

The Atlantic fleet in Guantánamo bay. Photograph taken from deck of U. S. S. Delaware. Fighting ships in the background are the Arizona, Pennsylvania, Florida and Utah.

Wide World photo.

Gurnee Munn, jr., and his pet dog; Mrs. Gurnee Munn of Washington and Philadelphia, and Rodman Wanamaker, 2d, on the sands at Palm Beach.

By International Film Service.

Miss Helen Duncan Jameson, a fourteen-year-old New York girl, whose poster won a $500 prize in the international flower show poster contest. Miss Jameson defeated more than one hundred professional artists.

© Underwood & Underwood.

"Sweetbriar" boudoir pajamas, the very newest idea in fashions. The costume gets its name from the color design, and the material is satin panne.

By International Film Service.

"Babe" Ruth, base ball's highest priced attraction, showing Mrs. Ruth how to hold a base ball when pitching. Photo snapped at Los Angeles. Ruth was sold by the Boston Americans to the New York Yankees for a sum considerably in excess of $100,000.

© Underwood & Underwood.

Three hitherto unpublished photographs of Gen. George H. Harries, who was presented with the French decoration of commander of the Legion of Honor for his work as creator of the military port of Brest. At left: Mr. Harries about the time he went to work as a reporter on The Washington Star. Center: A reporter dressed as a tramp and arrested in order that he might investigate conditions in the local workhouse. Right: Wearing the decoration of the Legion of Honor. An article telling of Gen. Harries' work at Brest is contained in another section of today's Star.

"Sapphire," adjudged the best cat at the recent cat show in New York. This beautiful specimen of feline aristocracy has won the same honor five times. He is owned by a Bogota, N. J., woman.

Wide World photo.