FACE

President's Body Lies in State in Buffalo After Simple Funeral Services.

BUFFALO, Sept. 30—Buffalo was a city of mourning. The site of a great pillaring demonstration of the French-American Free Bridge, turned into a cathedral of sorrow yesterday afternoon. From the very walls of the structure and the scaffolding the spot where President W. McKinley lay was a sea of black, and the multitude that came to view the hallowed remains of the dead man was a scene of grief and sobbing.

The hearse, encircled by a cordon of the city police and mounted and lighted officers of the guard, moved from the morgue, followed by the body of Chief Charles H. H. Mann, who was on duty at the time of the assassination, and then the horses of the fire department, was followed by the herds of the mounted police and the Guard and the Mounted police. The funeral cortège moved toward the City Hall.

Aапрк morning.
