WHAT AMERICAN PARTY WILL DO

Old residents of Salt Lake remember the impetus which a Gentile victory gave to business sixteen years ago. They recall with pleasure the splendid and vigorous life that was injected into real estate. They believe that had not the city suffered the general depression following the presidential campaign of 1892 the "boom" would have been permanent. They also know that while American cities revived from the business depression, and have since been enjoying the greatest prosperity they have ever known, Salt Lake is not of that number.

Why did Salt Lake not enjoy the common lot of the really good cities of the United States? Because the people had no sooner been given statehood than the leaders of the Mormon church commenced to plan to make of the general and local governments a part of the ecclesiastical scheme. Church and state were made one and the same. The work of the priesthood was so obnoxious as to repel rather than to invite immigration.

Great though her resources are, Salt Lake has not enjoyed material growth. The good work commenced by the Liberals was neutralized by the inroads of the ecclesiastics. Now we are struggling for population, well knowing that there will be no growth of consequence so long as the machinery of the government is used to intimidate or to punish those who refuse to yield to the priesthood.

The American party promises to devote its entire energies to the up-building of a truly American city. Its officers are pledged to the work of restoring public confidence by assuring to every man, woman and child equal and exact justice in every public endeavor. There can be no promise of justice made to homeseekers so long as the local government is controlled by the bigoted leaders of the dominant church.

Salt Lake's resources are better known today than they were in the days of Liberal victories. The country is generally more settled. A boom now would be permanent and add to the city's population more than 20,000 good citizens in less than two years.

Is there a property owner in Salt Lake who will be so blind as to vote to repel the thousands who would be attracted to this city? Is there a workingman who would not welcome the building boom that would result from this increased population?

SUIT CASE VICTIM IS IDENTIFIED

Finding of Rings Gives First Positive Clue in the Mystery.

WOMAN WAS MISS GEARY, OF CAMBRIDGE, MASS.

Employed as Chorus Girl, She Suddenly Dropped Out of Sight.

BOSTON, Oct. 29.—That the dismembered body found in a suit case at Winthrop on September 21 is that of Susan Geary of Cambridge is the belief of the girl's family and friends and of the Boston police department.

Mother Identifies Rings.

Miss Geary, who was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Geary, was a chorus girl of the "Shepherd King" company and was known on the stage as Ethel Durrell. She was 21 years of age. Mrs. Geary today identified three rings taken from the right hand found in the second dress suit case, picked up near the new Charles bridge on Friday last, as those belonging to her daughter when she absconded herself from the theatrical company on September 11.

Fiance Confirms It.

Confirmation of Miss Geary's disappearance from the company came from Morris Nathan, secretary of the manager of the company, and to whom Miss Geary was engaged. Mr. Nathan is now in Pittsburgh, Pa. According to Nathan, Miss Geary started from New York on the terms of the day after the company closed its last engagement in this city, and he is confident that she was in Boston at the next performance in Lowell on the following day. Instead, however, a message was received by the company's manager from Morris Nathan, secretary of Boston, which stated that "Miss Durrell" was suffering from stomach trouble and was unable to report for several days.

Drops Out of Sight.

Miss Geary dropped out of sight after that, and so far as the police are concerned, she has been unable to find any one who either saw or communicated with the girl. Ten days later, on September 21, a dress suit case in which was a young woman's hat was found floating in the harbor three miles below the city, and on Friday last another suit case, containing the arms and legs of the victim, was taken from the water of the city docks. On the fingers were three rings, which gave the police the first clue to the mystery.

Two Fatalities Indirect.

The fatalities resulted, indirectly, from the bursting of the water pipe which flooded the immediate neighborhood for several blocks, damaging a number of business houses. Two of the persons who lost their lives were overcome by gas in the Illinois tunnel at Eighteenth and Clark streets today.

Girl's Fiance Arrested.

Almost a Nervous Wreck When Taken Into Custody.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 29.—After a long and searching examination at police headquarters, lasting until 1 o'clock this morning, the condition of the girl, who was the victim of the "Shepherd King" company, was held on a charge of murdering his sweetheart, Miss Susan Geary, a victim of the Winthrop suitcase mystery.

