TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 12, 1857. scribed the breastpin and money. The latter consisting of four half eagles, one of which had Judge Remsen's First Client. a hole in it, that had been made by Murch, the Old Judge Remsen of Cowan was fond of tellieweler, so Mrs. Wesley could string on a ribing his early experience at the bar. My first bon for a birthday present for the minister's case, he would say, came upon me unexpectlittle boy: and that was one way Mrs. Wesley edly, after I had waited a considerable time for knew the money was hers. He also gave me a letter signed "Eunice Gregory," that he had found in the yard that day, and which he maina client. The way I came to get it was this : A young girl, Helen Montressor, was to be tried at our County Court for stealing a breasttained was in Mrs. Wesley's hand-writing. p n, valued at four dollars, and twenty dollars That had made him suspect that her name wasn't in gold, from the trunk of her employer, James Naesmith before she was married to Wesley; Wesley, merchant in the town of Bedford. he had thought that she might have been some relation to old Mr. Gregory, who died, and there must have been something bad to make The theft, which was detected five weeks before, occasioned quite a talk at the time, as the girl was beautiful, and Wesley and his wife Eunice her change her name. were anything but that, besides being generally This information made a deep impression on been foul play in the prosecution for theft. The subsequent trial of a gang of counterfeiters and horse thieves had so absorbed public attention, that the case of Helen Montressor was forgotten, and no one seemed to care for her fate. But when she was placed in the prisoner's box, her beauty riveted every eye and when the Judge asked her who was her counsel, and she modestly replied that she had of March—the very day Helen's trunk was searched. I asked at what hour the coin was none and no money to pay a lawyer, there was not a member of the bar who would not have willingly undertaken her case. The Judge after looking round for a moment, fixed his eye upon me, and said, "Mr. Remsen, will you please act as this young lady's counsel." I started as though I had been shot. Luckily, a juror had been taken ill, and the Court adjourned till ten next morning, or I am afraid detested. People said Helen had been shamefully treated by her mistress, who was jealous of her; and it was even hinted that there had

As I left the court-room I looked at my watch; is was eleven, so I had but twenty-three hours to prepare. I called upon the District Attorney and asked to see the indictment and the evidence taken before the Justice of the Peace. As he tumbled over a pile of documents in search of the papers, he said: "The Judge must have a spite against you, Remsen, to put you in such a tight place, and you a green hand. No offense," he added, as he observed the rising color of my cheek-"no offense; I simply meant that you are inexperienced There are the documents; take them home with you-only be sure to bring them to court tomorrow morning. You will see that your client has not a chance.

I should have made sad work with my client's

I was annoyed at this light reference to my client, for whom I already entertained deep respect and believed innocent; but I said nothing. Hastening to my office I locked myself in and commenced the analysis of my case. The evidence consisted of the testimony of James and Eunice Wesley, Sarah Brown, a seamstress, Charlotte Boyce, a domestic, and Thomas Hannegan, a man of all work employed by the Wesleys. Hannegan's evidence seemed straightforward and truthful, and so did the servant girl's. I made up my mind that they were not unfriendly to my client, and that I would seek an interview with them, although it would necessitate a journey to Bedford. In Miss Brown's testimony I at once detected intense malice, and determined to harrow her unmercifully in cross-examination. Wesley's evi dence was similar in style and matter to that of Hannegan; but Mrs. Wesley's was full, discursive and acrimonious-such as, that "She had always believed Helen to be a viper, but her husband upheld the trollop." To my mind the case seemed clear: Mrs. Wesley herself had put those things in Helen's trunk. I next went to the Court House, and requested Mr. Mace, the Sheriff, who lived in the wing of the building, to introduce me to the prisoner. He conducted me to her cell. Although the bolts clanged heavily as they sprang from locks, our entrance did not seem to attract her attention. She was standing with clasped hands before her grated window, gazing at the sky. The Sheriff touched her arm. and said, "Miss Montressor, Mr. Remsen is the lawyer who is to manage your case, and he wants to see you." She started, turned quickly around, and made an inclination of her head, to indicate her readiness to listen, but she said not a word. The Sheriff left the cell and we were alone. Conscious that every moment was precious. I said:

" Miss Montressor, we must throw aside ceremony, and communicate frankly upon this painfully business. I believe you are innocent. The thing is to prove you so. This promises to be difficult, but I am not without hope. If you will tell me frankly, what your experience has been with the Wesleys, my task may be lightened."

