

DYING GIRL TOLD OF BRAVE FIGHT TO SAVE HONOR

Ante-Mortem Statement of Miss Hood Presented at Murder Trial.

DEFENSE INSANITY Prosecution Completes Case And Witnesses for Defense Heard.

Miss Lillian P. Hood, the murdered war worker, received mortal wounds while fighting to protect her honor, she stated in her dying declaration made at Emergency Hospital and admitted as evidence for the prosecution in the case of James Henry Jackson, on trial for murder in Justice Siding's division of the District Supreme Court yesterday.

The statement of Miss Hood was taken by Miss Pauline M. Scott, a stenographer from the office of the district attorney, and read to the jury by her from the stand as a witness.

She said that Miss Hood became very weak while making the direct statement and her voice became almost unintelligible when questions were asked her, so much so that James J. O'Leary, who asked the questions, was obliged to lean over the bed with his ear very near her to understand what she was saying.

Standing By Bed.
Miss Scott said that Miss Hood stated that she was awakened by some one standing by her bed, and she called out to know who it was. She said that the man said, "It's me," and began climbing in the bed. She fought him back, calling for help, which did not come, and he shot twice. She seized him by the ankles, and was dragged out of the window.

She was then shot and beaten over the head with a pistol.

Miss Hood then grew very weak and repeated, almost unintelligibly, "I shoot him! I shoot him!" She had been told before Miss Scott entered the ward that she could live but a short time. Miss Hood told her when she entered that she knew her condition.

Dr. J. W. Mankin, surgeon at Emergency Hospital, told on the stand of having been requested by officers from the office of the district attorney to tell Miss Hood that she could not recover and ask her to make a dying statement.

He said he hesitated, then when he went to her ward he could not tell her and went back to the officer with the statement that he could not do so. The officers insisted that it was important that it be made and he at last went back and told her. She said she was aware of her condition.

Prosecution Rests.
District Attorney John E. Laskey, insisted over objections, that the condition of Miss Hood at the time she made the statement be given to the jury.

The prosecution rested their case before noon and the defense asked time to get their witnesses to the court. Justice Siding gave a recess until 1 o'clock when the defense began the submission of evidence.

Official Stenographer John T. Laws was the first witness called when court convened yesterday. He identified the statements made to the police at headquarters by Jackson after the murder, and told of the circumstances surrounding its being made by him.

District Attorney Laskey read the statement to the jury. In it Jackson described how he had traveled over the distance of several miles and how he had committed each act as had been testified to by police officers.

Dr. Mankin, of Emergency Hospital, told the jury of his having treated Miss Hood when she was brought to that institution. Dr. Laskey announced, "That's the case of the government; your honor, please."

Defense Opens.
The defense, in stating their case to the jury, made it known that they would ask that it find on evidence to be submitted that the prisoner was a degenerate with a continuous crime record extending over a period of fifteen years of a diseased and insane mind at the time that the crimes, for which he is on trial, were committed.

That as a boy Jackson had traits, characteristics and tendencies distinctively foreign to the average boy. While in the Leavenworth penitentiary he developed evidences of insanity.

Mrs. Fannie Jackson, mother of the prisoner, was the first witness and she was rather reserved in speaking out for her son. He was always unruly and of a bad nature, she said. She was away from home when, several years ago he was arrested for firing the house.

Hazel Roy Henderson, a colored man and a former bellman, now serving time in jail for house-breaking, told of having been in Jackson's room many nights for liquor and that there was a dope outfit there from which Jackson often doctored his liquor before drinking it. He had seen the needle which Jackson also used.

But two witnesses of the defense were examined at the afternoon session of the court. They will call several. Dr. William A. White, who had been called as an expert on insanity, was excused until today.

TO LAUNCH FIRST 3-YEAR WARSHIP

Plans are being completed by the Navy Department for the launching April 20 at the Brooklyn navy yard of the 33,000-ton battleship Tennessee, the first of the three-year building program battleships to be completed.

