Court-Martial of Midshipman | Appointees to Office Refuse Merriwether.

SOME OF THE PRACTICES AT THE NAVAL ACADEMY.

Coming Trial Regarded by the Service as a Very Grave Affair-Comment on the Case.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., November 21, 1905. The trial of Midshipman Merriwether, which will begin at the Naval Academy tomorrow, is regarded by the service as a grave affair, much graver even than the question of how far the individual midshipman was responsible for the death of Midshipman Branch, which resulted from injuries received in a fist fight. In the public mind it is really the "code" that is on trial, not the individual.

It is said that the Secretary of the Navy is very determined about putting down fighting at the academy. How far he will have the backing of the officers in that is a question. When the question of hazing at the academy was under investigation two years ago there were some differences of opinion, even among the officers. Of course, in the present case the officers are not talking for publication, but it is very doubtful if any of them are much in favor of break-ing up the habit of fighting in the school. It may be said in passing that the fights are not frequent. But bringing several hundred aggressively healthy youngsters together in a school where of necessity one class is subordinated to another and where ideas of personal honor are even more rigidly fixed than in the average school, it would be strange if occasionally there were not cases where the code was forced into opera-tion. This is the view the officers take of it. They say the boys are brought to the academy to be trained as fighting men, and a boy who is not ready to resent what he considers a personal affront is not the material that the school needs to work on

Designed to Secure Fairness. At the same time they say that the 'code," as it exists, is the growth of experience by successive classes of youngsters, and it is designed to secure fairness and equality in any meetings that take place. The upper classmen naturally have the advantage of greater age and longer training in a fight, but the "code" is de-signed to give the "plebe" a square deal where he might not otherwise get it. The where he might not otherwise get it. The inner workings of the code change from time to time, and there are few of the older officers who profess to know anything about it. Of course, they do not care to know too much, though fighting is unofficially a recognized institution both at Annapolis and West Point. But the officers say it cannot be prevented, and the chances are that there is no great anxiety that it should be. Hazing at the academy is another and slightly different matter. There are two sorts which might be described as "friend-ly" and "unfriendly."

Effects of Hazing.

Fights may sometimes grow out of the first, but never out of the second. The first variety is of a more or less individual sort. It consists in making "plebes" answer all verely if they omit to put "sir" to his name every time they speak to an upper classman, making him do gymnastic stunts, usually of a more or less ridiculous sort and generally "taking it out" of the aspiring youngster and frequently turning him into a perspiring youngster. It is held by the upper classmen that this is good training for the first-year men, that it relieves any tendency to crantal enlargement, makes them submissive to discipline from their superiors, and generally tends to render them meek and lowly of heart.

But this hazing is strictly circumscribed

But this hazing is strictly circumscribed by custom. An upper class: an may not touch a piebe, however much he may tongue-lash him. There are also certain personal things he may not say to the plebe, such as calling him a lisr or a cow-ard. The plebe can quit if the gymnastic stunts are carried beyond his strength and stunts are carried beyond his strength and if he thinks he has been personally affronted, which is a very different thing from ordinary "running;" he can challenge his opponent to fight. If he does both his own class and the upper classmen will see fair play. In fact, if there is a great disparity in size and weight, either man or his class can nominate another man to do the fighting.

Victims Maintain Silence.

Now, of course, all this is in flagrant violation of academy rules. If a junior classman followed the rules and asserted his rights he could report his superiors several times a day. But do they? No one ever heard of it, and if they did they probably would not last long in the school. It does not seem to be the way a healthy boy is built, and so he takes his hazing or fights, as the case may be.

There is another sort of hazing that is much more serious and that cannot be reached by any rules of the school or of the Navy Department. It is meted out to a man only for some gross violation of the code of honor that cannot be reached by the rules or for intense personal unpopu-larity. It is a class affair, and may even extend to a man's own classmates. It simply consists in cutting him dead and ignoring his existence except in the most routine exchange of commands. Usually there is good reason for such drastic punishment. Sometimes a man has carried this stigma clear through the academy with him and into the service. And it may be said that when the ban is thus placed on a student it is usually well deserved.

PLANTING OF TREES.

