ASSASSINATION.

LATEST FROM WHITE HOUSE!

No Change at 4:30 p. m.

At 4:30 there was no change for the better The President's condition was practically unchanged, though he was weaker. Col. Cork. hill, District Attorney, who had been sent for, arrived with the Attorney General to take the President's anti-mortem deposition. There are very few people at the White House now. The members of the Cabinet are there.

The following bulletin has just been issued by the attending physician, Dr. Bliss: "The President's condition is somewhat less favor able, symptoms of internal hemorrhage being distinctly recognized. His temperature is 95-8 (a little below normal.) Pulse 132. He suffers rather more pain, but his mind is clear.'
A dispatch was read to the President from Major Swalm, who accompanies Mrs. Garfield on her return trip here, that she is bearing up Cannot Live Until Morning. 4:45.—Health Officer Townshend, who is one of the consulting physicians, has just said that the President cannot live until morning. In his opinion the ball has entered the liver, and the President will die even before peritonitis sets in. He is becoming very restless and the pain increases.

The condition of the President is about the same as at last report. His pulse increases and decreases, according as the pain is violent or subsides for a moment. His clothing has not yet been removed. He is perfectly conscious, and lies most of the time with his hand in that of his eldest son, James, who sits by his bedside. Up to the present the physicians have given him five-eights of a grain of morphia. There will be another consultation at 7

The President Easter at 5 O'Clock. Dr. Bliss, at 5 o'clock, said: "The President is resting easier. His condition, however, is very critical-very critical." Vice-President Arthur will arrive here to-

In view of the serious condition of the President of the United States in consequence of the assault upon his life, and the state of public feeling, the Commissioners earnestly request the authorities to maintain quietness and order, and especially to repress all noisy de-monstrations on the 4th instant, By order of the Board.

J. DENT. President. The News at Albany. [Special Dispatch to The Evening Star.]

ALBANY, July 2, 1:30 P. M. There gathered throngs at the hotels, and the legislative halls were thrown into an intense excitement at 10 o'clock this morning by the report that President Garfield had been shot twice at the depot in your city and killed. Everybody, without regard to party affiliation and cliques, was wild over the news. A rush was made to all the telegraph offices, and for a half hour everything received seemed to be in confirmation of the story, and the announcement of his death was bulletined about the city. Finally a dispatch was received from C. M. Depew, who is in New York, stating that Dr. Bliss wires that "Garfield was not dangerously wounded," which in a measure quited the excitement, but there is a feeling of intense anxiety for further news, details and name of the party who fired the shot.

Great Excitement-Talk of Organizing to Go to Washington.

[Special Dispatch to The Star.] PHILADELPHIA, July 2, 3:06 p.m.—The excite ment here over the attempted assassination of the President has not been paralleled since the murder of Lincola. Large crowds are gathered about the newspaper offices and on Chestnut street, discussing the event. The bulletins are contradictory and exciting. There is a great deal of talk in the crowds of organizing and going to Washington. This talk comes from those who are excited politically, and probably should not be heeded. of the rumors circulating here is that the assassin cried "I am a stalwart," but that is known to be untrue, as four persons who arrived on the limited train here at 1:39 p. m. saw and heard the whole affair, and declare that all the man said was: "It's all right" Mr. Henley, of the White House, who left on the 8 o'clock train, says that he knows Guiteau well; that he has been around the White House a good deal, and that he is half insane. Prayers for the President. A SUGGESTION.

Editor Star:-The writer is informed by the Minister in charge of the Church of the Epiphany that at the daily services, at 9 a.m. and 6:30 p.m., special prayers will be offered for the President. Would it not be well for us allclergy and people—to unite in these prayers?

THE NEWS ELSEWHERE, The Feeling in Baltimore.

[Special Dispatch to The Evening Star.] BALTIMORE, July 2, 1.30 p. m .- The excitement here is intense, equalled only by the indignation of all classes. The streets are crowded. and the entire police force is concentrated on the main thoroughfares. The most fervent wishes are expressed for the President's recovery everywhere throughout the city. Gen. Grant's Regret. ELBERON, LONG BRANCH, N. J., July 2 .- Gen. Grant has just arrived, and expressed to your correspondent his deep regret at the attempted assasination of the President. Mrs. Garfield is almost frantic over the news. Her physicians allow her to see none of the serious dispatches, but dictate hopeful ones to her. The utmost excitement prevails here over the sad news.

