TESTIMONY IN DETAIL.

Miss Patterson and Other Witnesses Appear for Defense.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19 -When the trial of Nan Patterson was resumed today it was announced that evidence would be submitted by the defense. It was said that Miss Patterson herself would probably be one of the twenty witnesses called to the stand. Her counsel announced that they would, through witnesses and through the defordant's own testimony, prove that she did not kill and did not plan to kill Caesar Young, as has been the conten-tion of Assistant District Attorney Witnesses may be called they said, to swear that they heard Caesar Young telephone to Miss Patterson on the morning of the shooting, asking her to meet him before he sailed for Europe. They also declare they will be able to prove that she could not have premeditated murder sixteen hours before the shooting as was argued by Mr. Rand, as she did not know she would see Young on the morning before he sailed. Miss Patterson has declared that she is not only willing but anxious to tell her story to the fure. her story to the jury.

Telephone Girl Testifies.

Having waived the privilege of making an opening address. Mr. Levy called as his first witness Ida F. Townsend. She said that on June 3 last she was employed as a telephone operator at the St. Paul hotel where the defendant and the Smiths resided. The witness recognized the defendant and said that "Nam" Patterson came to the desk and told her that if any one else but "Caesar" Young called for her, to tell them that she had gone out to dinner. Later in the evening Young called up and gave her a message which was delivered to Miss Patterson. Edward S. Grossman, a cierk ingan Eighth avenue confectionery store, said that Young used the telephone in the store shortly after, 7 o clock on the morning of Junet. According to the witness, when Young got his connection through the central office, he said.

"Good morning How do you feel this morning? Hurry up and get dressed and meet me."

Grossman said he remembered the ident of Young's early-morning early distinctly but dld not care to a signed statement produced by Mr. Rand in which Grossman said that he first recalled the visit of Young when O'Reilly questioned him two weeks ago. He did not think he would be called as witness when he signed the statement, and asked if the name of Witness Grossran had not been given him by the defense, Mr. Rand replied that Grossman's name had been supplied but added that he did not consider the young man's testimony as of any interest in the case.

The first alleged eye-witness of the tragedy in the cab called by the defense was Milton W. Hazelton, an inventor of Onconta N. Y. Mr. Hazleton said he was visiting in New York early in June and was on West Broadway on the morning of June 4. He was walking slowly along when he saw a hansom cab approaching. There were two persons in the cab, one a woman whom he identified as the defendant, and the other a man. As the cab neared him he saw the flash of a revolver.

Man Held the Revolver.

Man Held the Revolver.

Man Held the Revolver.

"Did the man have the revolver in his hand at the time of the report and the fiash?" asked Mr. Levy.

"He did," replied the witness. "He had both his hands raised above his left shoulder. As the shot rang out the man's head fell into the woman's lap and she placed her hands on top of his head." Mr. Hazelton said there was a man with him who also saw the shooting. It was this stranger who had called his attention to the cab. Who the stranger was he had not the slightest idea. He only knew that the stranger was a Free Mason, because he had given a Masonic salutation and had said that he was "from the Rocky mountains." He had never seen the man since they stood together on West Broadway and watched the scene in the cab. The witness insisted, when cross-examined by Assistant District Attorney Rand, that he had a clear view of the cab, and although he is an old man, his eyesight is very good. He had hesitated before making known what he had seed, but two weeks after the tragedy decided that he could not, in fairness to himself or the others in the case, stay in the background.

Crowds Demand Admittance.

When it became known that Miss Paterson was to take the stand the afteron great crowds gathered around the iminal court building and aftempted to in admittance. Finally the crowd be Criminal court building and attempted to gain admittance. Finally the crowd became so great that police reserves had to be summoned to help hold it in check.

Nan Patterson was called to the stand to testify in her own behalf at the afternoon ression, and in answer to the usual preliminary questions Miss Patterson said she had been married to a man named Martin and had been divorced from him. She went to California in 1902. On her way to Los Angeles she met Caesar Young.

way to Los Angeles she met Caesar Young.
In answer to a question as to whether she knew that Young was a married man, Miss Patterson replied: "I heard him speak of his wife." In answer to another question, she said that it was after she had met Young that she obtained a diorce from her husband.

