PET GETS HER IN TROUBLE.

Woman Breaks Into Apartment to Get Her Cat.

PARIS, November 6, 1911. Mme. Chauvin, a widow, residing in the Rue de Seine, some days ago lost a magnificent Angora cat, of which she was passionately fond. The other day she detected the familiar sounds of his mewing. He was imprisoned in the flat below that occupied sheets together and, fastening them to her bed, lowered herself from her fifthstory window to the floor beneath. In an instant she broke through the window and seized her pet.

But she found that she could not get back to her room and had to shout for nelp. The police broke in the door of the flat and the sequel was Mme. Chauvin's appearance the following morning before a magistrate. She appeared in court with her cat in her arms, and was warned by the magistrate against breaking into other people's flats.
