The answer which must be made to the in miry of "A Veteran" in yesterday's STAR,here shall he find the monument of Zachary sylor?—ought to bring the blush of shame to cheek of every American citizen. Thy the old hero's name and fame have never yet been commemorated by the erection of a statue or monument, it is difficult to explain, except upon the not very creditable hypothesis that what is everybody's business is nobody's business. Certainly, few American soldiers or soldiers of any country have better deserved such recognition; and, odions as comparisons may be, it is perfectly safe to say that many men who merited less have received much more. Aside from the debt of gratitude the country owes to General Taylor for the extended and rich addition made to its domain, he illustrated at once and in a high degree, the noblest characteristics of a trained warrior and the sterling virtues of a plain American citizen. The country has had few soldiers who were braver, more patriotic, or less assuming than he. It is eminently proper, therefore, that the suggestion so pertinently made by our correspondent should be carried out. He was himself a gallant commander under General Taylor, as he was in the country's later struggle, and no more fitting person to inaugurate the movement and lead it to a successful issue can easily be found. Are there not enough of his old companions in arms still left in the country to secure for the memory of the simple-mannered old hero a visible and lasting recognition at the national capital, such as other soldiers, no more worthy, have received? If the Mexican Veterans of Washington should take the matter up, and set the ball rolling as they ought to, and can, we feel sure their efforts would be promptly and ably seconded by their comrades elsewhere, and that there would be a quick and generous response on the part of Congress, and, behind Congress, of the country at large. Who will step to the front, and take the initiative?

Paris votes to-morrow for her representafives in the chamber of deputies. The election is a test of Boulanger's popularity in another section of France. Already a deputy from the department of the Nord, there was no necessity for his becoming a candidate. But he has done so to extend the proof of his pop-ularity and gradually make apparent his hold on all France. His opponent, M. Jacques, is an amiable gentleman, whose popularity is due to good manners and good wine, the latter of which he produces in great quantity, being one of the leading distillers in Paris. His candidacy means nothing except the desire to defeat Boulanger. He has been a favorite, however, winning his political victories quietly and easily. For eighteen years he has been a member of the general council. Boulanger's victory would indicate the strength of the popular desire for constitutional revision and dissatisfaction with the present form of government, as well as Boulanger's popularity and the desire to move steadily though gradually towards war with Germany.

The Eckington electric road proposes in its extension from its present line to F and 15th streets to use the underground conduit system, which is successfully used in Allegheny c and Boston. The capital will welcome a full trial of electricity as a street-railway motor by a system which does not add to the overhead wire nuisance. It is perfectly practicable to use both overhead and underground wires on different sections of the same road, and the wisest method appears to be to employ the underground conduits on crowded city streets, and to run the lines overhead on suburban roads, in villages, and in sparsely settled regions in general.

The experiment of wearing knee-breeches or Knickerbockers at a fashionable ball was very successfully tried by some of the young gentlemen leaders of society in New York the other evening, and it is predicted that the style thus set by what is termed the "upper circles" there will soon become the rage in other parts of the country. It may and it may not. This is one of the class of cases in which very much depends. In this particular instance it will depend altogether on the size and shape of young men's legs.

In the matter of circulation, the Indianapolis Nees makes a most excellent showing, but THE STAR cannot concede to that paper the superiority it claims for itself in that respect. On their face, the figures given by the News seem to be convincing; but, as often happens to be the case with figures, they do not accurately represent the facts in the case. To make perfect the comparison between the two papers, the News must eliminate from its estimate of the population of Washington an element which does not exist in Indianapolis, representing nearly 33 per cent of the aggregate. This gives THE STAR a rating which no amount of argument or figuring can change.

The total of the District appropriation bill, as it passed the Senate, is large, but the proposed expenditure is within the District's means. The outgo will not exceed the income, and Micawber's condition of happiness will be realized, and his state of misery avoided. Objections to the bill must be based upon the criticism of particular items as unwise, and not upon the size of the aggregated appropria-

The House committee's proposition for the disposition of the District's surplus by applying it to the payment of the water debt failed in the House. The Senate committee's proposition passed the Senate and goes to the conference committee. It provides that the balances of District appropriations remaining unexpended at the end of two years from the close of the fiscal year for which such appropriations are made shall be covered into the Treasury, onehalf to the credit of the surplus fund and onehalf to the credit of the general fund of the District. Washington's watchword is: "Spend the taxes of the present upon the city of the present and upon improvements which may be to some extent enjoyed by present taxpayers."

Civilization is constantly refining itself. New York is to have an incorporated pawnshop, restricted by law to uniform and reasonable rates of interest. Then if ever "my uncle" will be soulless.

A possibility not hitherto perceived appears in the drift of sentiment in the territories confronted with statehood. It is not improbable that two of them will ask to come into the Union with constitutions providing for woman suffrage. Washington and North Dakota and possibly South Dakota will force this question to the front.

Mr. Springer is increasing the vehicles on his omnibus line beyond the demands of business. He should be satisfied with such omnibus legislation as the admission of five states at a lick.

Three more crowd the country. The Rock Creek park project failed to be attached to the District appropriation bill through a technicality. The zoological garden appropriation was more fortunate. It is believed | sle that Congress favors both projects.

SPECIAL "STORE NEWS"

WOODWARD & LOTHROP.

BEGINNING MONDAY, JANUARY 28.

WE SHALL INAUGURATE

A GRAND FOUR-DAYS REMNANT SALE,

Semi-annually we take account of stock on hand. Write down everything within the establishment that has a money value, and square up our losses and gains.

PREVIOUS TO STOCK-TAKING, JANUARY 31.

We invariably hold a reduction sale prior to these stock-taking occasions for the purpose of disposing of all short lengths, odd sizes, small lots, &c., which as an inducement to you we offer at prices extremely low, and very advantageous to the purchaser. We believe that the principles of these sales are so well known to our customers that further explanation is unnecessary, hence, without further comment, we enumerate the following excellent remnant bargains.

We desire to say we are receiving new Spring Goods daily, and a very attractive array of them will be opened Monday-another reason why you should visit the store as often as con-