After securing a divorce, she said, she continued her relations with Young and frequently visited the race track with him. In March of this year she came back East and lived with her sister, Mrs. Smith.

When they were separated they corresponded exchanging letters and telegrams almost daily

Then she came to New York on May 2, and the next day Young called on her at her hotel. They had no quarrel. She said the first proposition made to her that she should leave Young was made by Young's brother-in-law. McKean, who said that Mrs. Young wanted Miss Patterson to go away and leave Young.

Miss Patterson said the conversation with McKean took place in a reetaurant, Young was present and they talked over the matter for three-quarters of an hour. She denied that reference was made to the letter which was intercepted by Mrs. Young.

A most attractive display was that of M. M. Young. His "Head of an Old Man," though occupying little space, was one of the most striking pictures in the gallery. The massive head and strong features, with their rugged beauty, could not have been more estisfactorily depicted. The absence of any color but seplawas in its favor. Other gems by this same arrist were, "A Roman Beggar." "The Pirate," "Roof Tops" and the face of a cavaller done in a wash drawing. The latter was alive with a certain deborair expression, tantalizing and inviting. The pictures of Mr. Young were among the smallest on exhibition, but nearly every one was a gem. His "Luxembourg Gardens," and work in oils were good, but not as satisfying as his etchings. There is a vacuity of expression on the face of the "Cast Seller," which is no doubt true, to life, but which hurts No doubt an artist would say, the "Man with the Hoe" does that, too.

"Blowing Soap Bubbles," by J. T. Harwood is irresistable. This is one of the most lift-like of the pictures exhibited. The little girl seems not to be one of the portrails on the wall beside her One almost believes that she has climbed up leshind, somehow, and has seated herself in the frame, and become lost to her surroundings in the absorbtion of blowing outbiles. Young Was Going Away

As they sat in the grand stand Young

As they sat in the grand stand Young told Miss Patterson that he was going away and that he wanted to tell her all about it that night. She promised to remain at home that evening.

Miss Patterson said she remained at the track until after the end of the sixth race. She placed a bet on Cricket in the final race to wia, at Young's suggestion, and won. Smith casted the bet for her. They returned to the city by train, reaching the New York ferry-house at 6:15 p. m.

This testimenty was important, because it was alleged by the prosecution that it was at about the same hour at which the sixth race was run that the revolver with which Young was shot was sold by Fawnbroker Stern. The prosecution sought to show that the revolver was purchased by J. Morgan Smith.

From the ferry-house they went direct to their hotel by street car. In answer to a question Miss Patterson said that she never purchased a revolver; that she never went to Stern's pawnship with J. Morgan Smith, and that she pever saw Stern until after she had been arrested. She was sure, too, that Smith did not go to the pawnshop either salone or with any one else that dry, because he went all the way home with her. They reached the hotel about 7 o'clock.

RELIGIONS GROWING.

Rev. Lyman Abbott Believes in God, Episcopalians and Presbyterians Lead in Percentages of Increase.

> ligious sects, as their figures of growth for last year are announced, show a larger percentage of increase than in previous years, says the Herald. In sev eral denominations the ratio of growth exceeds the usual ratio of increase in population. This is notably the case in the Episcopal church, which last year gained 3 per cent on its membership of the previous year, while the population growth is estimated at about 2 per cent. The Episcopal church has added 25,915 to its membership, making a present figures 807,351.

In the Presbyterian church the increase in membership last year was at the rate of 2½ per cent, the gain in members being 27,431, and the total members being 27,431, and the total number 1,094,908. Last year's gain was 2 1-5 per cent. The Southern Presby-terian church, a much smaller body than the Northern, having but 239.888 members, gained 2 per cent last year. The ratio of gain by the Methodist membership is not so large as in the other bodies named, but was 1 4-5 per cent, or almost as much as the estimated ratio of population growth. For the previous year the Methodist ratio was only 1 per cent. The body now has 8,064,735 members, of whom about 200,000 are connected with foreign conferences It is stated in the Presbyterian hand-
