Declaring that Congress is controlled by petty politics and asserting that the citizen must depend upon the judiciary of the United States for his future welfare, happiness and right to accumulate and enjoy private property, W. Gwynn-Gardiner, former District Court of Appeals a brief as "friend of the court." in support of the claim that the housing emergency in Washington has passed and there is no longer need for a rent commission.

The court has the question under advisement in the case of Peck vs. Fink, which was submitted last week, but gave Mr. Gardiner leave to file a brief. Mr. Gardiner was counsel for the Chastelton Apartment House Company in the case in which the United States Supreme Court declared last April that if there was only the question of the existence of an emergency the court would be completed to hold that the Ball rent iaw was inoperative
