Did Not Like Place .- Matthew Oxbrouh, convicted in police court on a charge of selling poor milk, recalled his bluff to serve the sentence rather than pay a fine. The state showed that the milk was below the standard and the court imposed a sentence of $20 or twenty days. Oxbrough was locked up in the detention room. He asked to be brought before the court again. He said that if the sentence was cut in two he would pay the fine. This the court finally allowed, and the milkman hurried to the fresh air of the street.

OTHER FRATERNAL INSURANCE ORDERS ARE INTERESTED.

Wednesday Evening,

Readjustment of Rates Necessary in All Congressman Has Been Consulting with Societies, Says an Authority of the Modern Woodmen of America-Others Say Changes Already Made Provide for Mortality Increase.

The change in the rate plan of insurance in the Royal Arcanum has caused considerable comment in fraternal in surance organizations generally as to what will be done by other organiza-tions whose memberships are rapidly reaching the heavy mortality period.
"All fraternal insurance societies have discovered that a readjustment of their rates, sooner or later, is neces-sary," said M. W. Dawson, state deputy for the Modern Woodmen of America. Fraternal societies are coming to real ize that insurance has a commercial value, and that the societies have no place from which to get money to pay losses except from their members. And with a better realization of these facts, fraternal societies are coming nearer a correct basis. I venture to say that duced this winter and, if possible, the the Royal Arcanum, with its new rates, site will be selected and purchased at is nearer to a correct basis than most once. The work can the of the others. Yet I believe the Royal Arcanum's experience has not been long.

We consider the existing rates to be sufficiently high to be safe for all time to come. A demonstration that our rates are right is shown in that since their adoption four years ago, we have paid every death loss, and at the same time have created a reserve fund of $2,500,000. Carefully prepared estimates lead us to believe that our rates are sufficient to meet all demands when the present meet all demands when the present membership becomes old and the mortal-

John Kennedy, custodian and assistant financial secretary for the Knights of Columbus, gives the following state-ment for his order:

"The Knights of Columbus were organized in 1882, and on a plan which it is believed will assure permanency to the insurance feature of the organiza-tion. ## FIREMEN HAVE REQUEST

WOULD ASK CONGRESS TO COM-PEL UNIFORMITY IN FIRE FIGHTING APPARATUS.

An effort is to be made by the Minneapolis and St. Paul fire departments to have congress pass a law requiring uniform connections for fire hose in all cities maintaining departments.

Under the present systems every city has its own screw thread, and hose or the unexpired term.

The members of the board presented Mr. Jenkins with a beautiful silver loving cup and a cut-glass cigar jar. The presentation speeches were made by Professor Conway MacMillan and President E R Salisbury. He was also

These appliances are kept at the headquarters in each city for emergency use and the fire companies near the dividing line are supplied with them. By this arrangement the twin cities are able to aid each other. Other cities in Minnesota, however, could not possibly get substantial aid from outside.

INCINERATOR TOO FAR FROM CITY

MANAGER OF MANUFACTURING

Adopted Garbage Crematory Plan When Its Success Was Demonstrated Here, Proves that More Central Location Would Be More Economical.

Since Minneapolis, four years ago, put up the first Decarie incinerator for the destruction of garbage and refuse, the city has attracted a great deal of attention from municipal health and sanitary officials, and nearly every sanitary officials, and nearly every large city has at one time or another large city has at one time or another had some representative to inspect the plant at the workhouse. In consequence of the success of the pioneer incinerator of this type, Atlanta, Ga.; Brooklyn, Johnstown, Pa.; Spokane, Wash.; Muncie, Ind., and Tampa, Fla., have followed the example of Minneapolis, while Lowell, Mass., and Los Angeles are now installing the same system.

It is worthy of note, however, that

It is worthy of note, however, that while Minneapolis has shoved the crematory as far out as possible, the cities above mentioned are saving thou-sands of dollars annually and handling the garbage much more expeditiously by constructing the crematories as close as possible to the business center of as possible to the business center of the city. In Atlanta the garbage plant is located within four blocks of Marietta street, the main street of the city.
It stands in plain sight of one of the most prominent corners of the city.
In Spokane, the crematory, or incinerator, is located near one of the bridges near the principal section of bridges near the principal section of the city.

John M. Root, general manager of the manufacturing company, thinks that it would be a great benefit to Minneapolis if the crematory were moved from the workhouse to Hall's island. "The idea of hauling garbage five miles naturally causes unfavorable comment from those who come to this city to study the garbage question," he said today. "With the crematory on Hall's island the health department could do the present work with one-half the men and teams, which would mean the saving of several thousands of dollars annually, or the present force could do twice as much work, giving daily service to sections of the city where collections of garbage are made semiweekly, and extending the collec-tion to parts of the city which are not thus benefited. Either alternative is desirable and should be seriously con-

"As I understand it, the only objection to the removal of the incinerator is the assumed one that it gives out offensive odors. As far as that feature is concerned, the plant could be located right on Nicollet avenue and no one would find the smoke any more offensive than from any steam plant. As a matter of fact, it would not be nearly so offensive. In view of what the other cities of the country are doing, Minneapolis should not hesitate long to derive the benefits which will surely follow."

are supplied with them. By this arrangement the twin cities are able to aid each other. Other cities in Minnesota, however, could not possibly get substantial aid from outside.

Even the fire equipments on the different government reservations are not uniform and Chief Canterbury said this morning that it would probably be an easy matter to get such a bill thru. The councils will help push the matter and the bill will be introduced at the next session of congress by some Minnesota representative. It will mean the saving of a large amount of money annually and on that account strong support is expected from the east.