Superintendent of Parking Submits Schedule to Commissioners.

Responding to a recent request of the Columbia Heights Citizens' Association, the superintendent of parking, Mr. Lanham, has recommended that trees be planted in parts of streets indicated as follows: In Euclid street (formerly Irving street) between Sherman and Brightwood avenues, 23; in Fairmont (formerly Yale street) between 11th and 13th streets, 8; in Harvard street between Sherman avenue and 11th street, 7; in Irving street (formerly Kenesaw street) between Sherman avenue and 11th street, 16; Kenyon street between Sherman avenue and 11th street, 25; Monroe street (formerly Lydecker avenue) between Sherman avenue and 13th street, 28; a total

In making the recommendation Mr. Lan-ham states that Columbia Heights has re-ceived very liberal treatment in the matter of tree planting, but he states that the trees ordered are necessary to fill out blocks where planting has already been commenced. The Commissioners have approved the plan and it will soon be carried into effect.

GOVERNMENT SERVICE DEPRIV-ED OF THE BEST ELIGIBLES.

Interesting Feature of the Annual Report of Chief Examiner Frank M. Kiggins.

The most interesting feature of the annual report of Frank M. Kiggins, the chief. examiner of the United States civil service refused to take the places offered to them. The report says: "The positions under the government are considered desirable, and it is generally supposed that the commission has little difficulty in filling vacancies as they occur. This, however, is not always the case. While sufficient applicants enter the general examinations, there are numerous declinations of appointments when tendered, especially to positions in Washington. Many of the highest eligibles on the registers decline appointment on account of the low salaries offered, which frequently do not equal the salaries received by them in private employment."

Attention is called to the insufficient supply of eligibles on various registers, including the stenography and typewriting; aid coast and geodetic survey; assistant topographer, draftsman, copyist, topographic draftsman, land office; draftsman, topo graphic; irrigation engineer, meat inspector, physician, Indian service; assistant examiner, farmer, farmer with knowledge of irrigation; teacher, Indian service; indus-trial teacher, civil engineer and superin-tendent of construction, mechanical draftsnan, ordnance department, and engineer ndian service. It appears that since January 137 appointnents were made from the clerk register. Before these could be made 91 eligibles who were tendered appointment declined; from the bockkeeper register 91 appointments were made since December 19, 1904, but 52 eligibles declined before the positions were filled; from the stenographer and typewriter register 285 appointments were made since October 21, 1904, and 186 eligibles declined before the vacancies were filled. The re-port says: "These figures indicate that the port says: "These figures indicate that the salaries offered are, in many cases, not a sufficient inducement for the best eligibles on the registers to enter the government service. The properous times have directed the attention of many qualified eligibles to the advantages offered in private employment. If larger salaries could be offered by the government for the more important positions, more applicants of a higher grade would enter the examinations, and there would be fewer declinations by the highest would be fewer declinations by the highest eligibles on the register when they are tennered appointment. The government would as a result be the gainer, because the difference in the quality and quantity of the work performed by the eligibles who received the highest rating as compared with those who barely passed the examinations would more than offset the difference in salaries."

Examinations of the Year.

Over 650 different kinds of examinations were given during the year, of which 231 educational and 419 non-educational tests. For all branches of the service 148,-730 persons were examined, 116,019 passed, and 39,427 were appointed. The number examined shows a property of the number of the amined shows a gain of 15,661 over the preceding year, and was the largest in any one year in the history of the commission. The principal increases were due to the holding of certain examinations during the year which were not held in the preceding year, such as clerk, 3,809; printer's assistant,
2,160; immigrant inspector, 1,608; tagger, technical examinations were also held for 3,000 persons competed.