The Tennessee is of the same class as the Maryland and Idaho, already completed. Though her weight will be the same as that of her sister ships, she is the heaviest ship launched by the navy in point of dead weight—15,000 tons.

Acting Secretary of Navy Roosevelt will attend the launching ceremonies. The governors of Tennessee and New York are also expected to be present.

MUST SHACKLE GERMANY TO SECURE FRENCH ENTITY

League of Nations Drafters Have Overlooked Curbing of Numerical Superiority of Foe, Says Famous Italian Historian.

Paris, April 22.—Is the German problem insoluble? No—but the only way to solve it is the way that was not chosen—through the league of nations.

It would be foolish to believe Germany would forget the loss of her colonies even if she retained Alsace. The moderate intentions of the extra-continental powers—England and America—are insufficient to avert the German danger. Equally insufficient is the severity of the Continental powers, France and Italy. The only way, of course, to "tame Germany in a decisive way" would be to dismember her completely, but that would not be a peace of justice.

On the other hand, he de-militarization of the left bank of the Rhine would be a partial guarantee if an enemy coalition knew how to act with energy and swiftness. Experience which we have had with the enemy powers during the war and armistice are not very encouraging.

Must Limit Foe Army.
Since her superiority of numbers would assure Germany of a decisive advantage in future wars, the first condition of peace that should have been exacted from her is that she should never have a military force superior to that of France, and that the necessary control be established to assure the world that the agreement would be kept.

But long experience of history proves that limitation of armament is unsuccessful when imposed by a victorious power on a vanquished country in a binding manner as the supreme humiliation.

Thus, limitation of Germany's armaments would have settled the whole German problem—provided only that all great powers likewise had pledged themselves to a general limitation on land and sea. Then—and then only—the other nations would have had the necessary moral authority to exercise a severe check on the German armaments because they themselves would be subject to such a check with the league of nations as the organ of the general limitation and mutual control of armaments.

England and France Refuse.
But it is this conception of the league of nations that the Peace Conference has been unwilling to accept. England and France have refused in an indirect way. President Wilson after a long fight and much hesitation finally yielded, and thus the German problem has remained unsolved.

This is the first great check on the Peace Conference and on the idea of the league of nations as well.

I am afraid Europe and America will have to regret it for a long time to come.

CARNEGIE GAVE DAUGHTER KISS

But Heiress of "Laird of Skiboo" Brings Husband Potential $600,000,000.

New York, April 22.—Andrew Carnegie, one of the world's richest men, gave to his daughter, Margaret, today when she wed Ensign Roswell Miller, U. S. N., "A sunny disposition, a smile and a hearty kiss."

This was the description of Charles M. Schwab, who was one of the guests at the wedding, as the "Ironmaster's" gift to the bride.

The cold fact is that Miss Carnegie that was heiress to the $600,000,000 fortune of "The Laird of Skiboo."

Miss Carnegie was married in the breakfast room of the Carnegie mansion, 2 East Ninety-first street. The ceremony was simple by choice of the bride, whose upbringing has been markedly democratic, despite her father's vast wealth. She was given away by her father and had no attendants except Miss Dorothy Miller, sister of the groom and the bride's friend.

Her brown hair covered with a lace veil, which Mrs. Carnegie helped make, the bride, attired in white, was trimmed with point lace, and carrying lilacs of the valley, entered the breakfast room which had been transformed into a bower of her favorite flowers. Behind her walked Miss Miller, while the groom, a son of the late Roswell Miller, president of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad, a comparatively poor man, awaited her.

Beside him were the Rev. Dr. William Pierson Merrill, pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church, who performed the ceremony, the Rev. Dr. Henry Stone Coffin, of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, who assisted, and the groom's best man and ushers.

A string orchestra of twenty pieces played the wedding march.

Baptism Skirt.
Immediately after receiving congratulations from the guests the bride and groom were conducted to another flower-decorated room, where the wedding breakfast was served.