A Dispatch to Gen. Grant. A dispatch to Gen. Grant has somewhat relieved Mrs. Garfield's anxiety. It says: "President's wounds not mortal; shot in the arm Philadelphia Greatly Excited. PHILADELPHIA, July 2 .- The public is greatly exercised here over the news from Washington. Large crowds congregate at the bulletin boards of the newspaper and telegraph offices, and eagerly watch for the news as it is posted up. The excitement among the 3d street people is intense, and as before indicated in these dispatches the market is breaking badly.

The Car for Mrs. Garfield. PHILADELPHIA, July 2.—The Pennsylvania railroad has ordered a locomotive and car at Jersey City to carry Mrs. Garfield to Washington. She had arranged to meet her husband at Jersey City to-day, and left Long Branch this morning on the Central railroad for Jersey City. The message informing her of the attempted assassination is awaiting her arrival at the latter place. There is much excitement here.

The News in Wall Street.

NEW YORK, July 2 .- The Post's financial article (1:40 p.m. edition) says:—The startling report that President Garfield had been assassinated reached Wall street a few moments after 10 o'clock, but at first it was not believed, and consequently had no influence on the stock market. Later, when the trustworthiness of the news was placed beyond question, there was a rush to sell stocks, and a sharp decline in prices; and the market has since been high-ly feverish, changing as the reports from Washington change respecting the condition of the President.

Antecedents of the Assassin. HIS RELIGIOUS PAMPHLET-A DIFFICULTY WITH

HIS PUBLISHERS. In 1877 the assassin Guiteau employed Messrs. Juda & Detweller, of this city, to print in pamphlet form a lecture by him upon the second coming of Christ. His visits to the printing establishment were very frequent, and Messrs Judd & Detweller had much trouble in getting any money from him for their work. Finally they had so much annoyance from him that Mr. Detweller was compelled to eject him from the office by force. The following is the title and opening of the pamphlet: THIS LECTURE IS THE KEY TO THE BIBLE: STUDY

The Author's Preface. This Lecture, it is believed, contains the truth about Christ's Second Coming, which has been hid these ages, and the author asks for it a careful and prayerful reception. He is in full sympathy with the Evangelical Churches, and desires their active support herein. For five years, at home and abroad, Mr. Moody has turned the hearts of the people to the Master, and now the author asks them to search the public with the aid of this Lecture, to find out Bible, with the aid of this Lecture, to find out the truth concerning the second coming of the son of Man.

For eighteen centuries Christendom has expected the second coming of Carist. From father to son, from generation to generation, this idea has come down from the Primitive church. During all these ages Christ has not appeared in response to the expectation of Christendom, and we are here to show that the reason He has not appeared is because He came at the siege of Jerusalem, A. D. 70, "in the clouds of Heaven, with power and great glory" and judged the righteous and wicked, the quick and dead of the Primitive Church and Jewish Nation. This is the proposition we propose to establish by a careful review of the New Testa-

We present the idea that Christ came in udgment at the destruction of Jerusalem as a discovery, and ask for it a prayerful reception. No one can understand the Bible with-out this view of Christ's second coming, and herein is the great value of the discovery. In examining this subject we wipe away the tradition and mist and unbelief of past ages and stand on the words of Jesus Christ concerning His own coming and the expectation of Paul and the Primitive Christians. We imagine ourselves with Christ and Paul in Judea. They were addressing common people, and we take them at their word. We pelieve they said what they meant and meant what they said. The Career of President Garfield. President Garfield has been so prominently, constantly and actively engaged in public atfairs for the last twenty years that his character and the incidents of his career are freshly familiar to almost every person in the United States, and he has in no small degree engaged the attention of the people of all other countries. Nevertheless, in connection with the dreadful event of this morning, it will be interesting to sum up the more salient points of his life. James Abraham Garfield was born at Orange, Cuyahoga county, Ohio, about fifteen miles from Mentor, his late residence, on the 19th of November, 1831. His parents were of old New England stock, and his father, who was one of the earliest settlers in Cuyahoga county, died in 1833, leaving a widow and four children very poorly provided for. James was the youngest child. He struggled against poverty, and in spite of it acquired a thorough education. Up to his 17th year he worked at carpentering and canal boating, going to school at intervals when he could afford it. When in his 17th year he entered the Seauga Seminary at Chester, and subsequently he Eclectic Institute at Hiram. He graduated at Williams College in 1856, with high honors, and then returned to the Hiram Institute as a utor, from which position he soon rose to be its principal. He frequently preached in the pulpit of his denomination, the Christian (or Disciples) church. In 1858, Mr. Garfield married Miss Lucretta Rudolph, of Hiram,—she who has been his congental, affectionate and helpful wife through all the varied grenes of his remarkable and illustrious career.

