CITY AND DISTRICT. TO INVESTIGATE SCHOOL MATTERS. for the Year and Appoint a School

Citizens' Association No. 5 met last evening in the chapel of the Lutheran Memorial church. In the absence of the president Mr. A. S. Pratt was called to the chair. As it was the annual meeting the election of officers was stated to be the business, and, on motion of Mr. T. A. Lambert, the present officers were re-elected, as follows: Presient, Reginald Fendall; vice-president, Geo. H. B. White; ecretary, R. W. Fenwick, and treasurer, Mr. Lewis Clephane. Mr. Fendall having entered the hall, he took the chair, and in reply to a question in regard to the standing committees, said that he would announce these committees at the next meeting. Mr. J. Ormond Wilson suggested that in order to have a subject for discussion at the next meeting that the committee on schools be appointed at once. The chair announced as the members of this committee the following: Z. Richards, Geo. Mason, W. York AtLee, J. A. Haywood, J. V. A. Shields, Gen. J. S. Crocker, and Philip T. Larner. Mr. Wilson said that he would move that the committee be instructed to investigate the subject of industrial education which is now being carried on in connection with the public schools of the District. He said that he had no means of knowing how efficiently or with what practical the district. He said that he had no means of knowing how efficiently or with what practical methods this new system had been introduced here. But he understood that it would cost about $15,000 per year, and he thought that the people would be interested in learning in what manner this money was being expended. The motion was carried.

The chair called attention to the fact that at The chair called attention to the fact that at none of the meetings of the representative committee had the delegation for this association exceeded 10, when the proper representation was 15. He said that it was important that the association should be fully represented, as matters of interest were likely to come up now which required the attention of all the delegations to that body. So far the committee had done nothing, except to adopt the report to the committee on streets, but now the work had reached such a stage that it was probable that matters of great importance. it was probable that matters of great importance would come before the committee, Col. col. G. W. Dyer indorsed what the president had said, and on his motion the number of the alternates was increased from 10 to 15. The president announced the following named as the additional alternates: Rev. Jas. G. Craighead, D. D., Wm. York At Lee, A. P. Morse, Wm. J. Miller and Dr. J. W. H. Lovejoy. It was also decided that notices should be sent to both delegates and alternates of each meeting of the representative committee, in order that all might be present. Dr. Lov-joy asked to be relieved from the chairmanship of the committee on streets owing to the want of time to attend to the duties. Mr. Pratt hoped that the request would not be granted.

One of Sherburne Hopkins' Hoaxes. Last summer a story appeared in the papers and went the rounds about a dashing young lady who was spending a few days at Popham Beach, a ummer resort at the mouth of the Kennebec tiver. She was represented as aping the mermaid by mounting a big codfish, and skimming about over the surface of the briny deep in security, always returning to the starting point. The fish was confined in a pool on the beach when not bearing the fair rider. The author of the hoax was Sherburne Hopkins, who sent the alleged in-fernal machine to Justice Walte. Young Hopkins stopped several weeks at the beach with his father.

The Cafferal scandal in France bears a strong resemblance to one which, in 1809, caused even more excitement in England. A Mrs. Clarke, who admittedly stood very high in the favor of the Duke of York, George III's favorite son, then commander-in-chief, had obtained for officers in the mander-in-chief, had obtained for officers in the army commissions, promotions, &c., and in February of that year a parliamentary inquiry, at the instance of Col. Warde, M. P., began, and on the 7th February Mrs. Clarke was examined at the bar of the house. On the 18th March the inquiry closed, and the duke, although acquited of actual complicity, resigned in deference to the public feeling the reve.ations had produced. In 1811 he was reinstated in office. Mrs. Clarke's portrait is conspicuous in all the illustrated periodicals of the period alluded to.

CONDEMNED PRISONERS NOT NOTIFIED TILL THE MORN-ING OF THEIR DEATH.

From the London Daily Telegraph.

