"Of course," Mr. Webb added, "in case I am not confirmed the paper can be torn up."

The only possible conclusion to be drawn from Mr. Webb's haste to have his commission made out ready for signature is that there is a fear in his mind that President Harrison, ining his name on his commission, even if the Senate should confirm him. There are precedents for such an action, or non-action, on the part of the Chief Magistrate to be found in