In 1861 W. Carfield was admitted to the bar. naving been previously elected as a republican to the Ohio state senate. Just as he was entering upon the career of a lawyer and politician, the war call sounded, and he promptly an swered it. He entered the Union army as colonel of the 42d Ohio regiment, and was soon thereafter assigned to the command of a brigade. He distinguisded himself as a brave officer in numerous battles, and was, in 1863, brevetted a major general for conspicuous bravery. He was chief of staff of the Army of the Cumberland, and subsequently served on the court martial held in this city which found Gen. Fitz John Porter guilty, and in the fall of 1863 he was elected to Congress-his commission as a member being sent to him while he was in the

He has had a distinguished career in Con gress, as he had in the army. He was for years a leader of his party in the House, and was generally regarded as the most brilliant and able member of the republican side of the House. He served continuously in Congress from 1863 until 1880, having held the position of chairman of the committees on military affairs, banking and currency, and appropriations, respectively. His course as a leading republican was marked with a liberalty and broad statesmanship, which sometimes brought him in contact with the prevailing sentiment of his party in the House. He boldly, during his last term, proclaimed himself in favor of amending the election laws as as descript them of their party. tion laws so as to deprive them of their parti-sanship, and an amendment proposed by him was adopted by the democrats. While acting as member of Congress Mr. Garfield visited Louisiana in the winter of 1876 in connection uith election frauds perpetrated in that state in the Presidential election of that year, and in the spring following he was a member of the electoral commission, whose action resulted in seating Mr. Hayes as President. Buring the winter of 1879 he was elected by the legislature of Ohio to represent that state in the United States Senate, to succeed Senator the United States Senate, to succeed Senator Thurman, whose term of service expired on the 4th of March, 1881. While in the enjoyment of this great honor, but before he had taken his seat, he was chosen as the republican candidate for the Presidency by the convention of that party which met in Chicago in June, 188). In November of that year he was triumphantly elected to that high office, and on the 4th of March following he was inaugnrated amid demonstrations of enthusiasm and popular regard such as were never paralleled in the history of the country.

nistory of the country. No administration ever commenced, it is safe to say, with more promising prospects for har-mony and success than-did that of President mony and success than did that of President Garfield. His own party was united and strong; the democratic party, north and south, accepted the situation gracefully and in good faith, believing that an era of better feeling in national politics had at last commenced; the country was prosperous and happy, and it was moreover at peace with all the worled. ARRIVAL OF MRS. GARFIELD

EXCITEMENT IN OHIO.

LATEST FROM THE PRESIDENT Not Expected at 6 O'clock to Live Two Hours.

At 6 o'clock the President's condition was very low. His pulse was 140 and very feeble The physicians say they cannot see how he can live over two hours.

The President slept a few minutes before six o'clock, but was manifestly feebler. He is, mentally, clear, conversing intelligently when permitted to do so. At 6 o'clock there were but few people at the White House. The doctors, Colonel Rockwell and one or two friends and his two boys, James and Harry, were with him. He talked now and then to the boys and once inquired if Mrs. Garfield had arrived. Mr. Brown telephoned to Col. Corbin, who went to the depot to meet Mrs. Garfield, a message to be delivered to her which while not reassuring, still would not tend to unduly excite her. The members of the Cabinet remained in the library and in the President's office conversing in low tones. The telegrapher was busy. Only newspaper men were in the private secretary's room. There was an air of settled gloom around the house. Mr. Ricker, one of the ushers, was sent out for red flannel as quick as he could bring it. He rushed down the sidewalk. The crowd, which still stands gaping on the pavement in front of the grounds, followed him pell mell for a short distance. He was obliged to tell one of them his errand and have it communicated to the rest, or the throng would have prevented his passage. Mrs. Garfield was expected to arrive at six o'clock, but the piston-rod of the engine, at Bowie, was broken, and the train delayed. At 6:30 Dr. Bliss said: "The case is now hopeless The President may not live until Mrs. Garfield

Mrs. Garfield's Arrival.

Mrs. Garfield arrived on a special train at 6 o'clock, and was met at the depot by Col. H. C. Corbin. Just prior to the arrival of the train a telephone message was received from the White House stating that the condition of the President was somewhat worse, and consequently, on arriving here she was driven up the avenue at a rapid rate of speed. The train left Philadelphia at 3:18 and reached here at 6:03, making the distance, 140 miles, in two hours and 52 minutes.

Mrs. Garfield was accompanied by General Swaim, her daughter and Mrs. Schofield. Harry Garfield met his mother with Col. Corbin. On account of the crowd at the depot the coach drove into the yard, and Mrs. Garfield and party disembarked at the lower end, and were driven, by way of the Smithsonian grounds, to the White House. At a quarter to seven Mrs. Garfield arrived at he White House. She looked very feeble and xhausted. She went to the President's bed room immediately upon her arrival. :Gen Swaim accompanied the party from Long Branch and Mrs. Blaine went to the depot to meet them.

