Style Notes

Style, like most everything else, goes in cycles. It is said that gowns from the foremost Parisian designers will be influenced by the lines and fashions of 1887.

Silk velvet will be the most fashionable of materials.

There will be two distinct waist lines—the Directoire line, up under the arms, and the other quite low down, as at present.

High, square-crowned hats with practically no brims are the very newest of the Fall collections.

Black and White Pearl necklaces lead in artificial jewelry. These, combined with emeralds, make another of the smartest necklaces. Gunmetal beads are also good.

Fringe is again being used as a trimming—usually very long fringe.

New fashions will be the acme of simplicity. The new tube silhouette is brought out straighter and plainer than ever before.

A scarf attached to the neckline and falling from the left shoulder is seen on many of the latest frocks—or long narrow streamers tied between the shoulders and falling to the hem of the skirt.

And one must be absolutely thin to wear any of the new Fall gowns or coats and look at all well in them. And there's the rub.
