The city council will hold its regular meeting tonight. There is quite a quantity of uncompleted work in the hands of various committees, some of which was pressed some months ago with no little ardor, but has been lulled to sleep in committee rooms. It is understood, however, that the proposal for the creation of a city engineer, with a view to the designation of a plan for atreet improvements, will be reported. To this end Mr. Herberi Graves, the present very competent city surveyor, has prepared a pamphlet on the subject, which has been placed in the hands of every member of the city council. The method of raising the funds for this purpose suggested in the council some time since, by the issue of new corporation bonds based on those already redeemed, has not been carried out, but it is well understood that it has not been abandoned. Recent sales of the old 3 per cent bonds have shown that a 5 per cent bond may be floated at par if properly based.

ALL THAT IS LEFT OF A STREET. Capt. A. J. Fair has bought for $300 a lot on street. This neighborhood has largely improved of late years, but was once in decay. The old Potomac street, which passes into Wolfe street near Capt. Fair's purchase, is the remnant of an attempt made early in the century to establish a sub street half way between Water (Lee) and Union streets, a plan which was not carried out. Now much of the proposed street is built upon. On Potomac street in 1807-12 the well-remembered McLean school, which educated a generation, was established.

Both he and his friends confidently expected that Mr. Cleveland would have given him the collectorship of the port of New York, and it is said that he would not decline the honor during this administration if it were tendered him. Being a man of liberal thought, though a Mormon, he found the teachings of Young to be inconsistent with what he considered to be the truth and to act and think for himself in spiritual and temporal matters. Lawrence was tried before the church court for his apostacy, was "cut off" from the rights and benefits of the church and expelled. In those surprised no one had be "disapperand mysteriously." He became a marked man, though no attempt upon his life was made. He was ostracised and boycotted by the Mormons. In 1870 the first mining boom struck Utah. It had been the policy of the Mormon Church to discountenance mining and Mormons were forbidden to seek gold because it would bring Gentiles into the territory. Lawrence and several others went into mining and made a great deal of money.
