Action on her application is expected to be taken by the Board of Educa-tion at its first meeting of the new scholastic year this afternoon. scholastic year this afternoon.

Being graduated from the Washington Normal School in 1876, Miss Hendley began her teaching career, and was gradually promoted until she reached the position of supervising principal. From the principalship of the Seaton School, she was advanced to the supervising principalship of the sixth division, succeeding Stephen E. Kramer, who became assistant superintendent of schools. Mr. Kramer is now principal of Central High School. of Central High School.

Personnel Changes Up.

The school board also will take action this afternoon on numerous changes in personnel, recommended by Supt. Frank W. Ballou. They include the appointment, transfer and reinstatement of teachers.

If the regular routine of school business does not occupy all the If the regular routine of school business does not occupy all the board's time, several important matters, which have remained on the calender over the Summer, may be discussed. Among them are the proposed new physical training course to be introduced in the high schools at the beginning of the new term on September 22, and the psychological tests conducted under the direction of Miss Jessie La Salle.

FIREPROOF ORDER AWAITS CONGRESS

D. C. Counsel Says Commissioners Lack Authority to Safeguard Hospitals.

Makes Study of Regulation.

Mr. Stephens said today he had expressed that opinion after studying the proposed regulations. He pointed out that ordinarily such regulations would come within the purview of the Commissioners' authority under the general police power, but that Congress, having once legislated on the question of fire escapes and similar safeguards, had taken jurisdiction over the question. diction over the question.

The corporation counsel stated that he regarded the chief recommendations as desirable ones.

Secs Broader Powers Needed.

Incidentally, Mr. Stephens observed that this situation complexities the need for broadening the municipal powers of the Commissioners to handle purely local questions as proposed by members of Congress at the last session. Steps were taken last week by a committee of District officials to draft a general bill extending the authority of the Commissioners in many directions, but it has not yet been put in shape for approval by the city heads.

MISS JENNIE SMITH, EVANGELIST, DEAD

Noted Religious Worker on Railroads Was 82-Had National Acquaintances.

Miss Jennie Smith, one of the pioneer temperance workers in the United States, and known all over the country to thousands of railroad men as the "Railroad Evangelist," died at her home, 319 E street northeast, last night. Miss Smith, who was 82 years of age, devoted her life to temperance work and was one of the oldest evangelists in the country. Her story is one of great faith in the Christian religion. Stricken at the age of 15 with spinal trouble which crippled her, she was confined to a cot until she was 31. During this time she conducted meetings to which she was carried, and in her railroad work she was lifted in her cot from train to train, holding meetings with the train crews during her travels.

Cured of her affliction after many ears of lameness, by "faith and rayer," Miss Smith decided to connue her work and to devote the rest her life to advancing the cause of religion.

of religion.

She was born in Vienna, Ohio, and in that State met Frances Willard and Lady Henry Somerset and began temperance work with them. She traveled all over the United States, held meetings in roundhouses, railroad shops, on trains and in depots, and is said to have converted many thousands to temperance, and rethousands to temperance and religion. Her work was largely carried out on the Baltimore and Ohio, and

Griffs' Shortstop, Roosevelt's Aide, Victims of Thief

Jewelry and cash totaling $215 were taken Labor day from the home of Comdr. Robert L. Gormley, aide to Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, at 3305 Macomb street, by a thief who is believed later to have entered the home of Roger Peckinpaugh, shortstop for the Washington base ball team, and feasted upon two roasted chickens and other delicacies. Report of the robberies was roasted chickens and other delicacies. Report of the robberies was made to the police last night.

The invasion of Peckinpaugh's residence took place, police believe, just about the time the Nationals' star shortstop was helping to ruin the Athletics at American League Park in the ninth inning of the second game of the Labor day exhibitions. The chickens were removed to the basement, with other choice tidbits from the icebox, and devoured there.

Comdr. Gormley missed a $200 solitaire diamond ring and three savings banks, containing $15.

Both families were away at the time.
