With Spokane fire runs to the good, Tozier replaced Titus in the second inning, and for the remainder of the game blanked the Redmen. He had excellent control, and was given magnificent support by his mates, not an error being charged to the Salt Lake team. Texter allowed but six hits in eight innings, and kept these well scat-

Foreythe, a California pitcher recently day and made a favorable impression. He servous and a triffe wild but with better support could have won his game Reilly made in his bid in the second inning Titus, the Sait Lake slab artist, was considerably out of form and had much difficulty in locating the plate. He was touched up quite freely, four safe ones being marked against him in the second finning. These, coupled with two free passes, netted the Indians five tallies Titus retired before the inning closed and was replaced by Tezier, who put a damper on the Redmen's festivities. In eight different innings the Spokane team tried desperately to locate the Mormon youth's curves, but in vain. Toxier had them at his mercy, and not a man crossed the plate after he went on the rubber.

Salt Lake Secures One.

Salt Lake secured one run in the second faning. A single, a base on balls and an error were responsible. Again in the sixth It chalked up one on a hit and an error. Three bits in the seventh neited still an-

Three hits in the seventh neited still another, and a two sacker and an error in the eighth brought in two more, tying the score Murdock inscided Toxier's high drive to deep middle, permitting Delmas to come in, and Bruyette trotted home a moment later on a caught fly.

Both teams blanked in the ninth. The Indians did no better in the tenth, retiring without reaching first base.

Bruyette, the first man up for the Saints, singled. Toxier did a similar stunt, placing Bruyette it second. He advanced still abother base on Muiler's short hit to the infield, and scored on Hannivan's long fly to center field, winning the game.

Bert dog to guard and herd their damestic animals. This remarkable bird, which the Indians call yakamik, and the ornithologists psophia crepitans, is found in a wild state in great forests that lie between the northern coasts of South America and the Amazon and British Guiana. to 200 in search of the berries, fruits and insects upon which they subsist. Their usual galt is a slow and stately march, but they enliven themselves from time to time by leaping in the air executing eccentric and fancy waltzes and striking the most absurd and pre-posterous attitudes. If pursued they endeavor to save themselves by running, for their flight is so weak, according to Schomburg, that when they attempt to fly over a body of water of any considerable width they are often compelled to drop upon it and save them-seives by swimming. When alarmed they utter the peculiar cry which has obtained for them the name of trumpeters. The sound is something like that produced by a person endeavoring to shout the syllables "Tow, tow, tow, tow, tow" with his mouth shut, or the doleful noise made by children on New Year's day with the trumpets. The yakamiks usually detrumpets. posit their eggs in a hollow in the ground, often at the foot of a tree. The nest generally contains ten eggs of a pale green color. The young birds follow their mothers as soon as they are hatched, but do not lose their pretty down covering until several weeks old The yakamiks are very readily tamed, and prove valuable servants to the In-dians, who domesticate them, and as they are courageous and will protect animals intrusted to their care at every risk to themselves, even dogs are obliged to yield to their authority.

They may be trusted with the care of a flock of sheep or domestic fowls, and every morning will drive the ducks and poultry to their feeding places and carefully collecting any stragglers, bring them safely home at night. A yakamik soon learns to know and obey the voice of his master, follows him when permitted wherever he goes, and appears delighted at receiving his caresess. It pines at his absence, and welcomes his return, and is extremely jealous of any rival. Should any animal attack its master the yakamik in atmost fury attacks it with wings and healt delying it away.
