ALEXANDRIA ENGINEE SUFFERS BAD INJURY

C. B. Jewell Accidentally Falls from Speeding Engine.

Alexandria, Va., May 2.—Engineer Charles B. Jewell, who lives at 126 South Henry street, this city: fell from the tender of his hast Yuesday night while the train was traveling at the rate of about 25 miles an hour. As a result he sustained a broken leg and also had his head injured. He is now a patient in the University Hospital, Charlottesville, Va.

At the time of the accident the train was just north of Somerset, Orange county, Va. Mr. Jewell had just stepped from his cab to the tender of the locomotive, Fireman Guy Wade, of this city, a few minutes afterward upon looking into the cab discovered the engineer had not returned and he brought the train to a stop and a searching party composed of members of the frain's crew found Engineer Jewell in an unconscious cardition lying beside the railroad

This is a task which requires experience and training. Training for this service is what the students will receive in the Home Service Institute. Six weeks of full time will be required and four hours a week will be given to class work and twenty-five hours a week to practical field work under competent supervision. The students who successfully finish the course will receive a cer-tificate signed by the Director General of Civilian Relief and by the Director of the Institute.

The number of students is limited to twenty-five. There are still a few vacancies. Full particulars can be obtained from the Home Service Institute, American Red Cross, 606 Kenois Building.

AVIATORS FURNISH THRILLS FOR CROWD

Three Expert Airmen Do Stunts for Potomac Park Audience.
