Pianos the Flood Ruined.

From the Kansas City Journal.

A reporter at Topeka finds that 312 pianos were destroyed in the North Topeka flood. of $300 the total would amount to $93,600. One thing is certain, not a single piano which passed through the flood will ever be used again. Pianos are commonly regarded as of strong and substantial construction. To look at those which passed through the Topeka flood one would conclude that they were as fragile as a house of cards. Their woodwork is swelled, bulged and split. Their veneering has peeled off like paper from a wet wall. Their internals are warped and twisted out of all semblance to an orderly machine. They have been thrown out in the streets, without an exception, to be hauled away with other rubbish.

Niagara of New Zealand. From the London Chronicle.

The Huka Falls-the Niagara of Maori-land-which the New Zealand government has an idea of turning to account for the generation of electric power, are on one of the head reaches of the Walkato river, a few miles from where the great stream flows out of Lake Taupo. The position thereabout is a peculiar one. Lake Taupo lies very high above sea level, and the Wiseman—"Nonsense! You couldn't possibly expect a headlong man to be longheaded, for instance."

Walkato has its beginning through a narrow chasm in the rocky wall of the lake. Flowing out through this passage the enormous mass of water is whirled at last over the huge precipice at Huka, and the falls form one of the grandest sights in New Zealand. On the report of an expert the Welington government expects to get electric power enough from the Huka Falls to the supply the whole of the north island for all purposes.

Walkato has its beginning through a narrow column was blank, except for the following naive statement: "This is only the beginning of our paper. We were not sure how much matter was required to fill up our paper, and, thinking we had sufficient, we did not exert ourselves to get more. We, therefore, beg our readers will excuse us this time for the space left blank, and we hope to make ample amends for the fu-ture." Waikato has its beginning through a nar-

AN ARTIST IN JAPAN

He Adheres to His Native Ideas, but

With American Modifications.

From the New York Sun.

On a crosstown street which is much traveled, but in a block of it where pedestrians are comparatively few, there is to be seen a small sign announcing that within the building a Japanese artist may be found. The pursuit of him has only begun when one enters the building, however. It is an old-fashioned building, and the stairways as they go higher up become more crooked and narrow, and the halls grow dark until the stranger feels his way as among the bunkholes of Chinatown. A few more abrupt right and left turns, when he can go no higher, and he reaches the Japanese studio and sees daylight again.

It is almost a Japanese daylight, for athwart the shaded window stands a man with straight black hair and brilliant eyes, with an expression intent as that fixed in an ancient bronze of the island realm. "I am Sano," he says, and remains still. For three years Sano has lived a seclud-ed artist's life in New York. He was not always an artist. In his native land he was graduated with honors from the university, and held the dignity of professor. Once an Editor.

He came to America and became an editor. But in his boyhood days he had longed to paint, and he had drawn and painted in the intervals of his studies and teaching, and the tugging of the longing at his heartstrings here in the land of his pilgrimage would not let him rest until he again took to his brush. Occasionally an artist has discovered him and exchanged with him the teachings of American and Japanese art. Lately one of the biggest and oldest publishing houses has found him and may make him famous, but the public does not yet know him, has not had a chance to know him. He has not yet exhibited in New York, which in some astigmatic eyes would be a distinction.

"But perhaps I may, next Christmas season," he says.

Sano, Keokichi Sano, according to his brief biography, was graduated from the Imperial College at Tokio and became principal of a provincial normal school, and afterwards professor of psychology and pedagogy at the Kobe Normal School.

Thence he went to San Francisca and publications. and pedagogy at the Kobe Normal School. Thence he went to San Francisco and published a Japanese-American paper and came finally to New York, where he has been quietly and patiently developing the art that seized upon him in boyhood.

"There are so many so-called artists here whom I do not understand," he said yesterday. "They fall such ready and willing victims to convention and a facile technique. They say to me "Well we technique. They say to me, 'Well, we must turn out what is wanted and we know will sell.' But I cannot see it so. "I do not mean only American artists. Go to a big store when the art of Japan is exploited, for instance, and you may see a flight of birds in familiar series and all will be done exactly alike, although they may be different positions toward the spectator. See the flowers in clever conventionality. I admire the cleverness, but I sigh for the lack of feeling.

the work of any Japanese artist, almost, and especially of those here. Are they not pretty conventionality? Technical cleverness? I like to see feeling in flowers and blossoms. If I wish to paint peonles I personify the peony for the time; while painting I feel that I am a flower. Do you laugh? You are not Japanese. I wish to paint a swallow, or two or three of them, flying in different positions; for the time I feel that I am a swallow. I wish to give the birds and flowers and human figures expression in strong line and individuality, not leave them empty forms upon the paper.

"I call it psychological painting. Many times I make mistakes, but I am not going to sink my personal point of view in the conventionalism of those who trust all to technique, however slow may be my way.' SLAUGHTER OF THE INNOCENTS Dangers Which Bottle-Fed Babies Have to Pass-Microbes in Milk. From the New York Mail and Express

There is a small insurrection of oldfashioned divines, teachers, statesmen and loctors, it seems, against the spirit of the times. Dr. Eliot points out how far the average American college graduate has fallen away from the old standards in his family life, and Dr. Van Dyke enforces the lesson with his baccalaureate sermon-in praise of the old-fashioned firedomestic notions is well known. The influence of Yale has generally been on the conservative side, and it is therefore not surprising to find an emeritus professor of the Yale Medical School, Dr. C. A. Linds ley, rebuking the women of Connecticut for abandoning their offspring to cholera infantum and other diseases of the stomach by condemning them to the unhappy category of bottle-fed babies, and exhorting the mothers to adopt the more natural course. A mother who condemns her child to a bottle diet takes a grave risk, the con-sequences of which may or should, if they are fatal, some time rest heavily on her conscience. Extremely few women possess a sufficient amount of scientific knowledge to fit them to superintend a baby's artificial diet. It is something concerning time. As everybody who lives in this generation knows, the microbe lurks at every step. The milk, the water with which it is diluted, the bottle in which it is put, the water in which the bottle is washed, must be sterilized. But if in the sterilizing process the beneficent bacteria are killed, disease follows the killing. The harmless bottle of milk is probably a rarity. But nature is brave and makes her best "bluff" in a baby's case; she helps him to endure a great deal.

When the baby is a few weeks old—often she begins it when he is a few days cow's milk with one of the numerous precow's milk with one of the numerous pre-pared foods. Some of these are very good —for some babies. But one little man's meat is another's poison. What nourishes one may kill another. The doctor might advise, but perhaps the mother "doesn't believe in doctors." Frequently it turns out that she does believe in making her baby sick.

Any infant in whose case there resort to artificial nourishment leads a very precarious existence. Even careless women are coming to realize this. Per-haps this is one of the reasons why American families grow so small. Assuming an essential abandonment on the part of a whole generation of women of the part of a whole generation of women of the foundation principles of domestic life on which their mothers acted, it is evident that a willingness would naturally follow to leave to German, Italian, Slavic and Hebrew mothers the work of providing the republic with its future citizens and defenders.

Newspapers in India.

Native journalism in India, as we have more than once pointed out, is often most musingly frank. Thus in a new publication brought out by a native editor the last column was blank, except for the following
