RECEPTION BY MINUTEMEN

Sons of Revolution - Takoma Park Citizens-Chevy Chase Music Club -Gonzaga School.

Several striking features marked the George and Martha Washington reception. entertainment and colonial ball given last evening in honor of the birthday of Gen. Washington by the 1st Regiment of Minutemen of Washington. The function was held in the large drill hall of the organization, in the armory building, on L street near 5th street. The auditorium was decorated with the national colors and growing plants, and the scene presented on the floor was a panoramic one-a series of moving pictures in gay colors. The buff and blue uniforms of the Minutemen, the bright unlforms of officers of the National Guard and the regular army and the picturesque costumes of the olden time worn by the ladies gave a pretty coloring to the animated scene. The attendance was a large one and filled the large hall to its capacity.

After the "assembly" had been sounded

by a continental bugler, the drapery of flags on the stage was raised and Capt. A. E. L. Leckie of the Minutemen delivered an address of welcome to the guests. He said the object of the organization of Min-utemen is to keep alive the patriotic spirit of 1776 and to perpetuate the uniform that was worn by Gen. George Washington and his continental soldiers. He introduced Mr. T. V. Powderly as the orator of the evening, and explained that Senator Dick was unable to be present owing to pressure of pub-

Mr. Powderly, after speaking of the patriotic occasion and its lessons, described the confusion that would fill Gen. Washington's mind should be come back to earth at this time and observe the twentieth-century wonders, including the automobile, the telewonders, including the automobile, the tele-phone, the horseless street cars, wireless telegraphy and the telephone. He would be filled with disgust at the cigarette habit, Mr. Powderly added, and should the father of his country go up on Capitol Hill and listen to some of the discussions in the House of Representatives, particularly that on rate legislation, which has been largely on rate legislation, which has been largely inspired because certain members were denied free railroad passes, he would promptly declare: "I'm glad I am dead." There were no railroads and consequently no free passes in Washington's day, the speaker concluded.

A Blare of Trumpets.

A blare of trumpets announced the approach of "Gen. Washington" and of "Martha Washington." The distinguished couple entered the hall followed by Col. Winter, Col. Dimmick, Col. Among the first to be presented to General and Mistress Washington were National Commander Browne and his staff of the Army and Navy Union, including Past Commander-in-Chief Henry. The entry of about forty of the venerable veterans of the Mexi-can war was greeted with applause and cheers. After they had passed around the receiving line the members of the United ell, representing the national body; Past Department Commander Hodgson, Capt. Sheridan Ferree, Capt. J. Ligon King, De-partment Quartermaster Conway and Past National Aid John J. Duffy.

A vaudeville program, arranged and managed by Capt. Ferree and Miss Harriet Hawley, included the army bugle calls by Bugler Lem H. Wiley; tableau, "Betsy Ross," and other representations, by Miss Labert Hawley, and other representations, by Miss Labert Hallets of Party Start Ross," and other representations, by Miss Julia Halstead Chadwick; song, "The Sword of Bunker Hill," by Major Woodman; Mabel Kirby, Minnie Saxton and Edna Dorsey in "Our Early Dutch Settlers;" Irwin Cosgrove in impersonations of George M. Drill Regulations Compared.

The drill regulations used by the contiental army of Gen. Washington, in commanded by Capts. Oden H. Lake and James Mulvey, who used the old Baron von Steuben tactics, and a company of the District loudly applauded. The Minutemen were the ontinental uniform of buff and blue of 1776.

Many of the ladies at the function were 776 costumes, including Janice Meredith is, powdered hair and wigs. Dancing owed the reception and vaudeville proam and was continued until after mid-th. The first number was the stately nuet, which was led by "General and

Sons of the Revolution.

At the annual meeting of the Sons of the Revolution, held at the New Willard yesterday, as reported in The Star, a resolution, that Congress, after making the anniversary of George Washington's birthday a legal holiday in the District, should observe the same, was discussed. The resolution emanated from the fact that both Representatives Mann and Richardson, who were to address the society, were called away at the last moment to attend the session of the House. Representative George Washington Taylor of Alabama made an address eulogistic of Washington, saying that during the nineteenth century there had not been produced a man such as Washington. The speaker added:

"God made America, but George Washington made the United States. Washington was different from most statesmen of today; he never talked much, but went ahead and did things. If he were living to-day, he would not shoot a life insurance president, nor hang a government grafter, but would get after the system that allows such practices to exist."

He then called attention to the fact that he saw before him many of the sons of men who were on opposite sides during the civil war, and, continuing, remarked:

"The civil war was a national necessity. There was peopled on this continent a group of men, bone of the same bone, flesh group of men, bone of the same bone, nesh of the same flesh, yet radically opposed on fundamental questions of government. Providence used a fiery furnace to weld together the north and the south, and today at the grave of Washington, their first beloved, the boys of Grant and Lee reach their hands across the abyse, and the memories of that awful struggle are washed away in a flood of penitential tears."

At the conclusion of the speaking a committee was appointed to confer with Gov. Warfield of Maryland in regard to the Sons of the Revolution taking part in the coming burial services over the remains of

and other officers of the Minutemen and other officers of the Minutemen and After the singing of "Columbia" by the choir, Coloned Kniffin made a brief address upon the life of Washington, his achievements and the general celebration of his natal day. The chorus sang the "Recessional," and then Mrs. E. V. Wilcox read an extract from the oration by George William Curtiss on the "Opening Battle of the Revolution."

In the absence of Col. George A. Pearre, who was expected to deliver the oration of the evening, President Kniffin read "Washington's Farewell Address." This was followed by the singing of "The Star Span-gled Banner" and "Maryland, My Maryand," by the chorus and the audience. President Kniffin closed the exercises by reading the report of the public library committee of the association, outlining a plan for purchasing a site for the construc-tion of a branch library in Takoma Park, and urging the citizens to become stockholders in the Carnegie Library Associa-tion of Takoma Park, D. Gonzaga Grammar School. Gonzaga Grammar School celebrated with patriotic zeal the anniversary of the birth of Washington. Each of the eight grades and the primary and chart classes vied with one another in honoring the natal day of their country's father. "The Star Span-gled Banner" was in evidence everywhere-and patriotic strains filled the large building. The program was rendered in the class room of the eighth grade, in the presence of the rector, Rev. E. X. Fink, S. J., and other guests. In the afternoon varied programs were given by the other grades. Those who participated included: The choral class, Francis O'Conneil, Bernard Nolan, Frederick Gehrman, Daniel Breem, Aloysius Gainey, Francis O'Connell, G. Krogman and William McNicholas. At the conclusion of the program the Rev. Father Fink expressed his apprecia-tion of the day's celebration. He said in part: "This day's program convinces me of the spirit of patriotism that pervades this whole school, both for America's chief statesman and honor and reverence for him who first guided the ship of state. A great lesson, boys, is ours to learn that steadilesson, boys, is ours to learn that steadiness of purpose and that untiring energy shown by Washington in braving all difficulties. Trace the careers of all of our great men and mark their close application to duty.