The Second Medical Consultation. At a quarter to seven o'clock the doctors had reassembled for consultation. The President was still sinking, and not expected to live an hour longer.

Eight O'clock p. m. THE PRESIDENT'S CONDITION UNCHANGED.

At eight o'clock this evening there was no material change in the President's condition. The White House had by this time become crowded. All the members of the Cabinet with their wives were there. All the prominent officers of the government were also on hand Everybody was quiet. The President, who had been sinking rapidly since seven o'clock, was still sinking.

THE END IS VERY NEAR at hand. At 7 o'clock Drs. Bliss, Woodward, Reyburn and Wales, a committee from the attending physicians, made a further examination of the President. They reported that there was no hope whatever for the President. His death was certain and near at hand. Of all the other physicians who had seen him, not one dissented from this opinion. Word is sent in every once and awhile from the President's room to those in waiting.

The President Uncenscious at 8:10 P. M. At 8:10 p. m. the President was unconscious The medical examination shows that there was a fracture of the fifth rib. The ball penetrated the liver and lodged in the spinal column. This caused paralysis of the lower limbs, which are cold and clammy.

The President is retching terribly from internal hemorrages, caused by the wound. From these hemorrages he is dying. Nothing can be retained on the stomach. The President has been unconscious for half an hour.

Conscious When Mrs. Garfield Arrived. When Mrs. Garfield arrived he was conscious. She remained with him but a few minutes. They conversed in low tones. Mrs. Garfield is not now in the room. The President's pulse is

The President's Question-Why Did That Man Shoot Me ? The first reference made to the shooting by the President was about 8 o'clock, when Secretary Kirkwood entered the room. The Prestdent, turning towards the Secretary, said: "Why did that man shoot me?"

Had Guiteau a Confederate? WHAT A NEW JERSEY MAN TOLD THE POLICE.

This afternoon a man giving the name of T . Culter appeared at police headquarters and stated that he wished to be taken into custody as he knew something which might be of im portance as to the shooting. Lieut. Eckloff took him in charge. He stated that he was from New Jersey last, but belonged to Kentucky, and while waiting in the depot he no ticed two men who were somewhat suspicious looking, walking up and down, and finally n >ticed them go over towards the heater, and rap in a peculiar manner. In a short time after he went outside and the shot was fired. He gave the officers a minute description of the men and stated that before the shot was fired they appeared to be looking for some one, the larger one appearing excited; that after the shot the larger man made his escape, running away

CINCINNATI, OHI), July 21. The excitement here over the assassination of President Garfield is intense. In certain circles the opinion is that the shooting is the result of deliberate conspiracy on the part of the stalwarts to get Garfield out of the way to make room for Arthur. Among the soldier element, especially, is the feeling bitter, and so much so, that some of the veterans of the war evince a disposition to march on Washington and make way with the assassin.

At 9:15 p. m. Dr. Bliss was seen. He says there is a decided change for the better. The condition of his pulse and respiration is much better. The President is easier and said to Dr. Bliss: "Tell me what are my chances?"

Dr. Bliss replied: "I now think that there is a very good chance for your recovery." The President replied: "Well, I will take that chance." The President said this as calmly and deliberately as a man who had made up his Dr. Bliss says that he has very strong hopes

The President is gradually getting better. Official Bulletin at 9:45. Pulse fell from 158 to 128; temperature 99.

Respiration clear, and condition seems at this The President s Condition More Favorable Than at Any Time To-day.

10:10 P. M.-The President, who has slept well for an hour past, has just awakened considerably refreshed. Dr. Bliss' as soon as the President awoke, made an attempt to draw his urine with a catheter. He succeeded, and the President was much relieved by the operation. His pulse is 124, and the physicians say that his condition is more favorable now than at any time during the day. A Cabinet Consultation.

All of the members of the Cabinet are at the White House. No formal Cabinet meeting is being held, but the Cabinet officers are in consultation in the library together with Col. W. A. Cook and A. M. Gibson.

Hopes That the President Will Pall Through. The passage of urine was natural, there being no blood. Attorney General MacVeigh says that after consultation with the physicians he has now the strongest hopes that the President will pull through. What the President Said to Dr. Townshend. When Dr. Townshend reached the President's side this morning, and after feeling his pulse. he asked the President if he could turn on his side. The President replied, "O yes," and after unfastening his clothing and finding the wound, inserted his finger and the President asked: "How is it doctor?" Doctor Townshend said: "I hope it is not very bad." The President replied: "I think it is my death blow."
