THE EVENING STAR. WASHINGTON:

PRIDAY May 2, 1884. CROSBY S. NOYES Editor.

The Evening Star has a regular, permanent bona Sde daily circulation more than treble that of any other daily paper published in Washington, and conal to that of all the other daily papers here added together. THE STAR office is connected with the Telephone Exchange. Advertisements, orders for the paper by mail and otherwise, news, or any information or business can be sent day or night, free of charge. seas can be sent day or night, free of charge.

The Spring Advertising. The number of new advertisements in the double-red every Saturday. It is, therefore, important to insure insertion and classification that advertisers send in their orders at the earliest possible

The returns from the republican delegate elections are pretty well in, and the figurers are hard at work with their estimates. Blaine is concededly in the lead, and his friends claim that he has secared within forty or fifty of a majority on the first Arthur men cut down his lead to less hopeful figvotes, but from an Arthur stand-point he has but 98. Arthur's strength on the first ballot, it is pretty well agreed, will be about 260 or 270 votes. dimunds is accorded in the neighborhood of 75 votes in all the calculations, and Logan, Sherman, Hawley and Gresham make up the "scattering"

There is a large element of "slip" in all these etimates, on account of the unusual number of delgates, who not only go uninstructed, but who the convention meets before making up their mind. Not to speak of delegates who may be in the market, there will be many who will be honestly open teature which will give the convention a new and exciting character. Not only the independent voter but the independent delegate is abroad.

Mr. Eaton, who once attempted rather unsuccessfully to distinguish himself by "jumping on to Blaine," in the Senate, did some big jumping on the faction of the republicans if not of his party assoracy justified him, as he said, in "some plain talk," he proceeded to read the tariff reformers a lecture on their sins in a strain of witty and caustic rebuke which was not calculated to restore harmony. Mr. Eaton, or "Oldbilleaton," as his friends delight to call him, is a hard-hitter, and when his blood is up doesn't care much whom he nits. Of all things he prides himself on his democracy, which is of the most orthodox, Bourbon, hide-bound, rock-ribbed, copper-bottomed, dyed-in-the-wool, Jacksonian, Jeffersonian sort; and to be called a "barnacle," as he was recently, and to have a hint dropped that nunerals in certain eastern states were essential to democratic success was rather more than the old gentleman could stand. So he hit back yesterday, and he gave some blows that brought blood. The PRICES-49c., 59c. and 68c. Morrison bill he stigmatized as not "a step in the right direction," but "a crab-step," and "the staggering of a political inebriate." It merely "cut the tail off a misbegotten republican bantling that K K II D D G G L the tail off a misbegotten republican bantling that K K II D D G G L its parents were ashamed of," and might have been K K II D D G G L drawn by any car-driver who knew enough to use his car-hook. "I'll have none of it," he exclaimed "and the country won't." It remains to be seen how much effect this fatherly advice and reproof will have on the democratic majority.

The commissioner of jurors in New York has given that city a shock by disclosing the fact that out of its million and a-half of inhabitants only 15,450 can be called on for jury service. Little by little exemptions have been made by law until now the eligible list has been whittled down to a small and special public with whom, it may be added, the criminal lawyers have got very well acquainted. Under the law a juror must be the owner of real or personal property valued at $250, and by this clause alone 70,000 persons escape. Physical disability releases 30,000 more, and 20,000 get off on account of membership in the militia. Clergymen. physicians, dentists, lawyers, teachers, pilots, officers of vessels, firemen, policemen, telegraph operators and federal and local office holders are all exempt also. It follows that nearly every body who should serve is released. Thus, out of the great mercantile public, as represented in the produce. cotton, stock and petroleum exchanges, only 280 out 4076 members are liable to duty.

The system of trial by jury, in its present form, is open to serious objection, even where all classes may be summoned to share its duties; but if all the more responsible elements of the community are to be allowed to shirk these labors the system cannot

The New York Herald calls on the House to take ognizance of the charges against Mr. Kellogg, rguing that "if they are true the accused is unworthy to sit in the House, and should be promptly expelled." The matter falls within the province of the Springer committee, and will, no doubt, be considered there. If Mr. Kellogg is as eager for vindication as he has represented himself to be, a be their every day experience. But in providing for "

Congressional investigation would give him the service we haven't forgotten the fact that "Y.A." likes to cially adapted for tender feet.

The failure of Keene, the occidental speculator, recalls the promise made by Gould, when the two first crossed swords, that he would at the proper time provide his infatuated antagonist with a return passage to California in an emigrant car. Keene should remember this. An emigrant train beats going afoot across the plains by long odds. It is becoming a burning question: Do indictments indict?

OBSERVATION. Intense observation of the object is the secret of cor-

Intense observation of the object is the secret of correct aim in shooting, and correct observation in general tends to one's advantage in many ways. Diversion of observation, however, produces distraction, but a limitation to one object will most likely secure the desired end. The habit of observation must never be permitted to degenerate into reverie, but should ever be aligned in the rank with thought. "Many persons," says Victor Hugo. "confound the two. Fatal mistake! Thought is the abor of the intellect; reveie its voluptuousness," Thought is the active operation of the mind, but unless accompanied by observation, is of but little value to its possessor. The man of general intelligence is one more useful to the community than to himself; for his views are too broad for the condensation necessary to business success or popular appreciation. To observe what others think, and to acquiece in each passing fancy, is the foundation of business as well as political success. A merchant who buys well strives not to please himself, but must searn to estimate what will best please others or meet their tastes. A thing may be beautiful in itself, a shepherd's plaid for example, but no one will buy it, if it does not serve his fancy. The faculty of observing the present, as it becomes transposed into the past, leads to the anticipation of the future, and it is this ability to anticipate that makes the successful trader. No business calls for more of this faculty of observation and its resultant anticipation, than the clothing business. Six and twelve months are not numeral periods of anticipat. resultant anticipation, than the clothing business. Six and twelve months are not unusual periods of anticipation, and while the consumer is devoting his thoughts as to what he shall wear for spring, the producer is busily out-lining the Winter apparel. How far the wants of gentlemen for this spring have been anticipated, may best be realized by a call on