The condemned murderer in France is informed when the court of cassation rejects his appeal; but he always has the hope that the president will pardon him, and on the strength of this hope most of the condemned remain comparatively tranquil. When the final day arrives the convict is aw . kened by the warden about half an hour before the time is set for the execution. The strait-jacket is re-moved and his ordin ry clothes given him. Then he is bound hand and foot by two of the heads-man's aides and afterward left alone with the priest he is bound hand and foot by two of the headsman's aides and afterward left alone with the priest for a few moments, unless the services of this ecclesiastic are declined.

From the condemned's cell he is taken to a dimly-lighted room called the toilette chamber; here, seated on a stool, he listens to the prayers recited aloud by the priest, while one of the aides cuts the hair from the back of the neck and the coniar from the shirt. He is ready! Supported by two aides and accompanied by the executioner, the priest and the other officials, the condemned marches out, the two outside doors fly open, and the guillotine, surrounded by the mintary and the boilte, greets his eye. Arrived at the bascule the executioner and his aides push him against the swinging plank; he falls so that his neck fits into the lower haif of the moon-shaped socket, the upper half of which is immeetately lowered; the executioner touches a spring, the knife tails with a sharp sound, the head drops into the tub, a little stream of clood gusnes out from the trunk and justice is satisfied!

The whole operation takes less than half a minute. The headiess body is slid into the willow basket, the head is placed between the legs and the basket is put into a wagon that has been waiting two hours for its burden. Escorted by a squad of gendarmes and followed by a priest in a modest cab the train gallops off to the Ivry Cemetery, three or four miles away, where a part of the enclosure, called the turnip field, is reserved for the burial of executed criminals. When the body is not claimed it is immediately exhumed and given to the medical school.

ONE OF THE CROWD SHOT, THE OTHERS TO BE STARVED INTO SUBMISSION. A Lancaster, Pa., special to the Philadelphia Press, November 7, says: Another insurrection is in progress at the city workhouse, which is in an enclosure surrounded by a high and strong stone wall, wherein tramps committed as vagrants are compelled to break stone for the city. Last Friday the men, thirty-eight in number, quit work, and since then have been in a state of revoit, threatening with violence anybody who entered. Last evening one of the watchmen discovered the Last evening one of the watchmen discovered the men trying to scale the wall with poles, but they were driven back at the point of the pistol and comp lied to seek refuge in the house. Later in the night it was discovered that they were trying to dig through the wall, which is over three feet thick. They had taken out over two wagon loads of stone, when Keeper Shaub fired a load of shot into the workers. There was a nowl of pain, and the men again took refuge in the house, from which they did not emerge any more during the night. One of the vagr nts was shot, but how badly he was injured is not known, as the prisoners refuse to surrender him to the prison authoriers refuse to surrender him to the prison authori-ties to have his wounds dressed, nor will they tell his name. When the case came before the tribunal the reasoning of the specialist was approved, and the malingerer was defeated in his endeavor to obtain compensation for the imaginary loss of sight in an eye with which he could sthi read.

We have 868 miles of open wire included within the metropolitan area, but these are chiefly in the suburbs, and include long, outlying sections, used ether for police or nice brigade wires or for private persons. There are 213 offices in London now served wholly by buried wire. It is papears that in 1886 there were in the United Kingdom 26,426 miles of overhead telegraph lines, embracing 150,590 miles of wire, and 677 miles of underground dines, with 19,605 miles of wire. It is estimated that to connect only the more important towns by underground wires, and "uniting these towns by less than half the existing number of overhead wires, would cost something like £2,500,000." Of submarine cable there are now 112,673 nautical miles, which has absorbed a capital of £37,000,000. The larger part of this, or 102,231 miles, is owned by twenty-seven private companies, having from one to fifty-three

They all agreed that such a thing could not possibly happen to one of them, as they had their eyes wide open. "Nevertheless," interposed a gentleman sitting at the next table, "I would, if need be, undertake to prove that any one of your coats could easily be abstracted from under your very noses." They were astonished, but he explained that it was only necessary to engage a man in an interesting conversation, and white he continued under the influence to arise, take his overcoat, put it on, light a cigar, and leave the room with a gracious bow. The entire company kept up a continuous roar of laughter at the amusing tale and the still more entertaining practical illustration with which the relator accompanied his words and walked out of the door.