I then put a series of questions, and learned she was fifteen years old; that she had lived with Mrs. Wesley, who had been married about eight years; that she had lived with a kind old gentleman named Gregory, who had taught her to call him grandpa; that Mrs. Wesley, who was then called Miss Naesmith, lived with Mr. Gregory, also; that he seemed afraid of Miss Naesmith; that Miss Naesmith inherited all his property, and married Mr. Wesley about a month after he died; that she told her never to call him grandpa any more, for he wasn't any relation to her; that the day on which old Mr. Gregory died he gave her a sealed package, and told her not to let Eunice see it, but to give it to a certain lawyer when he returned to town, for it would make her a rich young lady; and then he cried, and said he had let Eunice have her own way too much; that she fell asleep with the packet in her lap, and when she awoke it was gone, and she never dare ask any questions about it; that Mrs. Wesley hated her and beat her, and treated her like a slave, and that she sometimes thought of drowning herself, she was so miserable; that Mr. Wesley said improper things to her; that he was a bad man, but weak and under his wife's control; that the day on which her trunk was searched, she was sent on an errand to the minister's; was gone about an hour and a half, and on her return was taken up stairs to see her trunk opened, before she had pulled off her bonnet and shawl; then she was sure Mrs Wesley had put things in her trunk while she was out, because she (Helen) had overhauled it that morning, and they were not in it then; but whether Mr. Wes- | in two. ley knew about it she could not say, although she rather thought he did, because he looked guilty when his wife was opening her trunk. Telling the poor girl to cheer up, I went to the Sheriff's sitting room, where I found Mrs. Mace. I at once informed her that in my opinion Miss Montressor was a persecuted girl, and of foost rate lager bier, and venefer dey knocks hoped she would try to cheer her up, so that she could enter the court-room with a good heart on the morrow; this the kind-hearted woman promised to do, and I hastened to my office. My brain was in a whirl. Gregory-grandpa-the packet which was to make her a rich young jady-its mysterious disappearance? Was old Mr. Gregory really Helen's grandfather! Was the packet his last will and testament, bequeathing his property to her ? And had Eunice Naesmith, now Mrs. Wesley, stolen it from the child as she slept that she might clutch the property by virtue of a former will which had been forced from the old man? "He cried, and said he had let Eunice have her own way too much! Her own way about what? I felt certain that I had got on the track of great villainy, and thought I could understand the reason for Eunice Wesley's hatred of Helen, and her desire to blast the poor girl's character. After spending a half hour in arranging my Napoleon's recent levees, by appearing with her robe looped up at the sides, so as to expose her symmetrical limbs almost to the knees, and dis-plans, I ordered a carriage and drove to Bed-It was two when I reached the village. I wished first to see Hannegan, Wesley's serving playing the neatly turned ankles, which were main. By making a few cautious inquiries at clasped with magnificent bracelets. The robe or the tavern, and disbursing a half dollar to the hostler, Hannegan was soon in my room. He was pleased to find I was Helen's friend, and on my promising him never to let what he said go to Mrs. Wesley's ear, he told me she had treated the poor girl like a dog; that he had seen her strike Heien, and heard her threaten to kill her and ruin her reputation; and that seemed floating in my memory as though I had seen it connected with some event which had faded from recollection and was dimly recalled.

I dismissed Hannegan, and paid a visit to Mr. Murch, the jeweler, told him who I was,

and for what I called. He remembered the half eagle business-in fact it was on his record.

He turned to see on what day the hole was made in the half eagle. It was Wednesday, the 17th

I turned to depart. At that moment Wesley entered the shop and was accosted by the jeweler, who gave me a wink to indicate who he was. We had never before met, so I regarded him at my leisure. He was an evil looking man. Over his left eye was a queer shaped sear, which ran crookedly across his forehead.

The instant I saw the scar I felt as though the whole thing was clear. The scar, the description of which I so well remembered, brought the whole story freshly to my mind. I remembered now the name of Eunice Gregory-the child murderess-and there stood her accomplice under an assumed name. Giving the jeweler a warning glance, I hastened to my carriage and drove furiously home, shut myself in my room, and determined to pass the entire night, if necessary, in preparing for the contest.

I wished to clear my client on the charge made

I ransacked my memory to find something tangible concerning the past career of Eunice Gregory and her accomplice, but found nothing.

I had read the story many years ago before in a newspaper, the name of which I could not remember. I could not prove that the Wesleys were the same parties; and should I mention my suspicions in court the District Attorney would scout at them as ridiculous and malicious inventions of my own, and the Judge would charge the jury to pay no heed to them. I must sap the characters of the Wesleys in my cross-examinations of their witnesses and thus try to effect a breach sufficient to justify a direct assault, on a charge of conspiracy against Helen, and crush James Wesley on the witness stand.

And I wove my meshes for the victim until the morning sun rays streamed through my win-

Position in Sleeping .- It is better to go to sleep on the right side, for then the stomach is very much in the position of a bottle turned upside down, and the contents are aided in passing out by gravitation. If one goes to sleep on the left side the operation of emptying the stomach of its contents is more like drawing water from a well. After going to sleep let the body take its own position. If you sleep on your back, especially soon after a hearty meal, the weight of the the great vein of the body, near the back bone, more or less. If the arrest is partial the sleep is disturbed, and there are unpleasant dreams. If the meal has been recent or hearty, the arrest is more decided, and the various sensations, such as falling over a precipice, or the pursuit of a wild beast, or other impending danger, and the desperate effort to get rid of it, arouses us, and sends on the stagnating blood, and we wake in aff.ight,

But when we are not able to escape the danger when we do fall over the precipice, when the ate heartier than common! This last, as a frequent cause of death, to those who have gone to enough to deter any rational man from a late and hearty meal. This we do know, with certainty, rhæa, or cholera, or billious colic, ending in death in a very short time, is properly traceable to a late large meal. The truly wise will take the safe side. For persons who eat three times a day, it is amply sufficient to make the last meal of cold bread and butter, and a cup of some warm drink. No one can starve on it, while a perse-

DEPARTMENT OF INTERIOR, May 8, 1855.

From natural defects and the unequal range of my eyes, I have been compelled to use glasses for several years. I have tried different opticians without obtaining glasses perfectly fitted to my eyes. Four months since Mr. Tobias made two pairs especially for me, which I have found to serve me perfectly. By the use of his optometer he is enabled to adapt glasses most minutely to the eye.