While there was an increase in the number examined, there was a decrease of 9,867 in the number appointed, or 39,427 as compared with 49.294 for the preceding year. This decrease was due almost entirely to the falling off in the number for the rural carrier service and for the navy yard service. There were fewer changes in the rural carrier service owing principally to the fact that the maximum galary of rural carriers was increased on July 1, 1904, from $600 to $720 per annum. The reduction in appointments in the navy yard service was due to a variety (f causes. The largest number of examinations and appointments were for the following positions and appointments. were for the following positions and serv-

Examinations are now given by the commission without cost to applicants, but the chief examiner calls attention to the great expense in the preparation and rating of papers, correspondence, recording, printing, photolithographing, etc., and recommends that a fee be charged each applicant. He suggests fees ranging from 50 cents for the simple third-grade examinations, such the simple third-grade examinations, such as watchman, messenger, printer's assistant, etc., to $2 or more for important examinations requiring unusual time in the preparation and rating of papers, such as for civil engineer, patent office examiner, etc. Attention is called to the fact that the Post Office Department is partly self-sustaining on account of the charges for—the stamp, money order and registry systems: that the money order and registry systems; that the money order and registry systems; that the patent office is more than self-sustaining on account of receipts for examining and clerical work involved in determining rights for patents, and that a considerable sum is collected by the Library of Congress and the land office for examining any clerical work in connection with land grants and

New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Atlanta, Cincinnati, Chicago, New Orleans, St. Paul, St. Louis, Denyer, Portland (Oregon) and San Francisco. The following extract from the report indicates the work devolving upon the district boards:

"The district boards are charged with the duty of furnishing information to applicants and to public officials concerning civil service matters. They also hold the axaminations of the commission throughout the United States and make certifications for appointments to fill vacancies in the different branches of the service in their respective districts. Examinations are held and certifications for appointment are now made to fill vacancies much more promptly than was the case before the district method was adopted. All certifications for appointment are checked at the commission, where all examination papers are prepared and rated. Although the district plan expedites the business of the commission with the general public and officials outside of For the Ladies.

An incident full of suggestion occurred in an uptown New York thoroughfare the other day. One of a team of horses hitched to the delivery wagon of a big department store slipped on the asphalt, felt, broke his leg, and had to be shot. A few minutes later an Oldsmobile delivery wagon of sixteen-horse power, that is part of the big store's rolling stock, appeared. The load that the team had been drawing was transferred and added to the load already in the motor vehicle. The helpless delivery wagon was then towed to the stable, and the motor vehicle afterward completed its double delivery, finishing in less time than had bee scheduled for the horse-drawn wagon.

Cincinnati started with an offer of $3,800, and as Nealon's father had posters printed and distributed all over San Francisco and telegraphed the news to all the papers in the east offers came along from New York, Boston and Pittsburg, and despite Herrman's offer of $1,000 more than · Association. NEW YORK, November 21.-Sensational developments marked the seventeenth annual meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States, held yesterday at the Grand Union Hotel. Chief among these developments was the expulsion from the national body of the Atlantic Association, at one time one of the union's strongest members, owing to the defiant attitude taken by the Atlantic's board of managers in the case of Frank J. Floyd, alias "Jack" Egan, the present middleweight champion of the

The registration committee of the Atlantic Association, through its chairman, T. L. Gamble, permitted Floyd to assume the name of Egan in a number of competitions, and particularly in the 1905 championships, and particularly in the 1905 championships, held in Boston. After the tournament the Boston championship committee found out the facts and presented them to the notice of the A. A. U. and the Atlantic Association. The latter body refused to take any action toward disciplining the officials who had countenanced the evasion, and so it remained for the present A. A. U. board to take action.

In addition, Floyd has been ordered to return all prizes which he won while boxing under his assumed name.

The championship series of the High School Girls' Basket Ball League will begin tomorrow afternoon, when the teams representing Central and Technical high schools will contest for supremacy. Wilcox, noted as an orator throughout the United

Mr. Wilcox tells the temperance story differently from other speakers on that subject. His descriptions are thrilling word-pictures, illustrated by colored views on a great white screen in the rear of the auditorium.

A pretty feature of the program is the illustrated songs, Those given last night included "Rescue the Perishing" and "Nearer, My God, to Thee." Mr. W. C. Mc-Michael, evangelist of the mission, and other workers assist the lecturer in his efforts to restore men and women to Christianity and good citizenship. The announcement was made that the picture services this evening will, be of especial interest to children. The filmstrated lectures by Mr. Wilcox will be continued every evening this week, and Saturday night there will be other special features.