Nathan Is Arrested.

The local police received instructions last night from Superintendent of Police Pierce of Boston to apprehend Nathan and find out what he knew about the disappearance of the girl. Nathan was accompanied by Manager B. A. Reinold, Stage Director Samuel Forrest and Kinco, a member of the company, who was a dresser, was arrested after a long search in the Hotel Henry and taken to police headquarters.

Accused Is Overcome.

Nathan was unable to stand when he learned that Cole was from detective headquarters. He had been crying during the past week and was so unwell that Kinco and Forrest had to almost carry him to his quarters. TOOK POISON TO END EXISTENCE

Despondent Over Losses at the Gambling Table, a Sheep Buyer Commits Suicide.

N. L. JACOBSEN SPENDS LAST DOLLAR FOR DRUG

Goes to Room in Lincoln House, Swallows Morphine, Is Found Dead.

Despondent because of continued losses at the gambling table, N. L. Jacobsen, a sheep buyer from Chicago, spent his last dollar for morphine Saturday night and, swallowing enough poison to kill a dozen men, lay down in the Lincoln house on East First South street to breathe his last.

Body Found Sunday Night.

Although Jacobsen evidently took the poison late Saturday night, he was not discovered until Sunday night at 11 o'clock. He had been in the habit of sleeping considerable during the day and the clerk did not suspect that anything was wrong until he failed to get up at his usual time in the afternoon.

Sends Porter to Awaken Him.

About 4 o'clock a porter was sent to Jacobsen's room to awaken him. The door was found to be locked and no amount of hammering on it would bring a response. The porter called the office and brought this information to the office. The clerk was busy, and in some way the matter was forgotten. At 9:30 o'clock the clerk went out and, looking over the transom, saw that the man was dead. The light was still burning and from the transom it could be seen that a half-emptied bottle of morphine lay on a chair.

Door Broken Open.

Upon breaking open the door Jacobsen was found to be cold in death. The half-emptied bottle told the story, as the door was locked from the inside and the occupant of the room with him. The bed was as smooth as though he had simply undressed and gone to sleep. There was no evidence of a struggle, as the poison began to deaden the nerves, and two bottles of whisky, still half full, gave evidence that the man had consumed a sufficient quantity of stimulants to give him the desired courage to take the fatal step.

Had Gambled Heavily.

To one of the guests of the Hotel Jacobsen had admitted that he was a big gambler at local gambling houses. One statement was to the effect that he had lost $100 on the day before Friday. Nothing of value was found in his pockets and a guarantee for a high-priced watch indicates that his timepiece had gone to some pawn shop for a last stake at the green cloth.

Leaves But One Letter.

In Jacobsen's pocket was a letter addressed to Miss May Dayvenport Poogeto, Idaho, in care of the Elk saloon. The letter, which was written with a pencil, read as follows: "Dear May—I wrote you a postal and sent a note. I am going to send this to you by a fellow who has a pocket and a guarantee for a high-priced watch indicates that his timepiece had gone to some pawn shop for a last stake at the green cloth."

Wore Good Clothes.

Jacobsen first came to the Lincoln house August 29. He was well dressed and stated to those with whom he conversed from time to time that he represented a Chicago firm, for whom he was buying sheep. He was about 25 years of age and had the appearance of a well-to-do business man.

Left No Farewell Message.

There was absolutely nothing in Jacobsen's pockets with which to identify him. He signed the letter with the name of "Sid," although an envelope in his pocket had been addressed to him as N. L. Jacobsen. After spending a few days at the Lincoln house in August, at which time he seemed to have plenty of money, Jacobsen left and was not heard from until about a week ago, when he again registered and has since had a room at the hotel.

Inquest Today.

Coroner Dana T. Smith was notified and, after examining the body and clothing, the remains were being taken to Evans' morgue on State street. The inquest will be held today and an effort made to learn further particulars about the man from the address given on the envelope.

Was a Hard Drinker.

From a regular roomer at the Lincoln house it was learned that Jacobsen had a fondness for liquor and had been a frequent customer at sporting houses on Commercial street.