As the bride and groom emerged from the house, covered with confetti and laughing gaily, they were pursued by the guests who showered them with rice as they entered Miss Carnegie's limousine. The skirling of bagpipes from within the house was heard as the automobile whirled them away on their honeymoon.

The bride's going-away gown was of Victory blue tricotine and a small black toque, trimmed with blue flowers crowned her head. She had thrown about her shoulders a sable scarf against which the rice and confetti showed conspicuously.

The honeymoon will be spent, it was reported, at "Shadowbrook," the Carnegie place at Lenox, Mass.

As Mrs. Walter Damrosch, one of the guests, emerged from the Carnegie mansion after the ceremony, she heard the wails of a small boy, sitting on the curb at Fifth avenue and Ninety-second street, crying lustily.

"Here, here; tears will never do at a wedding, even outside the house," said Mrs. Damrosch. She left the canopied, carpeted lane, and, drawing near the lamenting child, presented him with a monogrammed box of wedding cake, whereupon his tears vanished.

The bride's age was given as 22 and the groom's 24 on the marriage license.

Miss Catherine was graduated from Miss Spencer's, an exclusive girls' school, in 1913. Miller, at the time he went to France to become a truck driver in the French army, in 1915, was a sophomore at Stevens Institute, where he was preparing to become an engineer. When America entered the war he returned to enter the navy, receiving an ensign's commission. He served as engineering operations of squad 14 submarine chasers, and was stationed near New York during most of the war.

BISHOP WOULD GIVE KAISER LIFE TERM

Cracking Stone for Churches Destroyed Suggested as Punishment.

Boston, April 22.—Making big ones into little ones as a permanent occupation for William Hohenzollern, erstwhile Kaiser of Germany, is the recommendation of Bishop Theo. S. Henderson, of Detroit.

Addressing the members of the Boston Methodist Social Union at the People's Temple, he declared that if he had a voice in the punishment of the former kaiser he would have him spend the remainder of his life cracking stones for the rebuilding of churches wrecked in the war zone.

Bishop Henderson has recently returned from a tour of Europe.

MILLION DOLLAR HOME PLANNED FOR D. C. CLUB

You must provide a club for the National Capital which will perform the highest kind of service. You must challenge the attention of prospective members by something very much worth while.

"If the proposal is large enough to challenge attention and excite ambition, I deem the plan a success."

Frank P. Milburn, architect, told the members just the kind of a building that would be needed for the proposed club. "You want to get a building site which will be considerably longer than its width. You must consider the length of bowling alleys, swimming pools and other incidentals," he said.

"The club must have an easily accessible location. Get it as near the center of the city as possible. But sacrifice location to suitability for the purpose."

Col. Robert N. Harper, president of the Chamber of Commerce and president of the District National Bank, also made a speech in favor of the proposal. Frank J. Hogan, Percy Foster and others spoke favorably of the project.

Unanimous Vote.
When the question of ratification of the activities' committee report on the $1,000,000 club was put to a vote not a single dissenting voice was heard. The program went through.

with a rush. The vote was unanimous. Work on the details of the proposition begins immediately. Committees will be appointed in the near future, which will get down to definite plans on the subject.

The membership goal will be 2,500 or 3,000. It was announced. This quota is expected to be exceeded by a big margin as soon as the details for the clubrooms and facilities become realities.

The report of the activities committee which drew up the plans for the $1,000,000 clubhouse, under the chairmanship of E. C. Graham, was read by President Joe A. Whitfield.

The report read: "Our commercial activities should be broadened, better to serve the business interests of the city. "Our civic activities should be greater and co-ordinated with our commercial interests. "We should have much more and very much better facilities for our members and visiting guests."

"We should have the equipment of a first-class, modern athletic club, from swimming pool and gymnasium to roof garden."

The name of the club will be changed. The matter was referred to the board of governors at the meeting last night. Such suggestions as the Federal Citizens Club and the Citizens Club of Washington were suggested. Further details, President Whitfield announced, will be made public in the near future.
